EDWARD I.

Edward I was in Palestine at the time of his father's death in 1272. The money struck under the new administration until 1279 was of the long-cross type and continued to bear the name of Henry III. These coins are distinguished by Edwardian type of hair and crown. Vide "The Long Cross Coinage of Henry III and Edward I" by L. A. Lawrence: Classes VI and VII. BATTLE OF CULLODEN

16th APRIL 1746

OFFICER'S GOLD MEDAL.

- 47613 Obv. Bust of the Duke of Cumberland. R. Apollo laureate, leaning upon his bow, points to the dragon wounded by his arrow. Leg. ACTUM EST ILLICET PERIT. (The deed is done, it is all over, he has perished.) Ex. PREL. COLOD. AP. XVI. MDCCXLVI. R.R.R. F.D.C. 350 » »

In shagreen case with gold mounts.

★ The above medal is the one mentioned in Tancred as belonging to Colonel (afterwards Lieut.-General) Wren of the 46th Regiment and was in the possession of Captain C.G. Ridout, grand-nephew of General Wren, and passed into the possession of his great-grandson, R. de M. Young of whom it was purchased.

“ In 1744 the French attempted an invasion of England, imagining that the country was ripe for revolt, and that the presence of Prince Charles Edward, eldest son of James II, was all that was required to induce his adherents to come forward in great numbers. The expedition failed and Prince Charles determined to try his fortune the following year by landing on the shores of Scotland. No more favourable time could possibly have been chosen for this undertaking.

George II was in Hanover, and the Duke of Cumberland, with the best part of the army, was in Flanders. On the 16th July, 1745, Charles effected a landing, and was soon joined by a considerable number of Highlanders.

After taking possession of Edinburgh and defeating the Royal troops at Prestonpans, he penetrated as far as Derby. The advancing rebel army caused consternation and alarm in the City of London, as no force was available to check their onward march. Great was their relief when the news arrived that the Highland Army was retreating and making a rapid march back to Scotland. The Duke of Cumberland, who had now returned from Flanders, proceeded at once to Scotland in command of an army hastily collected from all quarters.

Having arrived at Nairn, he marched to Culloden, where he encountered the rebel army and gained a complete victory on the 16th April 1746. " Vide Tancred p. 41.

The 46th Regiment (now the 2nd Battn. Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry) "after many years of home service, went to Flanders in 1742, and fought at Dettingen and at Fontenoy. It afterwards joined the Duke of Cumberland's army in the Highlands."

FIELD OFFICER'S GOLD MEDAL

FOR THE

BATTLE OF NIVE

LIEUT.-COLONEL, 1st REGT. FOOT GUARDS.

So, Soult, having lost the Nivelle, withdrew his army to Anglet, and formed a line of defence with his unfinished fortified camp in front of Bayonne. The battle on the 13th December, which determined the series of conflicts, was practically fought and won by the corps under Sir Rowland Hill, indeed the glory of the day was frankly given him by Wellington, who taking him by the hand, said, "My dear Hill, the day is your own". There could be little doubt about that for on the heights of St. Pierre — with only 16,000 men and 14 guns — he defied and drove off 35,000 French bayonets and 22 guns which assailed his front and the corps (8,000) of General Paris, with the Light Cavalry under Pierre Soult, which threatened his rear. The battle was regarded on both sides as "one of the most sanguinary that the French Army of Spain had fought, and that there was not one where so many deaths took place on the battlefield."

ADVERTISEMENTS

DIES FOR FALSE COINS

In the possession of the Museo Nazionale Romano are more than 1000 dies for making false coins, for the most part produced by the electrotyping process; about a hundred are however hand-engraved in steel. The various classes of coins and medals are represented in approximately the following numbers: Greek coins, 232; Roman 520; Medieval and Modern 294.

The Istituto Italiano di Numismatica, in agreement with the Direction of the Museum, has undertaken the publication of impressions from these dies, with descriptions, in a quarterly volume with about 40 plates. An invitation issued some years ago for subscriptions to defray the cost of this work having met with inadequate response the publication has not proceeded. As, however, it is highly desirable, in the interest of museums and private collectors, that the forgeries from these dies should be exposed, the invitation is now renewed. Promises to subscribe at the rate of £1.10s. sterling or 6 dollars will be received by Dr. G.F. Hill, British Museum, London, W.C. or Messrs. Spink and Son, Ltd., 17 Piccadilly, London, W. Payment should not be actually made until notice is received that the work is ready for distribution.

EDITORIAL.

As the present number of the Numismatic Circular marks the commencement of its thirty-fourth year of existence, a few remarks on the success which has attended its publication, may not be deemed inopportune. From the inception of the paper, in the year 1893 the steady aim of the proprietors has been to compile a list of sufficient numismatic merit to attract students of the subject, collectors generally, with an added priced catalogue of number of coins and medals embracing practically both Ancient and Modern.

These lists, compiled with very great care, have been the means of bringing the coins, so to speak, to the actual collector, with the result of greatly increasing the number of zealous amateur counted by thousands where there were a few years ago hundreds, of whom many were vainly seeking really fine numismatic specimens at moderate prices. During the present year we hope to present some new features in the Numismatic Circular embracing

(a) Numismatic Notes of interest on special coins or medals, illustrating particular happenings in the coin-world. Contributions to this section will be greatly welcomed, but should not exceed 100 words.

(b) Unedited Coins. Information regarding such will be most welcome, and where the piece is of importance an illustration will be supplied gratis.

(c) Numismatic Queries. In this section we shall be glad to answer questions on any numismatic subject and whenever possible to give an answer in these columns.

THE COINS OF THE DUTCH EAST INDIES.

An Introduction to the Study of the Series

PREFACE.

The Dutch, now-a-days, usually speak of their great possessions in the Far East (those huge Islands like Sumatra and Java, Celebes and the Moluccas, and those almost countless lesser units of the Malay Archipelago) as INDIA ; and of that part of the Malay Peninsula and those adjacent islets which are now under British control as MALACCA : whereas, to the British, INDIA is, of course, the Peninsula stretching from Cape Comorin to the Himalayas ; MALACCA, the little old-world town and territory on the west coast of the Malay Peninsula. The British Straits Settlements and Federated and Unfederated Malay States under British control and protection are by the British in these times called MALAYA or, simply, MALAY ; whilst the possessions of Holland in the Malay Archipelago are generally referred to as the DUTCH EAST INDIES NETHERLANDS INDIES. Although it is only with the coinage of the thus designated Dutch East Indies that this book deals, it may, perhaps, be desirable to mention that, at one time, the Dutch controlled Ceylon and had considerable Settlements in what is now British India, in addition to possessing the city of Malacca, then, for centuries earlier, an important trade entrepôt : almost all these places, however, eventually passed into British hands. But for, or in Ceylon, where they were established from about 1638 until 1796, the Dutch struck a considerable quantity of coinage, some of which was specially minted and distinguished for particular localities such as Colombo, Galle, Jaffna and Comalee. For or in India, also, they coined monies for some settlements which held control or had built their trade fortresses, such as Pulicat (1615 to 1784, Pondicherry) and Cochin (1663 to 1795).

For Macca, which numismatically falls within the territorial scope of the present work, no special coins were struck by the Dutch, its currency being, doubtless, similar to that of Java on the one side and Ceylon on the other. With these Dutch coins of Ceylon and India (which form a well marked separate series) this volume has no concern and does not deal.

The present observations, which do not pretend to be exhaustive, are the outcome of several years' study by the writer during which he has been constantly assisted by the well-known Numismatist of Batavia, Java, Mr. J.P. Moquette, whose numerous and important publications deal, very elaborately, with the major part of the series under consideration. The writer has also received much valuable help and numerous casts of rare specimens from Mr. J. Allan of the Department of Coins and Medals of the British Museum and from Mr. A.O. Van Kerkwijk, the Director of the Royal Coin Cabinet at The Hague. He has, in addition, been extremely fortunate in obtaining the co-operation of Mr. J. Schulman, of Amsterdam, who has been so good as to revise and amend the whole of the text and whose experience and knowledge in dealing with all classes of Dutch coinage are, without doubt, unrivalled.

To these experts, and to the many other gentlemen who have so freely rendered their aid in the preparation of this small contribution to numismatic literature, the writer wishes to extend his most sincere and cordial thanks for their unreserved assistance.

He would be most grateful for any additional information, corrections or suggestions which should kindly be sent to him at the address given below.

John A. Bucknill,

Patna, India.

INTRODUCTION.

The coinage which has been issued for the special use of the Dutch East Indies or, as they are often designated, the Netherlands Indies—that vast Empire in the Far East which, save for a very brief interval, has, with some few exceptions, been, for over three centuries, more or less under the control of the Dutch—presents, for a variety of reasons, peculiarly interesting features to the numismatist whether he be a student or a mere collector.

In the first place, the long series, stretching back to the year 1601, displays, chronologically, somewhat parallel, but entirely different, issues minted, for Oriental use, either in the Netherlands or in Java and unlike each other not only in design but even, often, in denomination.

Secondly, apart from this main division, the whole series can very conveniently be partitioned into several natural groups determined by political changes or the accession of a new monarch.

The following rough table indicates at a glance these simple compartments :—

ISSUING AUTHORITY.	PERIOD.	A. — MINTED IN EAST INDIES.	B. — MINTED IN NETHERLANDS.
1. (A) Compagnie van Verre te Amsterdam.	1594-1602	Nil.	R. 8, 4, 2, 1, $\frac{1}{2}$, $\frac{1}{4}$ Reals.
(B) Compagnie van Verre te Middelburg.	1597-1602	Nil.	R. 8 Reals.
(Struck by the Company in Java.)
2. (A) Compagnie van Verre te Amsterdam.	1602-1798	A. Ducats; Double Ducats; Single (or "Quarter") Double (or "Half") and Quadruple (or "Whole") Rupees. R. 48, 24, 12 Stivers; Rupees.	See the European Provincial issues struck for the Company detailed immediately below.

coins described are of great rarity, references have been made to the provenance and present location of individual specimens; but such references must not necessarily be regarded as indicating the only examples known to be in existence. Occasionally records of the prices of specimens realized at recent auction sales or in dealers' sale catalogues have been added as a guide to values.

HISTORICAL OBSERVATIONS AND GENERAL AND DESCRIPTIVE ACCOUNTS OF THE COINAGE.

A) COMPAGNIE VAN VERRE TE AMSTERDAM.
THE DISTANT COMPANY OF AMSTERDAM (1594-1602).

B) COMPAGNIE VAN VERRE TE MIDDELBURG.
THE DISTANT COMPANY OF MIDDELBURG (1597-1602).

European domination in the Far East began with the Portuguese and remained their monopoly for about a century. Its commencement is always associated with the great Alfonso d'Albuquerque who was born in 1453 and was connected by illegitimate descent with the Royal family of Portugal. His first voyage to the East was in 1503 during which he established the King of Cochin in India securely on his throne and, in return for this service, obtained permission to build a fort at that place.

His second voyage was in 1506; he captured the Island of Ormuz in the Persian Gulf — then one of the chief centres of commerce in the East — in 1507; took Goa in 1510 and Malacca on the western side of the Malay Peninsula, in 1511. He died at sea in 1515. Ormuz remained in Portuguese hands till 1622; Goa is so still; Malacca was wrested from them by the Dutch in 1641.

Before the union between Portugal and Spain, resulting from the conquest of the former by the latter in 1580-81, the Dutch had been the chief carriers from Lisbon to northern Europe of merchandise brought by the Portuguese from the East. When, however, they were shut out by the Spanish King, Philip II, from this transport trade, they were driven to sail to the East themselves in order to make good their lost commerce.

Unsuccessful attempts were made to find a road to the East along the north of Europe and Asia; a route which might have been free from this Spanish interference. It was only when these efforts failed that the Dutch decided to intrude upon the already well-known track by the Cape of Good Hope and to fight their way to the far-famed Spice Islands of the Malay Archipelago.

A Dutchman, named Jan Huyghen Van Linschoten, had visited Goa in 1583 with the Portuguese-India fleet and, aided by an itinerary drawn up by him, the first expedition, commanded by one Cornelius Houtman, sailed from Holland in 1595. The voyage was, on the whole, a success; a treaty was made with the Sultan of Bantam in Java and the return of the voyagers in 1597 with valuable cargo was the signal for an outburst of commercial adventure.

Numerous Companies were formed which described themselves as "van Ferne" or "van Verre", i. e. of the Far or Distant (lands), and by 1602, from sixty to seventy Dutch vessels had sailed to Hindustan and the East Indies. Of these early "Overseas" associations only two are known to have issued coinage; these were the Compagnie van Verre te Amsterdam and the Compagnie van Verre te Middelburg.

The Spanish Silver Peso of Eight Reals ("pieces of eight" or "dollar" in popular English parlance) was the coin of the European with which the indigenous inhabitants of these Oriental places were acquainted and to which they were accustomed. It was with the object of competing with these Spanish Dollars that these two Dutch companies contemplated issuing similar coinage. The Amsterdam Company was authorized to strike such coins by a Resolution of the Council of the Province of Holland dated March 1st, 1601 and the Middelburg Company obtained a similar permission from the Council of the Province of Zeeland in December of the same year.

The Amsterdam Company issued a series of six silver pieces consisting of 8, 4, 2, 1, $\frac{1}{2}$ and $\frac{1}{4}$ Reals: the first four of these are all dated 1601; the last two, though no doubt produced simultaneously, bear no date. The Middelburg Company struck an 8 Real piece only which is dated 1602. All these seven coins are of beautiful workmanship and of the highest rarity. They may be described as follows:—

1. (A). Compagnie van verre te Amsterdam.
(The Distant Company of Amsterdam.)

1594-1602.

Silver.

Struck at Dordrecht in the Province of Holland at the establishment of Jacob Jansz junior. Plain edge.

1. 1601. Eight Reals (or Dollar; Piece of Eight). The Real was of the same value as a "Schelling" which was equivalent to six Stivers or forty-eight Doits. D. 41. W. 27.20 (S. and H.); 27.06 (G.).

Obv. A crowned shield bearing thereon a lion rampant, to left. This device constituted the crest or escutcheon of the Province of Holland. Outside the shield and on each side of it appear the figures "1111" placed horizontally: each figure denotes one Real.

Legend around, "INSIGNIA. HOLLANDIAE. 1601".

Rev. Two lions supporting an imperially crowned shield on which appear three crossed billets placed one above the other. This device constituted the Arms of the City of Amsterdam. At the top a rosette which was the Mint-mark of the town of Dordrecht.

Legend around, "ET. CIVITATIS. AMSTELREDAMENSIS". The whole legend may be translated "The Arms of Holland and of the City of Amsterdam".

(V. p. 199 and Pl. 199, f. 1; N. & C. p. 97 and Pl. I, f. 1; G. p. 42 and Pl. 7, No. 716.)

Mr. Schulman, at page 41 of the Grogan Sale Catalogue aptly points out that this Eight Real piece was a true "Trade Dollar" and with the exception of the "Portcullis" Crown coined in 1600 by Queen Elizabeth of England, was the earliest "Piastre de Commerce" struck specially by a European nation for use in its Eastern mercantile adventures: they all, however, failed to compete successfully with the Spanish and Hispano-American Dollars which, coined in enormous numbers, were, at the end of the sixteenth century and indeed until well into the nineteenth, the accepted currency in all the Oriental trading centres controlled or frequented by Europeans.

Thirdly, in addition to containing, as the table shows, gold, silver, bronze and pewter issues, many of the coins constitute beautiful examples of the engraver's art: the silver pieces of the Dutch European Provincial Mints are particularly handsome. There are many gold, silver and base-metal patterns and proofs; some of the utmost rarity.

Fourthly, the series provides ample scope for study and amusement: there are legends in Latin, Dutch, Arabic (or Malay-Arabic), Persian and Javanese; an immense number of major and minor variations in dies; and a whole host of mint-marks which in themselves form an attractive hobby and which sometimes alone distinguish between a very rare and a very common type.

Fifthly, there is a reasonably adequate literature dealing with the subject; but, as it is mostly in Dutch, it offers serious difficulties to those who do not read that language; in addition to this, some of these works (a list of which is given in the Bibliography) are expensive or out of print and not easily procurable.

Lastly (and this is a matter which in these costly days is of no small moment), this series of coins has never hitherto been fashionable amongst collectors; and, as a result of their being in no great demand, quite a pleasing and representative collection can at present be made with little outlay.

The collecting and study of the Colonial coinage of Foreign States has, as yet, had but few votaries in Great Britain: but that of her own Overseas Possessions has, in the last fifty years, attracted, not unnaturally, much greater attention; and, in consequence of this growing interest, the coins struck under the orders of Sir Stamford Raffles in Java, during the short period (1811-16) when that Island was in British hands, have been far more generally sought after by British collectors than have other issues of the Dutch East Indian Series and are of considerably greater value in the market than others of comparatively similar actual rarity. It must, however, be admitted that in Holland there have been and are collectors of the Colonial coinage of the Netherlands and that in that Country it commands a ready sale; but, although some of the early Dutch East Indian issues (such as the productions of the ancient Amsterdam and Middelburg Corporations, the gold and early silver of the United Dutch East India Company, the gold of the Batavian Republic, the silver ducatoons of the Dutch Provincial mints and other special coins) are of extreme or of considerable rarity, a very large number of handsome and curious specimens of the series can still be obtained without much difficulty.

It should always be borne in mind that, throughout the whole period under consideration and up to the present day, there have been current in the Dutch East Indies, in addition to the coinage minted specially for that place, coins struck in the Netherlands either primarily for circulation in the Mother-Country or for common use both there and in her Eastern Possessions.

It must further be observed that, until about the middle of the nineteenth century, there never was a sufficiency of currency (whether minted in the Netherlands or in the Dutch East Indies) to meet the local requirements of trade and social use. The Mints in Java (there were only two; namely at Batavia and Sourabaya) were started with the direct object of increasing the quantity of coinage in circulation; but they never adequately met the ever growing need; and the history of the currency of the Netherlands Indies shows that it was always a very incomplete affair and discloses a picture of expedients and a medley of coins of many countries being utilized side by side with those of the Ruling Power.

As a rule, the coins of Dutch European origin circulated in the Malay Archipelago at a value higher than that which they enjoyed in the Netherlands.

It may here also be conveniently mentioned that, at various times, for such reasons as shortage of local currency, the desire to impress a special enhanced value in order to prevent the disappearance from circulation of coins of high intrinsic worth or the wish in the presence of much counterfeit coinage to stamp on genuine pieces some official mark of approval, coins, not only of Dutch European character but also of non-Dutch origin, were counter-marked in Java in a variety of fashions. These curious productions will be referred to in the text in their chronological order. At the present day the finest Public Collections are, probably in the order of merit as given, to be found at the Batavian Museum, Java; the Royal Coin Cabinet at the Hague; the Royal Mint Collection at Utrecht and The Suasso Museum, Amsterdam. The British Museum, although possessing a number of valuable specimens of the series, is not very strongly representative. Of Private Collections, that of the late Mr. J. Schulman of Amsterdam is perhaps the finest.

In all cases where such details are thought to be of interest and have been ascertainable, diameters (in millimetres) and weights (in grammes) have been given. In some cases also in which the

All the above six coins are, although well known, very rare and are seldom seen or come into the market. There were, however, complete sets sold at the auctions of the famous Fonrobert (Lots 354-359. Berlin, 1878), Stephanik (Lots 6067-6072. Amsterdam, 1904) and Grogan Collections; at the last named sale the set realized (Lots 716-721. Amsterdam, 1914) 200 florins, i.e. £16 13 s. 4 d.; it went to London and in 1919 was sold by prominent dealers for £25.

There are complete sets now at the British Museum (made up from examples in the Royal Collection of King George III of England and the well-known Bankes Cabinet); in the Royal Mint Collection at Utrecht; in the Cabinet of the late Mr. J. Schulman at Amsterdam; and in the Royal Coin Cabinet at The Hague; the illustrations here are of the last named set having been kindly provided by Mr. A.O. van Kerkwijk the Director of that Institution.

A very fine specimen of the Eight Real Piece, from the Wijnmalen Collection at Bussum, Holland, formed Lot 262 at Mr. Schulman's sale at Amsterdam in July 1922 and realized 115 florins (£9 11 s. 8 d.); it was figured on Plate 8 of the Catalogue and is now in the writer's Cabinet. An example of the Four Real Piece formed Lot 29 of the Collection of the Chevalier P.O.H. Gevaerts Van Simons-haven, Chamberlain to Her Majesty The Queen of Holland, which was sold at Amsterdam in 1903.

The above notes are, of course, not to be taken as attempting to give a complete list of the known specimens of these coins but are merely printed as being of casual interest.

1. (B). Compagnie van verre te Middelburg.
(The Distant Company of Middelburg.)

1597-1602.

Silver.

Struck at Middelburg in the Province of Zeeland at the establishment of Melchior Wijntges. Plain edge.

7. 1602. Eight Reals (or Dollar; Piece of Eight). D. 42. W. 27.5 (H.).

Obv. A shield, surrounded by ornamental scroll-work, on which are emblazoned numerous crests of the Nobility and Cities of the Province of Zeeland which had votes in the Council of the Province.

Legend around, "MONE(TA).ARG(ENTEA).(ORD)-INIS).ZEELANDIAE." i.e. "Silver coin of the Council of Zeeland". At the top is a representation of a small "Tower" which was the mint-mark of Middelburg.

Rev. A crowned shield bearing thereon a demi-lion, rampant, rising from the uppermost of three wavy bars which represent the sea. This device constituted the crest or escutcheon of the Province of Zeeland.

On the left of the shield, the figure "8" and on the right the letter "R" (i.e. Reals).

Legend around, "LUCTOR.ET.EMERGO" (i.e. I strive and rise); this was the motto of the Province of Zeeland. Date, "1602", at top.

This is a well known piece but of the utmost rarity. It is described and figured by Netscher and Van der Chijs (p. 98 and Pl. I, f. 7); it is also mentioned and figured by Verkade (p. 200, and Pl. 200, f. 1); it is referred to in the Grogan sale Catalogue (p. 41).

There was a specimen in the Fonrobert Collection (Lot 360); another example formed Lot 730 of the Collection of the Chevalier P.O.H. Gevaerts van Simons-haven which was sold at Amsterdam by Mr. J. Schulman in 1903; it was figured on Plate 4 of the Catalogue and was purchased for 305 florins (£25 8 s. 4 d.) for the Royal Coin Cabinet at The Hague where it now is; it is reproduced below through the courtesy of the Director. There was in the famous Stephanik Collection a specimen (Lot 6073) which was, at its sale in 1904 at Amsterdam, acquired for the Batavian Museum.

From the coin now in the Royal Coin Cabinet at The Hague.

2. Vereenigde Oost-Indische Compagnie.
The (Dutch) United East India Company.

1602-1799.

The life of these numerous earliest Trading Companies was very short: far from their masters — and rivals amongst themselves — they could neither be controlled nor protected by their parent State; they fought each other as well as the Portuguese and the indigenous inhabitants; and their competition inter se militated against their commercial success. To prevent these troubles, the Netherlands States-General (i.e. Parliament) decided to combine all these conflicting elements into one officially recognized Corporation possessing definite authority to discharge the functions of a Government, to carry on the war against Spain and Portugal and to regulate commerce in these remote localities. As a result of this determination there came into existence, on March 20th 1602, that immensely powerful organization, The Oost-Indische Maatschappij, or, as it is more often known, The Vereenigde Oost-Indische Compagnie (The United East India Company); with a capital of about 6,500,000 florins in shares of 3,000 florins each.

The independence of the different States which then constituted the United Netherlands was recognized by the creation of Local Boards at Amsterdam, Delft, Rotterdam, Hoorn, Enkhuizen and in Zeeland. A general directorate of sixty persons was chosen by the Local Boards; but the real governing body was the "Collegium" (or Board of Control) of seventeen members. The Company was granted a "Charter" for twenty one years which conferred on it most extensive powers. It was endowed with a monopoly of all trade with the East Indies and was authorized to maintain armed forces at sea and on land, to erect forts and plant colonies, to make war and peace, to arrange treaties in the name of the Stadtholder and to coin money. It paid a rent to the United Netherlands. It had full administrative, judicial and legislative authority over the whole of its huge sphere of operations which extended westward from the Straits of Magellan to the Cape of Good Hope.

By the year 1619, it had founded a capital in Java — designated as Batavia — on the ruins of the native town of Jacatra. It expelled the Portuguese from Ceylon between 1638 and 1653 and from Malacca in 1641. It established its famous Colony at Cape Town in 1652, and instituted its power in Sumatra by treaties with indigenous rulers in that Island in 1667. For about one hundred years its fortunes were most favourable; and in 1669, at the summit of its prosperity, it maintained one hundred and fifty trading ships, fifty ships of war, and ten thousand soldiers and paid a dividend of forty per cent. But its claim to an exclusive monopoly of all commerce within its immense area of business brought it into conflict with the British and with France; and, even in the last years of the seventeenth century, its prosperity showed some signs of waning. But, though gradually driven from India and Ceylon, the Company continued to extend and strengthen its hold on the great Islands of the Malay Archipelago whilst its rivals had their hands full with the trade and affairs of India; and the vast possessions which constitute now the Dutch East Indies indicate very forcibly the strength of the old V.O.C's tenure.

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTICES OF MEDALLISTS

Coin, Gem, and Seal Engravers, Ancient and Modern, with References to their Works.

Most of the previous articles have been revised and republished in the "Biographical Dictionary of Medallists". The references to that work in these supplementary articles will be indicated by the letters "B.D.M.", together with the number of the volume and its page.

Undated. Johann Walter, burgomaster and sculptor in Dresden.
Stift Herzogenburg.

- Rosina Khober (Kundmann, Pl. XXXIII, 101).
- Hans von Diskau and Maria von Witzleben. Gotha.
- Sibylla Ulrichs (Kundmann, XXXIII, 102).
- Matthias Praun. R. Crucifix in landscape. Berlin.
- Georg Bintzbach. Stift Herzogenburg.
- Hans Schmid, surnamed Flandereisen. Berlin.
- Heinrich von Bobenhausen. Attribution to T. Wolff uncertain. Vienna. London.

Amongst the Saxon medals, in exclusion of the known Series, the following, recorded by Tentzel, but not known from originals, may belong to Tobias Wolff:—

Undated. Christian II.; badge (Tentzel, 24, I).

1600. Christian II., John George and Augustus (Tentzel, 24, II-IV).

- Augustus and Christian (Tentzel, 14, II; cf. 17, I-III).
- Christian I and Sophia (Tentzel, 17, V; cat. Erbstein, I, 605, model in stone of the obv. Gotha).

In the art of Tob. Wolff are also:

- Christian I. and Sophia (Tentzel, 18, II; Erbstein cat., I, 313).

Undated. Adam Wenceslaus of Silesia-Teschen (obv. by T. Wolff).

- Joachim Ernest of Anhalt, signed. Dresden; also as a model in stone. Eisenach.
- Christian IV. of Denmark (Trésor Num., XXXII, 12).
- Unknown. Bearded bust, bare-headed, r. Stone. Paris (Louvre).
- Unknown Couple. Without inscription. Unfinished. London (Salting Collection).

Although apparently modelled in wax, the following show T. Wolff's low relief work.

Undated. Fabianus Gotzmann. Munich.

In the low relief of the Wolff's facing medals, but rougher:

1602. Sebastian Praetorius. Berlin.

As an imitation of Wolff's facing half-length portraits is:

G.V. Sel.

1632. Hans Georg Whese. Dresden.

Dr Habich does not enumerate in Deutsche Medailleure, p. 229, ie series of German Rulers and of the Popes, which T. Wolff probably produced in the nineties of the sixteenth century, and directs the reader to the complete material in the Dresden Coin cabinet; cf. also Erbstein Cat., I.

I have given a list of the principal in my former article, Vol. VI, 533 and p. 534.

In close connection with T. Wolff's work, if not by the artist himself, is the medal of G. v. Sel, 1569 (illustrated).

Similar in style, is the medal dated 1536, but which must be much later (probably of the sixties) of Abbot Hilarius Wagner of Chemnitz. Dresden (illustrated).

Abbot Hilarius Wagner of Chemnitz.

A medal of Andreas Kramer, canonicus in Nordhausen, 1567, has an analogous representation of the arms on rev. between two branches.

The three last mentioned medals, which are described under the title of Meister das Hilarius (q.v.) offer the characteristics of T. Wolff's work and are not unlikely to be by the Master himself.

Cf. Dr G. Habich, Die deutschen Medailleure, pp. 221-229, from which the above notes are freely translated.

WOLFF, IOHAN HENDRIK (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 528). Additional medals: Marriage of King Christian VII of Denmark with Caroline Mathilde, daughter of Frederick Louis, Prince of Wales, 1766 (signed: I. H. WOLFF. F.).

WOLFFGANG, I. V. (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 536). This Engraver appears to have signed also I. L. V. W. F. (Cosmo III.; R. View of Livorno) and L. V. W. F. (Cosmo III.; R. View of Florence).

WONLICH, JAKOB (Swiss). Mint-master at Basle, circ. 1566-1574. He was a native of Lucerne.

WOODHOUSE, JOHN (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 546). Consult also Strickland, A Dictionary of Irish Artists, II, pp. 554-559, and for WILLIAM WOODHOUSE (pp. 559-562).

WOODVILLE, R. CATON (Brit.). Designed the reverse of the Matabeleland War Medal dated 1893.

WOODYEAR (Brit.). Wax Modeller; exhibited at the Free Society in 1768.

WOOLNER, THOMAS (Brit.). Sculptor and Poet (1825-1892); pupil of William Behnes; studied at the Royal Academy, 1842; made the acquaintance of Rossetti and became one of the original 'pre-Raphaelite Brethren', 1847. He contributed poems to 'The Germ'; met with small success and went to Australian goldfields, his departure inspiring Madox Brown's picture 'The Last of England', 1852; practised painting in Melbourne and Sydney till he returned to England, 1854. In 1857 he executed bust of Tennyson; became R.A., 1874, and Professor of Sculpture, 1877-79; executed portrait-sculptures of the most eminent men of his day, his statue of John Stuart Mill, on the Thames Embankment, London, being among the most notable of his works (Lee, Dict. Nat. Biog., LXII, 434).

Woolner's biography by his daughter, Miss Amy Woolner, enumerates a number of Portrait Medallions and Medals by this artist: —

THE COINAGE OF SAINT-LO

HENRY V OF ENGLAND.

The conquest of the Cotentin by the English was extremely rapid. Hambye castle, occupied on 10th March 1418 (n.st.) was the first to fall; two days later, as we have seen, it was St. Lô's turn; on the 16th, the three fortresses of Coutances, le Hommet and Carentan; on the 25th, Saint-Sauveur le Vicomte, and on the 27th, Pont d'Ouve. On 29th September, the last French stronghold in the Cotentin, Cherbourg, was also obliged to capitulate.

Henry V found so little resistance to his power, that on 12th April 1418, a Royal edict, dated from Bayeux, granted general amnesty to all Normans who should submit before 1st June. In reality, those who submitted were treated with consideration.

After the capture of Rouen, 19th January 1419 (n.st.), Mont Saint-Michel was alone, of the whole of Normandy, remaining in the power of the French¹. The English troops were unable to obtain possession of it during the course of the foreign domination, and this allowed the future Charles VII to create there, at the end of 1420, a Mint which he revived in 1426².

Henry V completely reorganized the government and administration of Normandy; but it seems strange that he should have waited two years before reestablishing the Mint of the Cotentin.

Not before 20th January 1420 (n.st.), at the time of his first visit to "his good town of Saint-Lô", did Henry V appear to trouble about the situation. By letters patent of that day, he appointed four new "monnoyers à leurs vies seullement à notre monnoye dudit lieu"³, and ascertaining that Saint-Lô had at the time neither wardens — which, we shall see, was incorrect — nor master, nor prevost, he commanded the wardens of the Mint of Rouen to receive the oath of the new moneyers.

In reality the restoration of the Mint dates from 12th April 1420 (n. st.). On that day, letters patent, given at Rouen, appointed Colin Boutebost as warden, Jehan du Chou, die-cutter, and Pierre Pélagin, assayer.

Henry V was appointing only one warden, because, contrary to what had been stated in the previous January, there was still another in office. He was Nicolas Varroc, who had been warden in 1410⁴, and whom we still find in office in 1427⁵. As to Colin Boutebost, he was evidently replacing Guillaume Laillier, whose office, as we have noted, was vacant at the time of the capture of Saint-Lô.

On 18th April, fresh letters, also given "à nostre chastel de Rouen" and addressed "aux gardes de la monnoye de Saint-Lô" apprised the latter that the Mint had been farmed out to a former master of the Rouen mint, Jehan Marcel⁶, for one year "à prendre et à commencer icelui an après le mois de sa première délivrance qui sont XIII mois".

On account of the scarcity of workmen and moneyers at Saint-Lô, the King of England authorized the wardens to recruit such throughout Normandy, "even at Rouen, as long as the service of the mint did not suffer".

He ordered the coining of gros of 20 deniers tournois — also commonly called Florettes, like those of Charles VI and the Dauphin — as prescribed by the ordinance of the previous 12th January, on the foot 96⁷, with the addition as mintmark of a dot under the second letter of both legends⁸.

The gros of the 3rd issue, where the crown surmounting the three French lis is supported by two English leopards (Hoffmann, 7) has never yet been mentioned for Saint-Lô; Saulcy did not know it, neither the distinguished English numismatist, Mr. Lionel M. Hewlett⁹. Given the late date at which the Saint-Lô mint was opened, and noting also the fact that the treaty of Troyes, suppressing on Henry's currency the title of king of France, was signed on 21st May, one might question whether Saint-Lô did coin this gros; on the other hand, Henry V not having prescribed before 16th June 1420 the engraving on his coins of his new title of Heir of France, Jehan Marcel should nevertheless have had time to act upon the orders given to him on 18th April.

The question is now solved through our recent discovery of a specimen of this Florette of Saint-Lô, with a plain dot below the second letter of the legends.

The treaty of Troyes, which bestowed upon Henry V the new title of Heir of France delivered up also to him the administration of the remainder of the kingdom still loyal to Charles VI.

Now, the English king, master of Normandy alone, had observed, as much as lay in his power, a sound monetary policy. He waited till 12th January 1420 (n. st.) to lower his currency from the foot 60 to the foot 96, whereas Charles VI had adopted in Paris, from 7th March 1419 (n. st.) this foot 96 which, on the following 2nd July, was extended to the five other mints which remained subject to him¹⁰, and a few days later, on 12th July, to that of Jean sans Peur, of Dijon.

At the time of the signature of the treaty of Troyes, the mints of Rouen and Saint-Lô were still coining on the foot 96, whereas, from the preceding 6th May, all the mints of Charles VI, that of Paris included, coined on the foot 160 (7th and last issue of Royal florettes). Towards the end of that same month of May 1420, a few days after the treaty of Troyes, the Dauphin, who was pursuing a systematic policy of debasement, likewise adopted the foot 160 (10th issue of the Dauphin); then on June 3, the Burgundian mint of Dijon — not without some hesitation, we think, as usually a decision was taken quicker — followed the example of the mints of Charles VI.

Henry V was obliged to recognize that he could not stand against the competition of base currency, and that it was necessary for him to unify the coinage of his duchy of Normandy with that of the kingdom, the heir of which he proclaimed himself to be. On 16th June 1420, by letters given at Bray-sur-Seine, he lowered in his turn the silver currency, and ordered to be struck new gros (4th issue) with the legend H : REX ANGLIE Z HERES FRANCIE (Hoffmann, 8). No other gold or silver currency was prescribed.

For a short period from 16th June the florettes of Henry V, Charles VI, the Duke of Burgundy, and the Dauphin, found themselves on the same foot 160; but this did not last long, as, from the month of August, the Dauphin resorted to further debasements¹¹.

On the contrary the florette of Henry V remained stable, and was coined, at Saint-Lô as well as at Rouen, for nearly eleven months, until 6th May 1421. This florette of low standard is common for Rouen, but that of Saint-Lô, which must have been struck in large numbers, remains to be found.

In returning to his policy of currency debasement, the Dauphin was widening every day further the gap which separated that part of France under his rule from that which had remained loyal to Charles VI. No one has yet, it seems to us pointed out that Henry V followed momentarily in Normandy, an analogous policy, but by different means.

After the treaty of Troyes, the royalty of Charles VI had become but a shadow, as Henry V, in the capacity of Regent, was managing everything. It was he, assisted by the Duke of Exeter and the Duke of Burgundy, Philip the Good, who decided, on 10th August 1420, the general lease of the mints of Charles VI and a creation of a new mint at Arras; it was he also, who ordered, on the following 13th October, an issue of black money on the foot of 144; and it is he still who, on 19th December of the same year, raised the silver currency of Charles VI to the foot of 30, and caused to be struck new écus d'or fin (8th issue). This last ordinance, which places in the mouth of Charles VI that "lad faible mon^e a esté et est moult préjudiciable à notre peuple et à toute la chose publique de notred Roy^{me}", emanates like the preceding, from "l'avis et délibération de notre très cher et très amé filz le Roy d'Angl^e, héritier et régent de France, et de notre très cher et très amé filz le Duc de Bourg^{ne}". One might have therefore expected a rise in the currency in the possessions of these two powerful lords at the same time as in that strip of France over which Charles VI was still nominal ruler.

But such is not the case. The minting of Florettes, forbidden by the ordinance of 19th December 1420, continued at the mint of Dijon-Chalon until 16th October 1421, and Henry V himself went on with the coining of base Florettes for more than four months. As a result, if the good money of Charles VI was in danger of being collected and remelted by the Dauphin, which was his game, the same was the case in Burgundy, and even more so, in Normandy.

Unless Henry V's purpose was personal profit at the expense of his future subjects in France, we must confess we cannot understand his monetary policy, a policy which was certainly injurious to the interests of his Norman subjects, as, in January 1421 (n. st.), the States of Normandy, gathered at Rouen, requested and obtained from Henry V that he should bind himself to forge "certainne bonne monnoye au poids et loy desclairé et exprimé en la présence desdis trois estats"¹².

Notwithstanding this promise, it was not before 6th May 1421¹³

11. He placed his florettes on the foot 180 (11th issue), later, at the end of the following October, on the foot 200, reaching the foot 216 in mid-December.

13. In consequence of a lapsus, the editor of the last three volumes of Saulcy's Documents has ascribed this ordinance to the wrong date of 6th May 1420 instead of the correct date, 6th May 1421, given by Lecoindre-Dupont in Revue numis-

6. Jehan Marcel was Mint-master at Rouen on 7th November 1417.

7. This florette of Henry V of 12th January 1420 (n. st.) (3rd issue) corresponded to that coined in the mints of Charles VI from 2nd July 1419 (5th issue of Royal florettes), and at the Burgundian mint of Dijon; notwithstanding their varied provenance, all three were on the foot 96. Such was not the case of the Florettes of the Dauphin; from the end of August 1419 they had reached the foot 100 (7th issue for the Dauphin), and from 12th October 1419 (date of lease of Marot de Betons) they were on the foot 120 (9th issue for the Dauphin).

8. The Florette of 12th January 1420 (n. st.) did not include any divisions, but it is well to note that the letters patent of 18th April make no mention of the small écu d'or prescribed on 12th January instead of the mouton.

that an ordinance given at Rouen prescribed the issue of new currency similar to that of Charles VI : a Denier d'or (not yet recovered) as the counterpart of the écu à la couronne, and the gros au léopard (Hoffmann, 5), to take the place of the French Gros heaumé¹⁴.

But there is more. Whilst this ordinance of 6th May 1421 prescribed the issue of the Gros au léopard, the wardens of both mints of Rouen and Saint-Lô were forbidden to put the coins in circulation before the order should be given, and the Mint workmen were even to be paid with other currency, "tous yceulx deniers, après ce que vous les aurez delivrez, sans aucune seule piece estre mise, recevez devers vous et fectes deffense à tous les ouvriers et monnoyers que ils ne soient si hardiz de en emporter une seule pièce pour cause de leur braissage, ne aultrement, mais les fetes paier d'aultre monnoye en la manière ancienne acoustumée, jusques ad ce que nous vous mandons que lesdites monnoyes soient publiées et distribuées aux marchans et gens à qui ils appartiendront..."

On the following 2nd June, Henry V gave order to the Treasurer General of Normandy to have transferred, with all haste, to the Castle of Caen, in closed and sealed sacks or coffers, all the new money, which had been struck, or should in future be struck at Saint-Lô to be kept there until such time as he should think fit to place it in circulation¹⁵. Now, that moment never came; the ordinance of 30th November 1421 — which altered the type of the currency — informs us that at this date Henry V had not yet given currency to the Gros au léopard.

It is therefore almost certain that the Gros au léopard were remelted by order at Rouen and Saint-Lô, and this explains their extreme rarity, as all the existing specimens must have been in some manner or other stolen away.

The only example of a Saint-Lô Gros au léopard is in the British Museum.

The Dauphin continuing to debase his coinage further, the coining by Charles VI of silver currency of good standard soon became very burdensome. So that, on 11th August 1421, letters patent to the Masters General abolished the écu d'or and the Gros heaumé, replacing these by a Salut and a Demi-Salut (not yet found) of fine gold, and by a Double and Denier tournois in billon. The two last, although of low standard, were, like the Gros heaumé, on the foot 30¹⁶.

But this new currency was not minted immediately. We indeed know that on 23rd August 1421, the Paris Mint and the other mints of Charles VI were out to be let, and that only on 3rd October the money-changer, Pierre de Landes "confessa avoir prins et retenu... la monnoye d'or et d'argent de Paris", and finally that the Royal mandate giving currency to the Saluts, doubles and deniers tournois was issued from Lagny-sur-Marne on 12th October.

This time again Henry V had taken the initiative of this mandate, and, notwithstanding, we observe that he waited six weeks before taking a similar measure in Normandy. Was he waiting for the Duke of Burgundy to raise at last the standard of his money? This is not impossible. Now the order to mint at Dijon the new Double tournois is dated from 20th November 1421¹⁷.

Letters patent, given at Rouen on 30th November 1421, enjoined the two mints of Normandy to strike also a Salut of fine gold, and a Demi-Salut (of which no specimen has yet been recovered), as well as Doubles and Deniers tournois. These are all identical in weight and standard with the similar coins of Charles VI; only their types differ. The Salut (Hoffmann, 4) has the English shield quartered with lis and leopards; on the Double tournois (Hoffmann, 11) a crowned leopard surmounted by a lis replaces the crowned fleur de lis of the French double (Pl. III, fig. 6), and on the Denier (Hoffmann, 12), the crowned leopard is found alone.

Henry V died on 29th August 1422, but the striking of Salutes and other currency in his name appears to have continued until the last days of the following month of October, at least at Saint-Lô¹⁸. It is known that between 26th May and 26th October 1422, a period during which Loys de Cormeilles kept the accounts of the Mint, the trial box of gold contained 12 Salutes¹⁹. These Salutes being eschars, Loys de Cormeilles was condemned to a fine and the coins were probably remelted, which would partly explain why no Salut of Saint-Lô has been found.

In recapitulation, Saint-Lô issued under Henry V the six following species of currency :

1. — The Gros, so-called Florette, of the 3rd issue.
2. — The Gros, so-called Florette, of the 4th issue.
3. — The Gros au léopard (5th issue).
4. — The Salut d'or.
5. — The Double tournois or léopard (2nd issue)²⁰.
6. — The Denier tournois (2nd issue).

The two first Gros were coined, as we have said, by Jehan Marcel. The Gros au léopard was issued by another Master; in fact, Henry V, in his letters patent of 6th May 1421 advised the wardens of Saint-Lô that, on that very day, Jehan Marcel had leased the Mint "for and in the name of Thévenin (Etienne) Marcel, his brother". The lease of Thévenin Marcel was probably for a year, and must have lapsed in the course of May 1422. This explains the fact that on 26th May 1422 we find Loys de Cormeilles as keeper of the Mint accounts ("tenant le compte de la Monnaie"), and explains also why on that same 26th May a fresh trial box of gold should have been started. From a document dated 22nd March 1423 (n.st.) we gather that Loys de Cormeilles had Jehan Marcel for compagnon, that is as partner.

As to the former master of the Mint of Saint-Lô, under Charles VI, Jehan le Goupil, he had rallied to Henry V, and on 20th August 1420, by letters given at Moronval, near Dreux, Henry had appointed him General-Master of the Mints of Normandy, with a yearly salary of 200 livres tournois, at the same time as Guillaume Vintbert, nicknamed Picquenique, money-changer and burgher of Rouen²¹.

V

HENRY VI OF ENGLAND.

We have mentioned above that the minting of Salutes, and no doubt also of Doubles and Deniers tournois of Henry V probably continued at Saint-Lô — and certainly at Rouen — until 26th October 1422, after the death of the Prince which occurred on the preceding 29th August. This is easily understood; his son and successor as King of England and Heir of France bearing the same patronymic name, there was no need to modify anything in the titular inscriptions of the currency struck in Normandy. But Charles VI dying in his turn on 21st October, the situation was altered. Henry VI was proclaimed King of France and recognized as such in that part of the kingdom which had remained loyal to Charles VI, except Tournay; and the duchy of Normandy, separated from France by the English conquest, was reunited to the crown¹. As a result of this change, Rouen and Saint-Lô fell back under the 18. Cf. Saulcy, vol. II, p. 339 (22nd March 1423) (n.st.).

19. The ordinance of 6th May 1421 prescribed to the wardens of Rouen and Saint-Lô to place in the trial boxes one denier of gold for two marks of gold deniers issued, and not for 11 marks, as stated in error by Mr. L.M. Hewlett (Anglo-Gallic Coins, p. 177); the II evidently represents Roman figures and not 11 in Arabic figures. If therefore the order had not been abrogated — which is unlikely — and the gold salutes being at 63 to the mark, each gold denier in the trial boxes represented 126 coined Salutes, and the 12 Salutes of Loys de Cormeilles corresponded to an issue of only 1512 pieces, and not 2400 as stated by Mr. M.L. Hewlett.

20. On the other hand, the rate of one gold denier in trial box for 200 struck, generally applied in France, was not always observed under Charles VI. To mention but one example, in Paris, March to July 1420, one écu d'or was placed in the trial box for 300 struck (Saulcy, vol. II, p. 213).

21. Henry V had ordered on 28th September 1419 an issue (the first) of double tournois, or Mansors, and deniers tournois.

22. Guillaume Vintbert was counterwarden of the Mint of Rouen on 25th September 1419.

23. This had been foreseen in the treaty of Troyes, art. 18. Ordonn., t. XI, p. 88.

matique, 1846. — Likewise, the mandate to the Treasurer General of Normandy, dated in Saulcy, 2nd June 1420, is in reality of a year later, 2nd June 1421.

14. The Gros au léopard and Gros heaumé were both of 11 d. 12 gr. R. R., 86 $\frac{1}{2}$ to the Mark, and worth 20 deniers tournois.

15. Lecoindre-Dupont, Revue numismatique, 1846. Lettres sur l'hist. monét. de la Normandie, pièce XII.

16. Both the Double and denier tournois were at 1 d. 12 gr. R.; the double was cut at 112 $\frac{1}{2}$ to the Mark, and the denier in consequence at 225 to the Mark.

17. We should remember that Dijon struck florettes on the foot 160, until 16th October 1421.

jurisdiction of the French Masters General, sitting in Paris², and the currency of special type for Normandy was suppressed.

Ordinances in connection with the coinage followed each other in rapid succession at the beginning of the new reign.

The foot 30, used concurrently by Henry V, Charles VI and the Duke of Burgundy, was preserved, but on 23rd November 1422, the Regent, Duke of Bedford, and his Council, availing themselves of the fact that the Dauphin had, on the preceding 12th September raised his coinage to the foot 40³ replaced the Doubles — French Niquets and Norman Leopards — and the Deniers tournois, by the Grand and Petit Blanc aux deux écus (Hoffmann, 6 and 7), the one and the other at 5 deniers A.R. and respectively of 75 and 150 to the Mark. These Blancs, on which the new state of things imposed Franco-English emblems, returned to the French tradition and in fact continued the Guénar and Half-Guénar of Charles VI as before the debasements of 1417⁴.

On 11th December 1422, the Masters General decided to return to the former custom — suspended in 1417 when the mouton d'or was created — to place one gold denier in a trial box for every 200 struck. This regulation took the place at Rouen and Saint-Lô of that imposed on them by Henry V on 6th May 1421⁵. Moreover the generals decreed that in future 1 denier blanc in 60 sols should be placed in the trial box, that is one piece in 720, whereas hitherto, 1 piece in 1000 was so kept, as well in France in Normandy.

On the next day, 12th December, it was decided "au comptouer en la chambre des m^{es}" to give to the mints fresh distinctive marks, that should no longer be secrets dots, but symbols⁶, and Saint-Lô was given as mint-mark, a fleur-de-lys.

The coining of Salutes was resumed on 6th February 1423 (n.st.). Whereas the Salute of Henry V bore the arms of England only, i.e. a shield quartered with lis and leopards, the first Salute of Henry VI, like the Grand and Petit Blanc, bore the shields of France and England side by side. One could see besides, says the Registre entre 2 ais, "une main en lieu du soleil dessus le roleau de l'Ave Maria"⁷. For weight and fineness — fine gold and 63 pieces to the mark — it was identical with the Salutes of Henry V and Charles VI, and issued, like these, current for 25 s.t.

The Salute of this first issue has not been recovered. Only few could have been struck, for, on 6th September of the same year, a second issue was decreed, cut at the rate of 70 to the mark, in which a sun took the place of the hand (Hoffmann, 2 and 3). This second Salute was current for 22 s. 6 d., i.e. a rate corresponding to its weight without any rise.

In the meantime, on 4th June 1423, by letters patent, given at the Bois de Vincennes, three new kinds of coins were ordered: a piece of 3 deniers, or Tresain (Hoffmann, 9) of 150 to the mark, similar to the Petit Blanc aux deux écus, but at 3 d. A.R. only; a Denier tournois (Hoffmann, 3), similar in weight and fineness to that of Henry V⁸, but a new type; a Maille tournois (Hoffmann, 15), of id. A.R. and at 300 to the mark. With the exception of the Double tournois, which Henry VI did not coin⁹ the monetary system of Charles VI was continued¹⁰, as it is natural it should have been.

And, similarly, when on 24th May 1427, the Angelot (Hoffmann, 4), of fine gold and at 105 to the mark, was created, the French tradition was adhered to, as this coin, current for 15 s.t., i.e. two thirds of a Salute, takes the place of the Mouton d'or with regard to the écu of Charles VI in 1417¹¹.

The Mint of Saint-Lô issued all the coins, with the probable exception of the Petit Blanc aux deux écus, of which no specimen has ever turned up. This is surprising, because Saint-Lô, with Rouen and Le Mans, were the mints which remained longest under the power of the English, and Rouen, as well as Le Mans, coined Petits Blancs in large quantities.

The Saint-Lô Mint probably coined the first Salute, of 63 to the mark, as on 8th May 1423, the die-cutter of the Paris Mint, Guiot de Hanin brought "au comptouer deux paires de ters à salus" for Rouen and one pair for Saint-Lô, which were delivered to Sir Jehan le Goupil "pour iceux envoyer esdites monnoies".

The second Salute is very common, as also the Grand Blanc; the Angelot is not rare nor the Denier tournois either. But the Trésain, recently discovered (illustrated), is of extreme rarity, which is natural, as it was decreed, and reduced to 2 d. p., from 6th. December 1423. The Maille has been recovered, but is rare. The Cabinet des Médailles preserves one specimen, which is in conformity with the order given to Saint-Lô on 17th December 1423, to strike Mailles with the distinguishing marks: on obv. the S of HENRICVS and on rev. the S of CIVIS, pointed (illustrated).

The five other coins all bear as mint-mark, a fleur-de-lys.

Little is known of the Masters responsible for these issues; but, as under Henry V, all bear French names and were very probably Normans. The same remarks apply to the officials of the Mint. This is not surprising, for, writes G. Dupont, after Ch. de Beaurepaire, most of the public offices were entrusted to natives, only the military commands and chief administrative posts were reserved to native born Englishmen¹².

There may have been a change of Master at the beginning of the reign, as a document, dated 27th November 1422, informs us that on that day all the Mints were to let. Did Loys de Corneilles, keeper of the Mint accounts, and Jehan Marcel, his "compagnon", receive a fresh appointment? We cannot say. We only know that previous to 7th April 1424 (n.st.), the Master of the Mint was named, Jehan Ferry. Perhaps he was the first holder of the office under Henry VI?

As under Henry V, the lease contracts of the Mints were in general for one year but they were renewable. This is how, in 1425, Jehan de Caumont was appointed master for one year by Sir Jehan le Goupil, Master General of the coins, and named again in 1426, but in conjunction with the former master, Jehan Marcel. In 1427, we find again Jehan de Caumont as sole master, and in 1428, Jehan Ferry. Then, after a gap of two years, during which we have no information, Jehan de Caumont again becomes master in 1431 and 1432.

On the period extending from 1432 to 1449, Saulcy has nothing to report, and Mr. Hewlett, in his excellent work, adds no new information. But a Cotentin scholar, M. Lepingard has published a "Chartrier où sont enregistrées les rentes deuz au Trésor de l'église Notre-Dame de Saint-Lô qui fut fait au mois d'aoust l'an de grâce

11. One Angelot for 100 struck was placed in the trial box (cf. Saulcy, vol. II, p. 394).

12. Dupont, Hist. du Cotentin, vol. II, p. 555.

2. Jean le Goupil was adjoined to the master-general of Paris, but Guillaume Vintbert is not mentioned again.

3. The principal currency ordered by the Dauphin was the Blanc au K (Hoffmann, Pl. xxxiii, no. 27) of 4 d. 12 gr. A.R. and 90 to the Mark.

4. They were even slightly better, being on the foot 30, than the guénar of 1411-1417 which was on the foot 32.

5. Cf. supra, p. 74, note 2.

6. The English were accustomed, in Aquitaine, to differentiate their mints by the initial letter of their names, as P for Poitiers, T for Tarbes, etc. But how would it have been possible, in 1422, to distinguish between the three mints of Auxerre, Amiens and Arras? and later, what letter should be given to Le Mans to recognize this mint from that of Mâcon? The adoption of another system was urgent: hence the choosing of symbols.

7. Cf. Saulcy, vol. II, p. 337.

8. That is 1 d. 12 gr. A.R. and at 225 to the mark.

9. The coin reproduced in Hoffmann (Pl. xxx, no. 10) has been ascribed by Saulcy to a bishop of Verdun.

10. The ordinance of 4th June 1423 applied to the black money (billon coins) the regulation edicted for the Grands and Petits Blancs, named that one black denier for 60 sols, i.e. 720 deniers, struck should be placed in a trial box.

mil CCCCXXXVII", and we read there that a rent of 30 s. st. was due "sur l'ostel qui fut Pierre Chaffare que tient à présent Jehan de Caumont maistre de la monnaie de Saint-Lô". This shows us that Jehan de Caumont was in office as Master in 1437, and he, most likely, had never ceased to hold it since 1431¹⁴.

Moreover we have had the good fortune to discover, at the Bibliothèque Nationale¹⁵, an account of the deliveries of salutes extending from 17th November 1446 to 5th January 1448 (n. st.). This account informs us that Jehan Ferry and Jehan de Caumont junior were joined in partnership as co-masters for eight months from 17th November 1446 and that their successor was Richard Pillegrain¹⁶, with whom we shall meet again as Master under Charles VII. This same account gives us the names of several officials of the Mint, and amongst these, that of a new warden named Jehan Caboulet, but, as we see, it only fills a small gap, and the discovery of further documents is much to be desired.

Had these varied Masters different personal marks? We may answer this question in the affirmative, for on certain salutes and on one denier tournois at least, we have noticed annulets and other distinctive marks. The following are those known :

1. Salute with annulet under the third letter of both legends.
2. Salute with annulet under the fifth letter of both legends.
- Denier tournois with annulet under the fifth letter of both legends.
3. Salute with five-rayed star under the 26th letter on the rev. legend only, which is the R of IMPERAT (Feuardent frères).
4. Salute with dot under 30th and last but one letter of the obv. legend, which is the G of RGX, and a dot under the 26th letter of the rev. legend, which is the R of IMPERAT (Hewlett, p. 231. — Saint Lô, n° 3).

Other similar marks may yet be discovered ; but hitherto we are unable to ascribe those we know to any special masters¹⁷.

The Salutes struck at Saint-Lô offer a remarkable difference in style which it is important to notice. The faces of the Virgin and angel Gabriel are treated in two very distinct manners : on some specimens they are elongated and thin, and the eyes appear to protrude out of their sockets, the angel Gabriel has a grimacing aspect¹⁸ (Pl. III, fig. 7) ; on others, these same faces are rounder and look more "normal", and the workmanship is more artistic. It is probable that the dies of these salutes originate from two different engravers, but we cannot say more.

After the treaty of Arras (21st September 1435) and the recapture of Paris by Charles VII in the following year, the political situation in Normandy returned to what it was at the beginning of the conquest of Henry V ; north of the Loire, Normandy and a part of Maine, with the three mints of Rouen, Saint-Lô and Le Mans¹⁹, alone remained under the power of the English. The monetary administration was reorganised — necessarily — such as it was under Henry V, and we find as Masters General of the mints of Normandy in 1438 our old acquaintance, Jehan le Goupil, with a colleague named Rémon Monfaoucq²⁰. In October 1444, after the resignation or decease of Jehan le Goupil, the privy master of Rouen, Etienne Marcel, former master of Saint-Lô, was appointed in his stead.

But what is remarkable, and to the honour of the English administration, is that, notwithstanding the reverses sustained, Henry VI, very different in this to Charles VII, never altered his currency. After, as before, the loss of Paris, the gold currency remained at 24 carats, and neither the salute nor the angelot were reduced in weight ; similarly, the white and black money remained invariably on the foot 30. From 1436 to 1450, on the contrary, the écu d'or of Charles VII, as well as his silver currency, did not cease to be reduced, and this debasement went on even after the expulsion of the English and the recovery of Normandy. France, victorious, but which had suffered invasion and war on her territory, was impoverished more than conquered England.

CHARLES II. FARTHING.

Mr. S.S. Heal of Toronto, Canada, has very kindly sent me the following descriptions of English copper farthings of the reign of King Charles the Second in his collection, which were not included in the list of these coins printed in the "Numismatic Circular", for July-August, 1925 :—

6A. FARTHING, 1672.

Similar to 1, but no stop after CAROLO, the last O of CAROLO is in contact with the end of the upper hanging ribbon, and the date is 1672, in thicker numerals.

6B. FARTHING, 1672.

Similar to 1, but no stop after CAROLO, the last O of CAROLO is above the end of the upper hanging ribbon, but not in contact with it, and the date is 1672.

10A. FARTHING, 1673.

Similar to 1, but no stop after CAROLO, the last O of CAROLO is opposite the space between the upper and lower hanging ribbons, but nearer the upper than the lower one, and the date is 1673.

10B. FARTHING, 1673.

Similar to 1, but no stop after CAROLO, the last O of CAROLO is opposite the space between the upper and lower hanging ribbons, but nearer the upper than the lower one, no stop after BRITANNIA, and the date is 1673.

11A. FARTHING, 1673.

Similar to 1, but no stop after CAROLO, the L of CAROLO is in contact with the end of the upper hanging ribbon, the last O of CAROLO is in contact with the end of the lower hanging ribbon, and the date, 1673, in larger numerals.

12. FARTHING, 1673.

Similar to 1, but CAROLA instead of CAROLO, no stop after CAROLA, the last A of CAROLA is in contact with the upper hanging ribbon, and the date is 1673, with less space between the numerals.

15A. FARTHING, 1674.

Similar to 1, but no stop after CAROLO, the last O of CAROLO is in contact with the end of the upper hanging ribbon, the letters of the obverse and reverse legends larger and thicker, and the date is 1674, in larger and thicker numerals.

15B. FARTHING, 1674.

Similar to 1, but no stop after CAROLO, the last O of CAROLO is in contact with the end of the upper hanging ribbon, and the date is 1674, with less space between the first and second numerals from the left.

PROPOSED NEW REVERSE DESIGN FOR THE AUSTRALIAN PENNY.

Through the kindness and courtesy of my friends Messrs. Spink and Son, Limited, London, I am enabled to have printed in the 13. E. Lepingard, Le Cartulaire de Pèglise N.-D. de Saint-Lô, in Notices, mémoires et documents publiés par la Société d'agriculture et d'archéologie de la Manche, vol. XVII, p. 116, Saint-Lô, 1899.

14. At Rouen, Etienne Marcel held the office of Master without interruption from 10th April 1426 to 1st October 1444 ; he had been appointed for one year only, but was reelected from year to year.

15. Bibl. nat., Ms. Fr. 26.075.

16. Probably a descendant or relative of the Jean Pellegrain, appointed moneyer under Henry V by letters given at Rouen on 20th July 1422 (cf. Saulcy, vol. II, p. 329).

17. The large majority of the salutes of Saint-Lô bear no mark, which constitutes a fifth variety.

18. Cf. Hewlett, Anglo-Gallic coins, pl. XIII, no. 7.

19. Le Mans was recaptured by Dunois at the beginning of 1448.

20. Cf. Saulcy, vol. II, p. 388.

"Numismatic Circular" an illustration of a proposed new design for the reverse of the Australian bronze penny.

It has been submitted to an official at Australia House, Strand, London, who kindly expressed the opinion that it was a very pleasing design and that it should be submitted to the Government authorities at Melbourne, Victoria, Australia, for their kind consideration.

The following is a description of the proposed new reverse design :—

R. — Legend : — AUSTRALIA. Inscription, in three lines : — ONE | PENNY | 1924. A branch of mimosa on the left, and another on the right of the inscription, the lower portions of the branches being crossed below it and tied together by ribbon formed into a bow. The whole within an ornamented rim.

The mimosa, a variety of the wattle, is the accepted Australian National Flower.

NUMISMATIC SOCIETIES, MUSEUMS, &c

ROYAL NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

Oct. 15 : Percy H. Webb, Esq., M.B.E., Treasurer, in the Chair.

Mr. V.J.E. Ryan exhibited 6 sestertii of Domitian including an unpublished piece, rev. Owl S.C., and one of Hadrian with unpublished rev. ANNONA AVG. and Rome seated to I. PONT MAX. TR. POT. &c.

Mr. William Gilbert showed a sestertius of Livia, wife of Augustus, with large flan in exceptional condition (Levis Sale Lot 260), a second brass of Domitius Domitianus (Cohen 1) and another of the rare type reading IMD.C.LVCIVS DOMITIVS (Cohen 2), the two latter from a find of 23 made in Egypt early in 1924 (22 of type 1 and 1 of type 2).

Mr. L.A. Lawrence showed a specimen in silver of the Phoenix badge of Queen Elizabeth.

Mr. H.P. Hall, L.A. Lawrence and Percy H. Webb exhibited a fine series of coins of Domitian to illustrate Mr. Mattingly's paper.

Mr. Harold Mattingly read a paper on "Some Studies in the reign of Domitianus". The Flavian dynasty rendered great services to Rome, and Domitian, though hated by the aristocracy, was no unworthy successor to his father and brother. In many points he followed the lead set by Vespasian — notably in his mint arrangements; some temporary changes at the beginning of his reign were probably the result of the great fire of A.D. 80. The types of the coinage throw much light on the history of the reign. A series of divine attributes, sometimes set on the thrones, which is continued from the reign of Titus, celebrates the "lectisternia" held in A.D. 80 to expiate the eruption of Vesuvius and the great fire. The German Wars are illustrated by a fine series of sestertii, by medallions of silver and by the common type of the gold and silver, Germany mourning. The Saecular Games of A.D. 88 are commemorated in almost all their details and the building activities of Domitian are represented by a series of temples on his denarii. The precise meaning of some of the commoner types of the reign, Annona, Fides, Moneta, was discussed and some light was thrown on Domitian's cult of Minerva and his own pretensions to divinity.

BRITISH NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

June 24th, 1925. Mr. Grant R. Francis, F.S.A., President, in the Chair.

After welcoming the presence of Dr. Hans Holst, of the National Museum, Christiania, the President announced that Mr. J.O. Manton had been unanimously elected a Member of the Council in the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Dale.

Mr. Morris Boscawen Savage was elected a Member of the Society.

Presentation to the Library. By Mr. A. H. Baldwin : — "Men whose Fathers were Men, A story of a hobby"; by Centurion. Published by Messrs. A. H. Baldwin and Sons, Ltd.

A vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Baldwin and his Firm.

Exhibitions in illustration of the two papers. By Lieut.-Colonel H.W. Morrieson : — Elizabeth. Hammered shillings of the mint-mark lys without the inner circle, and of the mint-mark martlet. Milled shillings of the mint-marks lys and star. An illustration of the so-called milled half-crown with mint-mark lys.

By Miss Helen Farquhar : — Charles I. Scottish gold coins of the year 1637 by Nicholas Briot who, although appointed in 1635, did not assume office in Scotland until 1636. Unite, Burns No. 1032. Half-unite, Burns 1034. Eighth-unite, Burns 1037.

By Mr. F. A. Walters : — Charles I. Crown, half-crown, shilling and sixpence of the first issue for Scotland, bearing his name and title, but retaining his father's portrait.

Mr. Andrew read a paper on the Date of the Introduction of the Mill-and-Screw process of coining in the reign of Elizabeth.

Mr. H. Alexander Parsons read a short paper on the Milled Silver Coins of Scotland; Charles II to Anne.

YORKSHIRE NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

An Ordinary Meeting of the above Society was held on 15th August in the rooms of the Barnsley Naturalists' Society, the President, Mr. Frank Heeley occupying the chair. The Meeting was chiefly devoted to an exhibit of tokens and medals relating to Barnsley and District, to which Mr. A. Knight was the principal contributor. Mr. Knight, who is an almost life-long student of the tokens and medals of his native town, had many interesting details to bring forward in connection with the issuers of tokens and the events in the town's history recorded upon the medals. One of the commonest of the Barnsley tokens is the Jackson and Lister penny, and it was interesting to know that this firm was the last to be connected with the industry of wire-drawing, and that their warehouse stood on the site now occupied by the Barnsley War Memorial. The curiosity of the Barnsley shilling of 1812, showing the arms of Leeds, was attributed to the fact that the issuer, William Horsfall, was a native of Gomersall, near Leeds. Among the medals exhibited and ably described were the "leather" medals of the Barnsley Cordwainers' Society issued in connection with Queen Victoria's Jubilee and the Coronation of Edward VII; medals commemorating the opening of Locke Park, the Raikes centenary, Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee etc., and badges connected with the Oaks Colliery, where, in 1866, over 300 men and boys lost their lives in the great disaster; the Barnsley Special Constable's badge, and a unique early Masonic medal engraved with the name of William Hill. The whole formed a very representative selection of Barnsley pieces, and Mr. Knight was thanked for his interesting exhibit on the proposal of the Hon. Secretary, seconded by Mr. T. Pickersgill. The remainder of the afternoon was devoted to other exhibits, of which the following were the chief items.

By the President, Mr. F. Heeley: — Three varieties of the Barnsley Penny, a silver Roman Republican coin showing on the obverse the mask of Medusa, and a Roman mosaic tile showing the head of Medusa, the latter being from the Marquis of Ripon's collection; a silver coin of Augustus, B.C. 12, showing on reverse several instruments of sacrifice, and a patera in glass, found at Amiens in 1885 (from the Sir John and Sir Arthur Evans collections).

By Mr. T. Pickersgill: — Jackson and Lister tokens, one of which was countermarked "G.D. Lumb", medals of the Barnsley Association Football Club, the opening of the Hull and Barnsley Railway, gilt medal issued to the Monk Bretton Colliery deputies on the coronation of H.M. George V, and wax impressions of the medal issued to members of the Monk Bretton Club who had completed 21 years membership. Mr. Pickersgill took the opportunity of presenting these wax impressions to the Museum of the Barnsley Naturalists' Society.

By Mr. A. Knight: A brockage of George IV half-crown; a love token, upon a William III Bristol half-crown, marked "T.C. May 12. 1802. A sincere friend and honest man". A note of General Gordon of Khartoum, framed in silver; admission medals to the Yorkshire assizes, and many other pieces of local and general interest.

By Mr. Bruce Senior: — A series of Russian Copper coins in fine preservation, a £1 note of the Huddersfield Old Bank, and (on behalf of Mr. Arthur Kay, of Hoyland Common) Sheffield tokens, and a penny token of Bowes Castle.

By the Hon. Secretary. — Coins and paper money of Danzig, Lettland, etc. A hearty vote of thanks to the Barnsley Naturalist Socy., and Mr. Knight, for their hospitality was carried on the proposal of the Hon. Secretary, seconded by Mr. T. Pickersgill.

KENT NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

The opening meeting of the Winter Session took place on Friday evening, Oct. 9th 1925, in the Reference Library of the Maidstone Museum, when the President, J. Shirley-Fox Esq., R.B.A., F.R.N.S., after a most hearty welcome had been accorded to him by Mr. Walter. H. Day, gave a most interesting and instructive lecture on "Plantagenet Coins", which he illustrated with blackboard sketches. The lecturer, whose special study for the last 20 years has been the silver pennies of Edward I, II, and III, explained how he had made it possible to recognise, and to place in their proper chronological order, the pennies of these three monarchs between 1279 (in which the long cross type with the inscription HENRICUS REX III was abandoned) and 1350. This had been done by an exhaustive study of the shapes of the crowns, variations of the legends, mint-marks, and other minute peculiarities of the coins, together with contemporary documentary evidence relating to the various mints, gathered from the Record Office, British Museum, and other sources. At the conclusion of the lecture, a hearty vote of thanks was accorded to the President by Mr. Savage. The following coins were exhibited: By the President, J. Shirley-Fox Esq., a heavy noble of Henry IV with crescent on rudder; six half groats of Henry V, including two with annulet and trefoil at either side of the crown, and difference-reverses. By Mr. J.W. Bridge, The first guinea, struck by Charles II in 1663, and so called because it was made of gold brought from Guinea by the Royal African Company. Mr. E.T. Clark, A dollar with large octagonal countermark, silver penny of Henry III, found at Otterham Quay, a Manx ½ d. and two unidentified coins. Mr. Walter. H. Day, a noble of Henry V, found locally, and a gold medal of Clement X. Dr. Spencer Edwards, a chaise of Edward III, half groat of Henry VI, and two pennies of Edward I. At the close of the meeting, the Hon.

Sec. announced that the next meeting will take place on Friday, Nov. 13th, at the Maidstone Museum, when Mr. E. H. Clark will give a paper on "The Coinage of the Isle of Man".

A well attended meeting was held on Friday evening 13th Nov. 1925, at the Maidstone Museum, with Mr. Walter H. Day as Chairman. After the usual business had been completed, G.C. Brooke Esq., M.A. of the British Museum, was unanimously elected an Honorary Member of the Society. Mr. E.H. Clark then read a most interesting paper on "The Coinage of the Isle of Man", which he illustrated with his own collection of Manx coins and tokens, also a proof in silver of the Isle of Man Derby penny of 1733, lent specially by W. Cubbon Esq. of the Manx Museum, Douglas, Isle of Man. Messrs. Spink and Son also lent a set of 3 silver tokens of Peel Castle in the Isle of Man, for 5/-, 2/6, and 1/-. In addition to the above, the following coins were exhibited: — By Mr. J.W. Bridge, a 17th century astrological amulet in silver. By Mr. E.T. Clark, a pair of money scales and weights, temp. George III, by Young and Son of Leicester Square, London. By Mr. E.H. Clark, a numismatic newscutting book, and a 1 d. and ½ d. of the new issue for Jersey. By Mr. Walter H. Day, 6 early Indian coins. By Mr. Risch, a collection of hop-tokens in their original bag, issued by R.B. of Egerton, Kent. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. E.H. Clark for his paper, and the Hon. Sec. announced that the next meeting would take place on Dec. 11th, when a paper will be given by Mr. Savage.

AUSTRALIAN NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

The regular Meeting of the Society was held at the B.M.A. Building, 30 Elizabeth Street, Sydney, on Thursday, 23rd April, 1925, at 8 p.m. Dr. G.H. Abbott (President), in the Chair. There were 12 members present.

Mr. Jack Scott, of Neutral Bay, was elected a member.

Dr. G.H. Abbott gave a short address on "The Coins of Tarentum" and exhibited a number of specimens from his cabinet.

He also exhibited a number of "Coins struck in Britain during the Roman occupation B.C. 55-A.D. 407", including some which were dug up in Fleet Street, London.

Mr. Wills exhibited: Coins of George IV. as seneschal of Scotland. 6d., 1/- and 1/6 piece. 1799 silver pattern.

Mr. F. Mills exhibited: Coin of Sweden, Oscar II, 2 Rr. 1907. Struck in commemoration of his golden wedding.

Mr. Larsen exhibited: A tray of British Crowns. A tray of British Half-Crowns. A tray of Roman Imperial 2nd bronze. A tray of Roman Imperial Denarii.

The Ordinary Meeting was held at the Society's Room, B.M.A. Buildings, 30 Elizabeth Street, Sydney, on Thursday, 21st May, 1925, at 8 p.m., Dr. G.H. Abbott (President), in the Chair.

The Rev. D.J. Finn, of St. Ignatius' College, Riverview, and Mr. John Dudley Gibbs Medley, of the Union Club, were elected members of the Society.

There were nine members present and two visitors.

Dr. G.H. Abbott gave a very interesting description of a number of coins of Constantine the Great, also of some Scotch money of Charles II, illustrated in both cases by coins selected from his cabinet.

Exhibits.

Dr. G.H. Abbott gave an interesting description of some very fine medals, comprising his special exhibit.

The Rev. D.J. Finn exhibited a coin bearing a debased Greek head on the obverse with inscription presumably in Hindustani

Mr. P. Larsen exhibited: Coins of Constantine I (The Great) 274-339.

Mr. D. Elliott Smith exhibited two tokens, and Mr. E.R. Moser, an imitation spade Guinea.

The ordinary Meeting of the Society was held at the B.M.A. Building, 30 Elizabeth Street, Sydney, on Thursday, 18th June, 1925, at 8 p.m.

The President (Dr. G.H. Abbott) in the Chair. There were 12 members present.

Mrs. Scott-Scott, of 27 Undercliff Street, Neutral Bay, and Professor Todd, of Sydney University, were elected members of the Society.

The monthly report of the Victoria Numismatic Society for May 1925 was received and placed upon the table.

Dr. G.H. Abbott gave some very interesting notes on "Some Coins of Bithynia" illustrated by coins from his cabinet and by an atlas of ancient countries showing the region of Bithynia where the coins originated.

The doctor referred to the fact that, by a strange coincidence, the coins of Nicaea were being exhibited on a day when the celebration of the 1600th anniversary of the Council of Nicaea was being celebrated in Sydney.

The Rev. D.J. Finn gave a very interesting history of the life and work of Archbishop Quelen of Paris, illustrated by a medal from the collection of Dr. Abbott, which was exhibited at the previous meeting.

Description of Medal.

Obv. Bust of Archbishop Quelen. Insc. HYACINTHVS QVELEN ARCHIEPISCOPVS PARISIENSIS.

Rev. Group of Archbishop with cholera patients. Ins. ORPHANO TVERIS ADJUTOR. In ex. CHOLERA MORBO INGRAVESCENTE MDCCCXXXII.

Dr. G.H. Abbott exhibited Coins of the English Rebellion: Siege coin of Newark, one shilling. Commonwealth, one shilling. Cromwell, shilling. Also some photographs of his siege coins of Pontefract Castle. He also read some notes about the Siege of Pontefract.

Rev. D.J. Finn exhibited an interesting coin on the obverse of which appears a head with Arabic inscription. The reverse carries a small head on the inscription. Restruck over an astronomical type of the Moguls of Persia, struck at Mosul about 1234.

The ordinary Meeting of the Society was held at the B.M.A. Building, 30 Elizabeth Street, Sydney, on Thursday, 3rd September, 1925, at 8 p.m., the Hon. John Lane Mullins (Vice-President) in the Chair.

An apology for his absence was received from the Rev. D.J. Finn, S.J., of St. Ignatius College, Riverview.

The Report of the Numismatic Society of Victoria for the month of June was placed upon the table.

A letter was received from Professor Todd, of Sydney University, regretting that a necessary re-arrangement in the time table of his department prevents him from attending the meetings.

Mr. James Hurst, Deacon of the Coin Room, Art Gallery, Adelaide. S.A. was elected a member of the Society.

The feature of the evening was the attendance of the Consul General for Finland (Mr. Harald Tanner) who was present to deliver in person two exceedingly beautiful bronze medals presented by his Government to the Society.

The Consul (who was welcomed by the Chairman and members) gave an interesting address describing the medals, and also described the coins of Finland with an outline history of the nation.

A very handsome series of the coins of Finland was presented by the Consul to the Society.

In expressing the thanks of the Society to the Consul for his Government's gift, the Chairman, the Hon. John Lane Mullins, pointed out the beautiful work wrought upon the medals which compared favourably with the magnificent work of the French and Italian medallists.

The Chairman also rendered the thanks of the Society to the Consul for his own gift of the coins of Finland. It was resolved that the Society send an acknowledgment in appropriate terms through its Secretary to the Consul, expressing its appreciation to the Government of Finland for its very handsome gift.

The coins of Finland presented to the Society by the Consul were a series of silver nickel and copper pieces comprising the following values:—

1 Markha 1921, 1 Markha 1907, 50 Pennia 1921, 1 Markha 1921, 50 Pennia 1917, 25 Pennia 1901, 25 Pennia 1921, 50 Pennia 1917, Copper 10 Pennia 1866 (Alexander II), 5 Pennia 1889 (Alexander III), 5 Pennia 1918, 5 Pennia 1889, 5 Pennia 1921, 10 Pennia 1919, 1 Penni 1893 (Alexander III), 10 Pennia 1919, 1 Penni 1893 (Alexander III), 1 Penni 1922.

Exhibits by the members were of a very interesting character.

The Hon. John Lane Mullins exhibited two bronze coins of Ceylon found at Anuradhapura. These pieces were dug up and were heavily patinated, and belong to the reigns of Queen Litavati and Kings Buvanika-Bahu and Sahasamatta of the 12th and 13th centuries.

Mr. E. Wills exhibited an exceedingly beautiful proof set of coins handsomely mounted in case comprising silver Victoria 1839, Maundy set, 4d. (Britannia) plain edge, 6d., 1/-, 2/6, 5/-, plain edge. Gold

5/- sovereign, 1 sovereign plain edge, £5 piece pattern, Una guiding lion, inscribed edge. Bronze proof 1/4d., 1/2d., and 1d. all dated 1839.

Mr. V.J. McNeill exhibited a silver medal of the Jubilee of the Shanghai Municipality, also 2 silver coins of Russia namely 25 Kopecs Catherine II 1796 and same 1793.

Mr. F. Mills exhibited some interesting Swedish coins including silver 2 Kroner 1/2 Skilling, 1/4 same, 1/8 same, and twelve copper coins, also a silver medal commemorating the golden wedding of Oscar II.

Mr. P.J. Marks exhibited an American Fleet Medal and a 1 1/2d. tramway token of Johannesburg in composition.

VARIA.

COINS OF 20 COUNTRIES.

A LIFE-BOAT RELIC OF WEMBLEY.

Among the money which was put in the collecting boxes at Life-boat House at Wembley during the Exhibition were coins of over twenty different countries. In fact half the world contributed to the Life-boat Service, if not from "China to Peru", at least literally from India and Persia to the Argentine. There were also in the boxes a number of interesting old coins and tokens. Among these were a George III farthing, two quarter annas of the East India Company, several tokens of French Chambers of Commerce, and a token inscribed "in memory of the good old days". This last was a more appropriate gift for the Life-boat Service than the donor probably realised, for it was dated "George III. 1788", the year, that is, before the first Life-boat was launched on the Tyne. The Royal National Life-boat Institution is adding to its museum a collection of these coins, one from each country, in memory of its exhibit at Wembley.

NUMISMATICS IN THE COMIC PRESS.

In Lincolnshire a man dug up a rare Queen Elizabeth silver coin in his garden. Indeed so rare is the coin that no other specimen is known—even in automatic cigarette machines.

INFORMATION REQUIRED.

- A) In a forthcoming issue of this paper will appear an article by Mr. Seymour de Ricci entitled "The Pedigrees of six celebrated English Coins", viz. Charles I Oxford Crown by Rawlins; Commonwealth Pattern Halfcrown, Shilling and Sixpence by Ramage; Charles II 'Petition' and 'Reddite' Crowns by Simon. In order that this list may be brought up to date and be made as complete as possible we should be pleased to hear from readers who possess any of these pieces, where possible with pedigrees.
- B) Dr. L. A. Lawrence is compiling a list of the coins of Edward III, issued between 1351 and 1360 and would like to hear of any curious variations or readings on gold or silver.
- C) A member of our staff, Mr. Seaby, is endeavouring to make a catalogue of English coins, and the first period he is covering is OFFA to ALFRED (A.D. 757-901). The scheme to be followed is that of illustrating every type in the text and noting all variations and readings, pedigrees and auction prices, also references to all publications. Below will be seen a specimen of part of a page. So that this work may be as complete as possible Mr. Seaby would be very grateful if collectors would let us know of any varieties and unpublished types in their possession, giving preferably a detailed list of all the coins of this period represented in their collections, as in the case of scarce and rare coins it is hoped to publish the pedigrees of all extant examples, so that the rarity of individual types may be more easily recognised. In helping in this way we feel that collectors would be furthering the progress of the science of Numismatics.

ROMAN SERIES.

An extremely fine collection of

FIRST BRASS.

N.B. Great care has been taken not to over describe the condition of these coins.

TRAJAN.

A.D. 98-112.

- 47868 IMP. CAES. NERVAE. TRAIANO AVG. GER. DAC. P. M. TR. P. COS. V. P. P. Laur. head of Trajan r., showing fastening of toga on l. shoulder. R. ALIM. ITAL (in ex.) S. P. Q. R. OPTIMO PRINCIPI. S.C. Abundance standing l., holding two ears of corn and cornucopiae; at her feet, and under her r. hand a small togate figure C., 7 variety. Fine green patina, and a fine large coin. V.F. 3 10 »
 * Alimenta Italiae, this legend, of which the general meaning is nourishment, food, provisions in corn, and other resources furnished by Trajan to Italy, has particular reference to the subsistence given by him to children of both sexes out of public funds.
 47869 Another coin similar but COS. VI. P. P. and the figure is not under Abundance's r. hand which she holds close to her side, this figure is apparently an elderly man and looks up to her face. C., 10 variety. Obv. not so fine but reverse extremely fine, a piece with green patina from the Signorelli collection. V.F. 3 17 6
 47870 Obv. Similar. R. ARAB. ADQ (in ex.) similar legend around. Arabia standing l., holding a branch of frankincense and a sweet cane (calamus odoratus); at her side, camel. C., 28. Patinated, portrait fine. M. » 7 6
 * Arabia Adquisita. Although there had been an attempt to capture Arabia in B.C. 24, none of it really came under Roman control till after the expedition under A. Cornelius Palma governor of Syria, during Trajan's fifth consulship (A.D. 105) The expedition was successful as is commemorated on this coin.
 47871 Another similar but obv. COS. V. P. P. and rev. ARAB. ADQVIS. C., 32. A very desirable piece with a thin dark patina from the Blackwood collection. E.F. 7 10 »
 47872 Another without patina. M. » 7 »

Slightest corrosion on rev. otherwise very sharp, nice green and red patina; extremely fine portrait. From the Signorelli coll. V.F. 4 10 »
 47876 Another similar but COS. VI. P. P. and with an aegis showing the head of Medusa in relief. Dark green patina. F. 1 » »
 47878 Another piece; very fine heavy green patina. V.F. 2 7 6
 47879 Similar. R. SENATVS POPVLVSQVE ROMANVS S.C. Felicity standing l., holding caduceus and olive branch. C., 351. Brown patina; from the Signorelli coll. V.F. 2 7 6
 47880 Similar. Sharp but the green patina is chipped. F. » 12 6

- holds Victory and spear. C., 383. Another piece from the Signorelli collection with a very nice brown patina. V.F. 5 10 »
 47882 Similar but at Rome's feet is seen a kneeling Dacian in attitude of supplication. C., 386. Very dark brown patina, almost V.F., from the Ogle coll. F. 1 15 »
 47883 Similar. Peace standing l., holding olive-branch and cornucopiae, r. foot on Dacian.
 47884 Similar but Victory erecting trophy. C., 444. Brown patina. V.F. 3 5 »
 47885 Another with fine green patina from the Signorelli coll. F. 2 12 6
 47886 Similar but Abundance standing l., holding two ears of corn and cornucopiae; before, modius; behind, prow. A fine portrait, from the same source. C., 469. F. 1 15 »
 47887 Another, green patina. M. » 5 »
 47888 Similar but Fortune standing l., holding rudder and cornucopiae; behind, rudder. C., 477. Green patina. V.F. 4 10 »
 47889 Another, dark patina. F. » 17 6
 47890 Another, finer than last but unpatinated. F. » 17 6
 47891 Similar but Health seated l. feeding from patera a serpent entwined around an altar. C., 485. Patinated, obv. very fine. F. 1 12 6
 47892 Similar but the Emperor galloping l., and hurling spears at an enemy under his horse's feet. C., 503. A choice coin with a nice dark patina from the Signorelli collection; very good portrait. E.F. 8 » »
 47893 Similar but the Emperor standing left and being crowned by Victory. C., 516. Olive green patina. F. 1 7 6
 47894 Another. M. » 15 6
 47895 Similar. Dacian seated on buckler before a trophy. C., 534. V.F. 3 3 »
 47896 Another with an extremely fine obverse. V.F. 3 » »
 47897 Similar but draped bust right, good portrait. F. 1 5 »
 47898 Similar but undraped bust as before and Dacian seated in front of the trophy. C., 536. A real gem with thin light green patina. E.F. 11 10 »
 47899 Similar but Tiber in fury crushing Dacia to the ground. C., 526. Rare type. F. 2 2 »
 47900 Similar but the Bridge over the Danube. C., 542. Rare. E.F. 15 » »
 47901 Another, reverse fine. M. 2 2 »
 47902 Similar but the Circus Maximus. C., 545. Rare. P. » 15 »
 47903 IMP. CAES. NERVA TRAIANO AVG. GER. DAC. P. M. TR. P. COS. VI. P. P. His laur. head r. R. TR. POT. COS. II. S. C. Justice seated l., holding branch and sceptre. C., 611. One of Trajan's earliest coins, an extremely fine obverse, unpatinated. V.F. 3 10 »

* These coins, the pistole and half-pistole, were struck from gold imported by the Darien Company. The quality of metal was to be standard gold of 22 cts. fine, and the pistole, which was current for £12 Scottish, was to be current for 20 s. sterling English. The English Guinea at that time was current for 21s. 6d.

The crest of the Darien Company was "the sun rising above the sea".

This is the last gold money of the Scottish series.

* "On March 11, 1842, Akbar Khan made his appearance before Jellalabad, and advanced to the attack of the town with his whole army. The garrison, however, sallied out and drove him ignominiously from the field upon which he turned the siege into a blockade. On April 1 the troops sallied, and swept into the town 500 sheep and goats they had seen from the bastions grazing in the plain. Akbar, now pitched his camp within two miles of the ramparts, to cut off foragers. On April 6 General Sale determined on an assault on the enemy's encampment. The troops issued from the gate at dawn, and were received with a flanking fire from one of the ports. This was gallantly stormed. The advanced guard under Captain Havelock moved on, repelled two charges of Akbar's splendid cavalry, and drove them into the camp. The enemy were dislodged from every point, and pursued to the river, with loss of their guns, equipage and ammunition". Vide Dicty. Eng. Histy.

THE MOST DISTINGUISHED ORDER OF ST MICHAEL AND ST GEORGE.

KNIGHT GRAND CROSS.

49611 The Collar. Formed alternately of lions of England, of Maltese crosses, and of the ciphers S.M. and S.G. having in the centre the imperial crown, over two winged lions passant-guardant, each holding a book, and seven arrows. At the opposite ends of the collar are two similar lions. The whole is gilt except the crosses, which are of white enamel, and is linked together by small gilt chains.

The Badge. A gilt cross of fourteen points of white enamel, having in the centre, on one side the Archangel St. Michael encountering Satan, and on the other, St. George on horseback, encountering a dragon, within a blue circle, on which the motto of the Order is inscribed. The Cross is surmounted by the Imperial crown and is worn by a Knight Grand Cross to the Collar.

The Star. Seven rays of silver, having a small ray of gold between each of them, and over all cross of St. George, Gules. In the centre is a representation of the Archangel St. Michael encountering Satan, within a blue circle, inscribed with the motto, AUSPICUM MELIORIS Aevi. The enamel is slightly fractured in several places otherwise extra fine. R.R.R. 75 " "

* Instituted 27th. April 1818, for the natural born subjects of the Crown of the United Kingdom as may have held or shall hold high and confidential offices within His Majesty's colonial possessions, and in reward for services to the crown in relation to the foreign affairs of the Empire, etc.

For his work on BECKER Dr Hill was awarded the Biennial Prize of the Academy of Inscriptions, Paris.

DIES FOR FALSE COINS

In the possession of the Museo Nazionale Romano are more than 1000 dies for making false coins, for the most part produced by the electrotyping process; about a hundred are however hand-engraved in steel. The various classes of coins and medals are represented in approximately the following numbers: Greek coins, 232; Roman 520; Medieval and Modern 294.

The Istituto Italiano di Numismatica, in agreement with the Direction of the Museum, has undertaken the publication of impressions from these dies, with descriptions, in a quarterly volume with about 40 plates. An invitation issued some years ago for subscriptions to defray the cost of this work having met with inadequate response the publication has not proceeded. As, however, it is highly desirable, in the interest of museums and private collectors, that the forgeries from these dies should be exposed, the invitation is now renewed. Promises to subscribe at the rate of £1.10s. sterling or 6 dollars will be received by Dr. G. F. Hill, British Museum, London, W. C. 1, or Messrs. Spink and Son, Ltd., 17 Piccadilly, London, W. 1. Payment should not be actually made until notice is received that the work is ready for distribution.

EDITORIAL.

The enlarged and improved first number of this periodical for current year having been cordially appreciated by our numerous readers, we have endeavoured in the present issue to maintain the her standard, and, as foreshadowed in that number, some interesting features will be found under the headings of Numismatic Notes, Inedited Coins, Numismatic Queries and in Answers to respondents. Notes, suggestions and criticisms from our readers, in the view of increasing the usefulness of this periodical, are cordially invited.

A new departure in employing full-paged plates will be noticed. Special attention is also called in this issue to the magnificent Roman Republican Collection — a cabinet quite unsurpassed for the superb preservation of almost every piece.

Nor should we omit to call the attention of beginners and young collectors to the cheap English silver coins which have been specially listed for this number, in which list they will find some excellent coins at bargain prices. This list we hope to continue in succeeding numbers of the Numismatic Circular.

THE COINS OF THE DUTCH EAST INDIES.

An Introduction to the Study of the Series (excluding those specially struck for India and Ceylon)

BY SIR JOHN BUCKNILL M.A. (OXON).

But its increased political and military burdens destroyed its profits; it was, at every renewal of its twenty-one year Charters, taxed more and more heavily; it was financially embarrassed even in the early eighteenth century; and, when, on the conquest of Holland by the French revolutionary armies, the fall of the Government of the Stadtholder and the establishment of the Batavian Republic in 1798, it was, in that year, dissolved, it was completely bankrupt! Sic transit!

During its existence of practically two centuries, this powerful Corporation struck large quantities of coinage of considerable variety; and, in dealing with the issues of this long period, it is necessary to consider separately those struck in the East Indies and those minted in Europe. Of the former, there was an issue of silver and bronze in the middle years of the seventeenth century; and, again, from about 1744 until the dissolution of the Company, there were issues of gold, silver and bronze and of some—now extremely rare—pewter Doits. Of the latter, the issues (which were of silver and bronze only) commence from about the year 1726 and, also, run up to the close of the Company's existence.

These Occidentally and Orientally minted coins were, largely, current side by side; although not entirely so: some of the European issues probably did not often reach so far as Java; whilst those coined in that Island (at Batavia and Sourabaya) seldom went to Ceylon. But in the great Dutch trade entrepôt at Malacca all the coins no doubt came together and were intermingled further, both there and all over the Eastern area, with a strange medley of non-Dutch currencies. One feature, which is common to many of the pieces of both Western and Eastern origin, is the presence on them of the monogram “VE” which stands for the initials of the Vereenigde Oost-Indische Compagnie.

It must also be here mentioned, in conclusion, that, at various dates during the Company's control of the Dutch East Indies, quite a number of different kinds of coins of both gold and silver were, by order of the Administration, impressed at Batavia with some distinctive form of counterstamp for special local purposes and use; and it would appear that in some instances similar devices of imitative character were impressed on coins by private persons without any official authority.

A. Struck in the East Indies.

Gold.

Struck at Batavia, Java.

Although the Company produced in Java both silver and copper coins in the seventeenth century, it did not there mint gold until the eighteenth. These regular issues are dealt with exhaustively by Moquette in his Article “Ropijen Munt te Batavia van 1744-1808” (1910). The quantities coined being no means large all the gold of this period is now undoubtedly very rare. As was, at some times, the practice in British India, private persons could, as a rule, take bullion to the Mint and there have it turned into coin for their own use; but, although this was, as appears clearly from the still existing records at the Mint at Batavia, frequently done in the case of silver, nearly all the gold coinage seems to have been struck on the Company's own account.

The production of this gold coinage at Batavia was not continuous; and there were, strictly speaking, four periods during which, under the régime of the Company, gold coins were minted: namely from 1744-1748, in 1766, from 1783-1785 and from 1796-1798; and they all, with their practically identical Arabic inscriptions which appear on both sides of all the coins, bear a very strong family resemblance to each other; although they vary, of course, in size according to their denominations, of which there were several.

There always seems to have been difficulty in obtaining metal of adequate hardness from which to construct the Dies and they did not last long, it is noticeable, therefore, and particularly in the case of the silver coinage (which was, as might have been expected, produced in much greater quantity than was the gold) that there are frequently to be found marked variations in pieces of the same date.

In addition, however, to what may be regarded as these ordinary issues of gold coinage which have just been mentioned as emanating from the Batavian Mint, it must here be also noted that, at certain times, gold coins not struck in Java were by Official order counterstamped in Batavia for local use with some letter, device or word. The occasions upon which this sort of process was adopted were at least three in number, namely: in 1686, 1690 and 1753.

In 1686 Dutch European Gold Ducats were directed to be counterstruck with the letter “B”; in 1690 certain Japanese coinage was ordered to be counterstamped with the representation of a Lion; and in 1753 it was resolved that Dutch European Gold Ducats should be impressed with the word “Java” in Arabic script. There are, therefore, really seven groups of coins to be considered in dealing with the Company's gold currency; that is to say:

- a). 1686. Dutch European Gold Ducats counterstamped “B”.
- b). 1690. Japanese Gold pieces counterstamped with a Lion.
- c). 1744-1748. First Regular Issue.
- d). 1753. Dutch European Gold Ducats counterstamped “Java”.
- e). 1766. Second Regular Issue.
- f). 1783-1785. Third Regular Issue.
- g). 1796-1798. Fourth Regular Issue.

a). First group 1686

Dutch European Gold Ducats counterstamped “B”.

By a Resolution dated August 20th 1686 it was decided that twenty thousand gold Dutch Ducats, then in the Treasury at Batavia, should be counterstruck with the letter “B” (i.e. signifying “Batavia”) and that, when thus treated, such Ducats would, in circulation, be reckoned as of the enhanced value of two-and-a-quarter Rix-Dollars (in Dutch, “Ryksdaalders”): the Rix-Dollar was of the value of sixty Stivers and each counterstamped Ducat was thus regarded as worth one hundred and thirty five Stivers. These Ducats thus marked remained current until the year 1700 when they were all withdrawn from circulation.

8. Dutch Ducat counterstamped “B”. The writer has not been able to find that any specimen of a Ducat thus counterstamped has yet been discovered but there seems no very cogent reason why one should not still be found. The Ducat dated 1649 here figured indicates the type of coin which was, probably, overstruck.

Fig. 8.
From a coin in the British Museum.

b). Second group 1690.

Japanese pieces counterstamped with a Lion.

At this period, there were in circulation in the Dutch East Indies, together with much other foreign coinage, certain kinds of gold Japanese pieces known as the “Itzi Bu” and “Koban”. The former (sometimes spelled “Ichu Bu” or “Ichu Bo” and, in Dutch, "Itzeba") was a small rectangular gold coin which was first produced in 1559; it weighed about 4.5 grammes and was one fourth part of a "Ryo" which was a Japanese standard of value based originally upon weight.

The latter (sometimes spelled "Coban" or "Cupang" and, in Dutch, "Kobang") was a large, thin, flat, oval plaque of gold which first made its appearance in currency in the latter part of the sixteenth century; it was, approximately, equal in value to one "Ryo". It has been alleged that these plaques were first made by the Japanese in order to facilitate their trade dealings with the Portuguese; but Munro could find no definite evidence in support of this theory. At any rate they, or somewhat similar, plaques continued to be struck in Japan until the nineteenth century. It appears that, towards the end of the seventeenth century, many counterfeit specimens of both these sorts of Japanese coins were being put into circulation and, in order to enable these false examples to be detected by the Public, it was directed, by a Resolution dated June 8th 1690, that all the genuine pieces then or afterwards received in the Treasury should be counterstamped with the representation of a Lion; a device which has always been the typical emblem of the Netherlands.

9. Japanese "Itzi Bu" counterstamped with a Lion. The writer has not been able to ascertain that any specimen of a coin of this character has been yet discovered with the "Lion" counterstamp; but the type of piece which was presumably thus treated is well enough known and a specimen struck in the seventeenth century is figured below.

Munro describing a very similar coin (which he figures on his Plate 16 f. 3) minted in 1599 states that on the obverse is inscribed the legend "Ichi Bu" (the word "Ichi" meaning "One") whilst on the Reverse appears the signature of one "Mitsutsugu" an Official of the Mint.

Fig. 9.
From a coin in the British Museum.

10. Japanese "Koban" counterstamped with a Lion. Although the "Koban" of the seventeenth century is not of any very great rarity, examples counterstamped by the Dutch East Indian authorities with the Lion are of exceptional occurrence.

The few specimens of which the writer is aware correspond somewhat closely to a piece (without the countermark) which is described by Munro and figured on his Plate 17, f. 1.

They are large, thin, flat, oval plaques of gold originally stamped on the obverse with four impressions running in a straight line from the top to the bottom; a clear space lies in the centre. According to Munro, the topmost and the lowest of these impressions are representations of the flowers and leaves of a Japanese plant called the "Kiri" (Paulownia Imperialis) and these constituted the Crest of the Government of the day; the upper of the two remaining stamps represented the value and the lower was the signature of an Official of the Mint.

The reverse of the plaque is impressed in the centre with another signature (and sometimes with a letter indicating the period during which it was manufactured) but is not otherwise officially marked although they often bear various impressions which are probably the "Chops" or distinctive signs of firms or persons through whose hands the particular piece has passed.

The Batavian Government stamped, not very deeply, in the clear central space on the Obverse the figure of a Lion rampant facing to the left; several different punches must have been used for this purpose as, in the four pieces which the writer has been able to compare, these impressions markedly vary.

These four plaques are also slightly dissimilar in both size and weight; in length, from about 75 to 69 millimetres; in width, from about 43 to 39 millimetres and in weight from about 17.7 to 19.7 grammes.

Netscher and Van der Chijs figure a specimen on their Plate 27, f. 256.

c). Third group 1744-1748.

First Regular Issue.

It was, apparently, first decided to produce gold coinage at the Batavian Mint in the year 1744: the pieces were to be designated "Java Ducats" or "Derhams" and were to be of the value of four silver Rupees and of the weight of 4.28 grammes of twenty carat fineness; four silver Rupees were equal in value to six Guilders.

The Mint also undertook to coin for private individuals, at their request, gold pieces of $\frac{1}{2}$, $\frac{1}{4}$, 2 and 4 ducats. Of all these, however, only the One and Two (or Single and Double) Ducat pieces are known actually to have been produced.

But in 1746 a new type was minted consisting of Ducats and Double Ducats of the weights of 4.25 and 8.50 grammes respectively. All the gold coins of this group are of the utmost rarity: only a very few are known and it may well be that these do not disclose every form which was in fact minted (M. pp. 344-349).

11. 1744. Java Ducat. D. 23. Obv. In Arabic script, "Derham min Kompani Welandawi"; (i.e. Money of the Dutch (literally "Hollander") Company).
Rev. In Arabic script, "Ila djazirat Djawa al-Kabir"; (i.e. For the Island Java the Great). Above, a six-pointed star (probably a mark of the Mint-Master Theodorus Justinus Rheen whose period of office ran from August 7th 1744 to, approximately, August 1745). Below, the date, "1744", between two dots.

Apparently a few "Proofs" — five or six only — of this coin were struck. Moquette figures one example (Pl. 32, f. 627) from the Collection of the Royal Antiquarian Society of Amsterdam. He also figures (Pl. 32, f. 627) a trial essay, but without date or mint-mark, struck on a much defaced specimen of a Ducat of Holland which is in the Coin Cabinet at Vienna.

12. 1745. Java Ducat. D. 22 to 24 : it varied remarkably. W. 4.45 (B.M.).

Similar, generally, to No. 11 save for date.
 (N. & C. p. 99 and Pl. 2, f. 9; Steph. L. 6443; Moquette figures three. Pl. 32, ff. 629, 630, 631).

Fig. 12.
 From a coin in the British Museum.

13. 1746. Double Java Ducat. D. 26. Obv. Legend as in No. 11 but scroll-work (a rope-knot) both above and below.

Rev. Legend as in No. 11; above is the representation of a cock (probably, at this time, a mark of the Mint-Master Paulus Dorsman whose period of office ran from September 10th 1745 to June 18th 1751; when the Mint was closed). Below the Legend, two horizontal lines and, below them, the date "1746" enclosed in an ornamental scroll or bay.
 (N. & C. p. 99 and Pl. 2, f. 8; Moquette figures one specimen from the Batavian Museum. Pl. 32, f. 634.)

14. 1746. Java Ducat. W. 4.35. Monsieur L.A.P. de Lapeyrie in the Catalogue of his Collection (Batavia 1884) describes a Java Ducat of 1746 of the same type as that of No. 12. He gives its weight. The writer is indebted to Mr. Schulman for the above information.

15. 1746. Java Ducat. D. 22. W. 4.21. (B.M.). Similar, generally, to No. 13 but a smaller coin. Moquette figures two specimens; from examples in the British Museum and the Royal Mint Collection at Utrecht respectively (Pl. 32, ff. 632, 633).

16. 1747. Double Java Ducat. D. 26. 1. W. 8.42. (B.M.); D. 25. W. 8.50. (S.).

Similar, generally, to No. 13 save for date.
 Moquette knew two specimens; one in the British Museum and the other in the Royal Mint Collection at Utrecht: he figures one (Pl. 32, f. 635). The example in the British Museum was bought in 1853 at the sale in London of the collection of Mr. Charles Hurt of Wirksworth, Derbyshire. Mr. J. Schulman senior possessed a third specimen which he exhibited at the Colonial Exhibition at Amsterdam in the year 1883.

17. 1748. Double Java Ducat. D. 24. 3. Similar, generally, to No. 16 save for date; but, on the Obverse, the word "Dinar" (i.e. "Money") replaces the equally conventional expression for money "Derham". Moquette informs the writer that this coin, which is, so far as is at present known, unique, cost 500 florins (£ 41 13 s. 4 d.) and is in the Batavian Museum; he figures it (Pl. 32, f. 637).

Dutch European Gold Ducats counterstamped "Java".

By a Resolution of the Java Administration dated December 13th 1753 it was resolved that eleven thousand four hundred and fifty Dutch European Gold Ducats (which had just then arrived in Batavia for local use) and all such similar coins as might in future be received in the Treasury should be counterstamped with the word "DJAWA" (i.e. "JAVA") in Arabic characters.

These Ducats thus treated were to have in circulation a value of six Guilders and twelve Stivers which was a sum equivalent to twenty two "Schellings" or one hundred and thirty two Stivers: but those Ducats not thus counterstruck were to pass at the lower value of six Guilders only.

The object of the scheme was to try to keep this good gold coinage in local circulation.

REVIEWS.

COLLECTION DE MONNAIES GRECQUES H. DE NANTEUIL. 4to. 345 pp.; Album of LX Plates. Publishers: Jules Florange and Louis Ciani, Paris, 1925.

Price: £ 1.5.0.

For a number of years Monsieur H. de Nanteuil has been a keen collector of Greek coins and not missed any opportunity of adding to his cabinet from auction sales and the dealers' stocks. He has thus formed an important and well-selected representative collection of which the present descriptive catalogue is a record.

The Collection comprises exactly one thousand pieces extending over the whole field of Greek numismatics.

M. Babelon once stated with reason that "le simple classement de pièces grecques est le meilleur divertissement d'un homme de goût", and one may certainly say of the de Nanteuil collection that both an excellent taste and a first-rate knowledge and comprehension of Greek political economy and art have presided over its formation. M. de Nanteuil has selected each coin after careful study, and the coin has then become to him an individual friend who lived, bringing back with him glorious reminiscences of that golden age of immortal Greece. Each piece procured him those sensations which he so well describes in his foreword: "joie du collectionneur à qui elles donnent l'ivresse de posséder de purs chefs-d'œuvre, joie de l'artiste qui trouve en elles d'inépuisables sources d'inspiration, joie du poète qui près d'elles rêve à l'âme aiguë et brillante d'Hellas, à l'immortelle beauté des vierges de Sicile, joie du savant à qui elles entr'ouvrent les voiles de l'histoire, elles sont pour tous un perpétuel enseignement d'ordre, de clarté, de mesure et d'harmonie à l'égal d'un temple grec ou d'une tragédie d'Eschyle".

In his preface, M. de Nanteuil gives us a scholarly survey of the various periods of the Greek coinage from the sixth century to Roman times, which are illustrated by his coins.

In the Catalogue, he has not followed the usual geographical order. After Italy and Sicily, he has travelled along the African coast from West to East, continued from southern Asia to the North, and ended with Greece proper. This is perhaps as good an arrangement as another.

Each coin is carefully described, the weight given, references, provenance, and valuable notes are added embodying the most recent suggestions raised in connection with the metrology, and with the origin and history of the coin-types.

A rapid glance through the Plates brings before us a number of exceptionally rare or beautiful coins of Tarentum, Heraclea, Laüs, Metapontum, Thurium, Velia, Croton, Rhegium, Terina, Agrigentum, Camarina, Catana, Geta, Himera, Leontini, Messina, Naxos, Selinus, Syracuse (Arethusa facing, and five decadrachms), Carthage, Cyrene, Ptolemaic kings of Egypt, Bactrian rulers, Seleucids of Syria, Cilicia, Cyprus, Lycia, Caria, Rhodes, Ionia, Mysia (including electrum staters of Cyzicus and a gold stater of Lampsacus), Bosphorus, Pontus, Panticapaeum (2 gold staters, one of the earlier period), Abdera, Aenus, Amphipolis, Philippi (gold stater), Acanthus, Mende, Potidaea, Chalcidian League, Bisaltæ (octodrachm), Macedonian kings, Larissa, and other Thessalian mints, Pyrrhus of Epirus, Carystus, Eretria, Athens, Argos, Elis, Messene, Cnossus, Cydonia, Lyttus, Phaestus, Praesus, Melos, Naxos, Parium, Seriphos, and Thera.

The above nomenclature will give some idea of the scope of the collection and of the valuable material it contains, which through the catalogue now becomes available to students.

M. de Nanteuil has the satisfaction of having rendered a public service, for which all numismatists will be grateful and of having attached his name to a work of no mean scientific importance.

ÉTUDE SUR LES MESSAGERIES ET LES POSTES d'après des documents métalliques et imprimés, précédée d'un Essai numismatique sur les PONTS ET CHAUSSÉES. By Charles Florange.

Editors: J. Florange and L. Ciani, Paris, 1925.

4to 542 pp.; numerous illustrations in the text.

Price: 150 francs.

Collectors are more and more inclined to specialize in certain definite series. Many are interested in coins and medals relating to medicine, or printing, or aviation, to mention but a few of the subjects. The material thus accumulated provides useful and important information, which should be published for the benefit of science.

M. Jules Florange, the father of the author of the present work, is a well-known authority on French heraldry, seals and jetons. His Armorial du Jetonophile, in three volumes, is an indispensable manual for the study of French jetons. We surmise that it was he who laid the foundation of the collection which M. Jules Florange fils has since continued and M. Charles Florange has now described as a General Essay on Mails and the Post, from metallic and printed documents, preceded by a numismatic survey on Roads and Bridges.

The present work is quite unique in its character, and although primarily a catalogue, it forms a connected history of these public services, with exhaustive information on their organisation and administration. It throws much light on the methods of transport, ways and means of circulation of the French people from the earliest times to our days. The collating of so much material is the outcome of years of painstaking effort.

The Romans had some sort of postal service. Caesar, on his conquest of Gaul, instituted a service of runners, with relays, to communicate with Rome. A sestertius of Trajan, illustrated by M. Florange, shews us a representation of the VIA TRAIANA, and another of Nerva, also reproduced (fig. 540) commemorates the restoration in Rome of postal services after a period of trouble.

Charlemagne, in 807, organised three public posts in Italy, Germany and Spain. But the real creator of the French postal service was king Louis XI, who in 1464 issued an ordinance establishing it on an official basis.

In England, Edward III was the first to organise a public postal service. Queen Elizabeth established a service of runners on horseback. James I extended the post to foreign countries. Charles I centralized in this official service all the private correspondence, and instituted it in England and Scotland (1635). In 1657 the office of Postmaster-general was created. Pitt, on the advice of John Palmer, introduced the mailcoaches in 1784. But to Rowland Hill we owe the present perfected postal service, which has won for him a popular name and a grave at Westminster.

Although M. Florange's work deals naturally with France, other countries are not forgotten, and he has given all the information that he could collect on the same subject in connection with the various states of Europe, Asia and America.

The numerous illustrations and plates give added interest to the book, which deserves the sincere congratulations of all interested. We trust that the author will be amply rewarded for his laborious undertaking by a ready sale of his work and the satisfaction that he has rendered an eminent service to collectors and students of social history.

LES CHEMINS DE FER AUTREFOIS ET AUJOURD'HUI ET LEURS MÉDAILLES COMMÉMORATIVES. Notice historique suivie d'un second supplément et d'une Table récapitulative des médailles de tous les pays. By Auguste Moyaux, ingénieur honoraire des mines.

Bruxelles. Charles Dupriez. 1925.

Large 4to 50 pp. 1 Plate.

M. Moyaux's original work was published in 1905, and the first supplement in 1910. The present additions comprise 98 medals, bringing up the total of railway medals described by the author to the number of 805.

Many of the items catalogued in this second supplement were issued since 1910, and M. Moyaux feels confident that he has not missed many of the pre-war medals.

There are a number of collectors of railway medals and these will no doubt welcome the present publication of addenda.

In his introduction M. Moyaux refers to the celebrations which took place in July 1925 in connection with the centenary of the Stockton-Darlington railway and the International Railway Congress. As early as 1809, the Gloucester-Cheltenham Railway Company had obtained from Parliament a concession to carry passengers and goods, but it is more rational to date the Railway Era from the opening, in 1830, of the Liverpool-Manchester line.

George Stephenson's title of Father of the locomotive engine is perhaps better deserved by Trevithick who was the first, in 1804, to build an engine to run on the tramway lines from Merthyr to Tidwill. But Stephenson's merit lay in that he was an indefatigable champion of the new mode of locomotion and thus a pioneer of the Railways. His type of locomotive "The Rocket" was the first to meet in a satisfactory manner the needs of a good working.

A medal on the Centenary of the Railways, reproduced in frontispiece, and published by Messrs A. H. Baldwin & sons, shows on the obv. the conjoined busts of Edward Pease and George Stephenson, and on the rev. Vulcan, holding in l. a hammer and in r. a locomotive engine of the 1825 type; above which is depicted another of the "Pacific" type, dated 1925, with the motto: FIRST IN THE WORLD. The medal is the work of Gilbert Bayes.

In the present supplement 8 British medals are described, including two Canadian ones.

The firm of Stefano Johnson are responsible for a number of recent Italian and Swiss railway medals.

A useful table at the end of the book recalls not only the new medals but all those described in the preceding catalogues, and thus brings the work to a completion.

CATALOGO DELLA RACCOLTA NUMISMATICA PAPADOPOLI-ALDOBRANDINI. CIVICO MUSEO CORRER. Compilato da Giuseppe Castellani. Due Volumi. Small Folio. Vol. I, 378 pp.; Vol. II, 410 pp. + XIV Plates. Venezia. A cura del comune. 1925.

The famous Collection of Italian coins and particularly Venetian coins and medals, formed by the late Count Nicolò Papadopoli-Aldobrandini stands second only to that of H. M. the King of Italy's. It comprises no less than 2214 gold, 8509 silver and 6644 bronze coins and medals, making a grand total of 17367 pièces.

By his will, Count Papadopoli bequeathed this magnificent collection to the Civico Museo Correr of Venice, under the proviso that the Municipality should publish, within three years from his death, a scientific and comprehensive catalogue of the collection for the benefit of students and collectors.

Signor Giuseppe Castellani, the well-known authority on Venetian coins, who was for many years Count Papadopoli's collaborator and secretary, was entrusted with the compilation of the catalogue now before us, in two beautiful large quarto volumes, which are excellent in every respect and speak highly for the compiler's competency and do great credit to the printers.

Within the compass of 800 pages the whole of the collection has been described in tabular form, with the indications of order-number, metal, denomination, references, and when necessary, full descriptions, weight, dimension, state of preservation, and a space left for observations and notes.

By only giving references to the coins already described in other well-known works as the Corpus Nummorum Italicorum, Promis, and special publications, Signor Castellani has saved a great deal of space and this is a precedent that may be followed with advantage by future compilers of similar catalogues.

The work is divided into XIV chief headings :

I. Ostrogoths and Goths — Eastern Emperors — Emperors and Kings of Italy.

II. House of Savoy ; cities and principalities of Piedmont.

III. Genoa — cities and principalities of Liguria.

IV. Milan — cities and principalities of Lombardy.

V. Mantua and other principalities of the Gonzaga family.

VI. Venice — cities and principalities of the Veneto.

VII. Parma — Duchy of Parma and Piacenza ; cities and principalities of the Parmesan territory.

VIII. House of Este — the Seignories of Mirandola and Correggio.

IX. Florence — Grand Duchy of Tuscany — cities and principalities of Tuscany and Lunigiana.

X. Rome — The Papal Coinage.

XI. Cities and principalities of Romagna, The Marshes, Umbria and Latium.

XII. Southern Italy and Sicily.

XIII. The Balkan Peninsula and the Latin Orient.

XIV. Varia : Imitations and Counterfeits of Italian coins ; Incerta ; Italian issues made abroad ; Ancient Forgeries ; Doubtful coins ; Pseudo-Monete ; Modern Forgeries ; Foreign coins ; Tesserae, counters and coin-like weights ; Leads ; Coin-weights ; Ducal Bullae : Venetian medals or connected with Venice ; Medals of Numismatists or connected with numismatics ; Papal Medals ; Varied Italian Medals ; Foreign Medals ; Seals and Dies ; Addenda and Duplicates.

To each section are appended notes in explanation of special types, on alternative readings and attributions, varying opinions of writers, and records of general interest ; these afford much important historical and scientific material.

Many of the special varieties in the Papadopoli collection have been published by himself in the Italian numismatic periodicals from 1871 to the time of his death. The Venetian series are incorporated in his great standard work, Le Monete di Venezia, in three volumes, the first of which appeared in 1893, the second in 1907, and the third in 1919. This magnum opus of 2380 pages and 156 plates forms a complete history of the coinage and political economy of Venice.

We might refer to many coins of special interest described in Signor Castellani's catalogue, but we think it best to refer students to the work itself.

There is no doubt that the Catalogue of the Papadopoli Collection will rank with such publications as the Corpus, Serafini's catalogue of the Vatican coins, and will be found indispensable as a work of reference.

LES MONNAIES GAULOISES OU CELTIQUES TROUVÉES EN ALSACE par Robert Forrer, conservateur du Musée préhistorique et gallo-romain de Strasbourg. Avec 110 figures dans le texte et 7 planches. 8vo. 116 pp. Mulhouse, 1925.

All students of Celtic numismatics know Dr Forrer's standard work "Keltische Numismatik der Rhein- und Donaulande", published in 1907. As the owner of an important collection of Celtic coins, and keeper of the Prehistoric and Gallo-Roman antiquities in the Strasbourg museum, the author of the volume before us, has an unsurpassed knowledge of all numismatic information connected with Alsace. No one was better suited to collate the material available in that province, so fertile in finds of Roman and Celtic coins, and we may be grateful that he was persuaded to publish this important monograph.

Dr Forrer enumerates in their alphabetical order about thirty localities where Celtic coins are preserved or where finds of such have been made, and he extends his investigation to some neighbouring places, as Basle, Augst, Baden-Baden, Robache, etc.

The Colmar Museum owns one of the very rare Jambons de Nismes", from a find at Blienschwihr. This is the middle-bronze of Agrippa and Augustus, with the adjunction of a boar's leg and hoof. Dr Forrer regards this coin as a charm, which is probably correct. At Ehl, Housen, and especially Mulhouse, important hoards have from time to time been brought to light. At the latter place (1875-1878) and also at St Louis-Basle (1883) two valuable finds of Regenbogenschüssel were made, including many varieties, and jewellery.

Too little attention has been paid formerly to the coinage of the Celts, but as more light is thrown on the subject, the more interesting it becomes ; but one feels there is yet much to be learned.

LES DÉCORATIONS ET INSIGNES DES CHAPITRES NOBLES DE FRANCE AVANT 1789. By Charles and Jules Florange, 4to. 32 pp. Paris, 1925.

Published at 10 francs.

This is another valuable work on a subject which has never been considered as a whole.

Many of the French ecclesiastical noble orders, some of which date from the VIIth century, were invested with special privileges and royal prerogatives, and had each their distinct decorations. Some 36 of these are described in the present work and several are illustrated.

OBSERVATIONS UPON THE COINAGE STRUCK FOR THE BRITISH EAST INDIA COMPANY'S SETTLEMENT OF PENANG OR PRINCE OF WALES ISLAND (1786 TO 1828).

The above is the title of a very interesting brochure by Sir John A. S. Bucknill M. A. who has searched old records and from them compiled a history of the Island and some adjoining territory administered as one settlement by the East India Company's Administrators. It covers the why and wherefore for the Settlement and the reasons for a special currency, referring to the "bewildering medley of monies of different intrinsic and often of varying exchange value" that was in use in the commerce of the place. Many official documents are quoted and the correct attribution, of pieces of hitherto unknown locality, now ascertained. Full descriptions of the coins are given and 23 of them are illustrated on two plates from photographs. It is one of those very thorough attempts by competent numismatists to bring the knowledge of the various coinages of the Empire to perfection, who, by limiting their series within certain bounds, master every detail, and in time produce a most exact and complete work.

OBITUARY.

DR. A. ANDREWS.

Dr. Arthur Andrews died on Wednesday, October 14 th, 1925, at his residence 80, Murdoch Street, Cremorne, Sydney, New South Wales, Australia. He was born in 1848 and was for forty-five years a well-known resident of the Albury District of New South Wales where he arrived in 1874. Besides being at the head of a number of local public bodies, he made valuable contributions to the historical and geographical literature of Albury and the Upper Murray.

In a letter dated June 16th, 1913, he wrote to me from Albury as follows:—

"My own spare time has been occupied lately in collecting the early history of the district for about fifty miles round this town. I published a History of the Town itself last year, it being one of the oldest inland towns on this Continent. It only dates from 1839 and the first settlers only arrived here in 1835. To keep the memories of the Pioneers green was my object and to try to counteract in some small measure the tendency of the rising generation to forget all that their forefathers did for them in fighting against enormous odds and making life possible and bearable in these remote parts. Now we are on the main line of rail from Melbourne (190 miles) and Sydney (400 miles) and have three trains daily each way."

Dr. Andrews left Albury in 1919 and afterwards resided in Sydney. He was a keen and accomplished Numismatist and a few years ago catalogued the Collection of Australian Tokens in the Mitchell Library, Sydney. The catalogue was afterwards printed and published in 1921. It is the best book on that branch of numismatics.

He was a Past President of the Australian Numismatic Society and also of the Victoria Numismatic Society.

Now rich in years he rests from his labours and the loss to numismatics is very great. I desire respectfully to pay my most sincere homage to his memory and condole with his family in the sad bereavement which has befallen them.

Green sod above
Lie light, lie light,
Good night, old friend,
Good night, good night!

INEDITED COINS.

Information for this column gladly received. If casts are supplied we will have an illustration made where the coin is of sufficient interest.

Half-Unicorn of James III of Scotland of a completely unknown type. Mm. cross $\text{IKQO BVX DEI GRA REX SCOTORVM}$. Unicorn and shield as usual. R. Same mint mark. XPLVVM $\text{FKQ POPVLV TVVM DRQ}$ trefoil stops (this legend is usually found on the Rider and parts). Large wavy star (without the usual cross); letter J for Jacobus within small circle in centre.

NUMISMATIC QUERIES.

In every issue a few numismatic problems will be published for our readers' consideration. Replies are solicited, which we shall publish in a forthcoming issue.

Q1. — Is it feasible to suppose that Offa found a penny coin-age in existence on his arrival in Kent?

Q2. — Did Offa strike any coins outside Kent and East Anglia?

Q3. — Should a special significance be put on the coins of the moneyers Ibba, Ealred and Eoba, all of whom had their names on Offa's coins on the side with the portrait? Were they people of special importance? If so, who were they?

Q4. — Is there any accounting for the serpent that is found on a number of the coins of Offa?

Q5. — Were changes in the corn producing areas of classic times reflected in the coinage?

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS

We shall be pleased to answer questions of general numismatic interest in this column each issue.

(R.A.S.) Coins were struck at Huntingdon under Eadwig, Aethelred II, Canute, Harold I, Harthacnut, Edward the Confessor, Harold II, William I, William II and Stephen.

(N.T.) The correct names for Roman bronze, commonly called First, Second and Third Brass are:

	Early Empire	Late Empire.
First Brass	Sestertius (4 asses)	Sestertius (double follis ?)
Second Brass	Dupondius (2 asses)	Follis
	As (one-sixteenth of a denarius)
Third Brass	Semis (1/2 as)	Centenionalis (?)
	Quadrans (1/4 as)	Half-Follis (?)

For further information see Roman Imperial Coinage by Mattingly and Sydenham.

(R.N.S.) The following Roman Emperors struck coins in England. Carausius, Allectus, Diocletian, Maximianus Hercules, Constantius Chlorus, Galerius Maximianus, Severus II, Maximinus II, Daza, Licinius I, Constantine the Great, Crispus, Constantinus II, Constans, Constantius II, Magnus Maximus; also the Princesses, Fausta and Helena.

(H.P) The Egyptian coppers commonly called 'money of account' are a species of coin weights struck owing to the difficulty of combining the Attic with the Native Egyptian system and particularly in adjusting the relations between coins of gold and silver on the one hand and coins of copper on the other.

(B.R.E.T) The word 'guinea' originated in the reign of Charles II, and was made current by a proclamation of March 27, 1663. It received its name from the gold of which it was made, and which was brought from Guinea by the 'Company of Royal Adventurers of England trading into Africa'. Its original value was twenty shillings but in the early years of William III its value was as high as £ 1 8 s. but by 1698 it was reduced to £ 1. 1 s. 6 d. On December 22, 1717, the guinea was reduced to 21 s., which value it retained until abolished.

NUMISMATIC SOCIETIES, MUSEUMS, &c.

KENT NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

The annual meeting was held at the Maidstone Museum on Friday evening, 8th Jan., with Mr. Walter H. Day in the chair. Mr. J. Shirley-Fox, R.B.A., F.R.N.S., was elected President, with the Hon. H. A. Hannen, Lord Grantley, Messrs. G. Foster Clark, G. E. Duveen, J. Tomlin, R. Cooke, W. Jacob, together with the Mayors of Canterbury, Dover, Maidstone and Rochester as Vice-Presidents. The other officers elected were : Hon. Director, Mr. H. Risch ; Hon. Treasurer, Mr. A. E. Horton ; Hon. Secretary, Mr. J. W. Bridge ; and Messrs. E. H. Clark, E. T. Clark, W.H. Day, H. Munn, J.H. Hicks, and Dr. A. Spencer Edwards were elected on the Council. After the report and balance sheet had been adopted, Mr. J. W. Bridge gave a paper on "The Derivation of the Names of Coins", followed by Mr. Walter H. Day, on "Old Bank Notes," which he illustrated with examples, including notes issued by the old Maidstone and other Kentish banks. The following coins were exhibited : By Mr. Bridge, a gold Rose-Noble of Edward IV., from the Bristol Mint, a Roman sestertius of Claudius, with the counter-mark N.C.A.P.R. of Nero, and Dominican 6 bits, made from a piece of silver cut from the centre of a Spanish dollar ; Mr. E. H. Clark, a set of hop-tokens of Charles Levett, of Newenden, Kent, dated 1865 ; Mr. Day, a Scottish Bawbee of Charles, a paper-maker's mould showing method of watermarking paper, and a collection of English and foreign Bank notes ; Mr. H. Elgar, a double Tournois of Henry III, of France, a Roman coin of Diocletian, struck in London after his abdication, a collection of Roman family silver coins, and various other Roman coins found in the neighbourhood, from the Museum collection ; Mr. Rosen, a cabinet of Edward VII. coins, including the £5 and £2 pieces, and various gold coins of America, France, etc.

YORKSHIRE NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

An ordinary Meeting of the above Society was held on 24th October last, in the Municipal Museum, Albion Street, Hull, the President, Mr. Frank Heeley, occupying the chair. The chief item on the Agenda was an interesting collection of Yorkshire Volunteer badges, belt plates etc., exhibited and described by Mr. Thos. Sheppard M.Sc. This consisted of belt plates in silver and brass of the First North York Local Militia, Bedale Volunteers, Royal York Fencibles, York Volunteers, Halifax Local Militia etc., gorgets of the Loyal Sheffield Volunteers etc., cap badges of the East Yorkshire, 1st North Riding, and 1st West Riding Rifle Volunteers, the East Yorkshire Militia, and many other interesting relics connected with Yorkshire military history. Mr H. Armstrong, on behalf of Mr J. Digby Firth F.L.S., exhibited and described a series of German commemorative war medals. Most of the medals were issued for the benefit of the German and Austrian Red Cross funds. They were struck in zinc and were issued towards the close of the late war. The medals will not be lasting, as the material of which they are made rapidly oxidizes, zinc being used, as being the only metal not required for munition purposes. Early in the war (1916) the nickel currency of Germany was rapidly withdrawn and iron, and later, zinc pieces substituted. The designs of the various medals, some of which are of a futurist and impressionist character, are by first-rank German artists. Some of the portrait medals are extremely fine, and it is to be regretted they are not struck in a more lasting metal. Other exhibits were made and described as follows :

By the President : — 14 silver commemorative coins and medals bearing portraits of the ex-Kaiser, his father, and grandfather, German iron crosses (1st & 2nd classes) satirical medals etc.

By Mr T. Pickergill : — 56 seventeenth century tokens representing each county in England except Northumberland, and a crown piece of William III countermarked "S.H."

By Mr W. Sykes : — A collection of 18th century halfpenny tokens, many of which were from the collection of Mr James Atkins, also interesting autograph letters from the latter, having reference to his collection.

By Mr G.L. Shackles F.R.N.S. — A highly interesting exhibit of medals of the Grand Masters of the Knights of St. John of Malta. Mr Shackles supplemented his exhibit with much historical detail connected with events in the lives of the various Grand Masters, and all the medals exhibited were exceedingly rare ; one of Gregory Caraffa (1680-1690) being considered to be unique, there being no specimen in the British Museum, and no mention of the medal in the standard works by Schembri and Furse.

By Mr J.F. Musham F.E.S. — 46 Coin Scales of different types, a notable addition to his already large collection in the Hull Museum, a Roman poise weight in the form of a very fine bronze mask, and valued at £ 35, and interesting coin-weights from the Morten Collection. Also several counterfeit coins, and amusing news cuttings relating to forgeries, coins, and coin-weights.

By Mr A. Rider A.M.I.E.E. — Bronze medallion representing Eros and Psyche, and others with various mythological deities. Also various gold coins mounted by means of a new device invented by himself.

By Mr A.L. Darneley : — Five tetradrachms of the Ptolemies, and several bronze coins of Syracuse.

By Mr Harness : — An unpublished 17th century token of Wainfleet (Lincs) dated 1667 and having reference to the still-existent Red Lion Inn.

At the close of the Meeting the members were entertained to tea by Mr T. Sheppard M.Sc., who was cordially thanked for his hospitality on the motion of the President, seconded by Mr J.F. Musham.

NUMISMATIC NOTES.

INDIAN CURRENCY.

PROPOSED GOLD COINAGE.

Bombay.

The Indian Currency Commission, which is meeting in Bombay for a fortnight before going to Calcutta, is hearing a great deal of evidence in support of the gold standard and gold currency for India. Several witnesses, including the Chamber of Commerce, advocate the adoption of the gold standard because of the extent to which India's foreign trade is financed in sterling, and also because it would give the rupee greater stability. The Chamber of Commerce have advocated the fixing of the value of the rupee at 1s 6d. Eminent professors state that the only sound monetary policy for India is the establishment of the gold standard and a gold currency. The greatest economic need of India to-day, they say, is capital with the gold standard. India's gold would be used for the creation of credit internally and externally. They propose that a gold coin similar to the sovereign, and called the "mohur", be minted immediately. The suggested ratio is 15 rupees to one "mohur."

[The "Mohur" was originally a Persian gold coin, but was used in India from the sixteenth century onwards, and was common currency in the early part of the nineteenth century, its nominal value being about fifteen rupees.]

FREE STATE COINAGE BILL.

PROPOSED TOKEN CURRENCY.

DUBLIN, Wednesday. — The text of the Irish Free State Coinage Bill, which is issued to-day, makes it pretty clear that behind the proposed issue of token coinage, there lies the ultimate idea of an absolutely separate Free State currency. This is evident from the provision that the Free State Executive Council may by order prescribe a date after which British silver and bronze coins should cease to be legal tender. In the meantime, however, they remain legal tender. There are some forty clauses in the bill. These provide, among other things, that the existing denominations of coins shall be retained, and that they shall bear their present fractional value in relation to the sovereign. The sixpenny and threepenny pieces shall be made of nickel. Half-crowns, florins, and shillings shall be 75 per cent. fine silver and 25 per cent. copper alloy. Their actual value as metal will be greater than that of the present British coins of like denomination, which are 50 per cent. silver, and 50 per cent. alloy. The bronze coins will be composed of 95½ per cent. copper, 3 per cent. tin, and 1½ per cent. zinc.

The second reading of the bill will be taken next Wednesday. It is understood that this new coinage will be in circulation in August next.

MONGOLIA HAS COINS.

Mongolia's foot is in the path of progress. Until ten years ago her only currency consisted of bricks of tea ; to-day she has a coinage — minted, of course, in Russia, and with Russian inscriptions. She has, on paper at least, an excellent railway. Now she has postage stamps ; and it is not the least of the mysteries of Asia that the designations of value on those stamps, ranging from a cent to a dollar, are in English as well as Mongolian. Certainly, the philatelic world is in the presence of a novelty worthy of the keenest competition.

FOR SWITZERLAND.

100-franc pieces to the amount of half-a-million francs will be minted in the near future ; they will have the same effigies as the present 20-franc pieces.

Swiss Observer, Dec. 1925.

SIXPENCES DATED 1925.

There are two varieties of the British Imperial Sixpence bearing the date 1925. One has a comparatively narrow ornamented rim on the obverse and reverse, and is similar to those previously coined from 1911 to 1924, both years inclusive. The other is slightly different in design. The rim on the obverse and reverse is broader and its ornamentation is more pronounced.

HENRY GARSIDE.

VAST OUTPUT OF THE ROYAL MINT.

COINS FOR MANY NATIONS.
SCOTS' THREEPENNY BIT.

More than 223,000,000 coins were struck by the Royal Mint during 1924, a number exceeded only in a few of the war and post-war years. This is one of the many interesting facts contained in the fifty-fifth annual report of the Mint, issued by Colonel Robert Johnson, its deputy-master and engraver of his Majesty's seals. The threepenny piece, it is mentioned, is especially in demand north of the Tweed, but, with some notable exceptions, is unpopular in England, and particularly in London.

The gradual return from paper to metallic currencies all over Europe showed a marked acceleration during the year, and few countries remain who have not abandoned or made arrangements to abandon, their low-value paper. New or reviving nationalities, in their coinage systems, have adopted various alloys hitherto unused for the purpose. The report is valuable not only as recording the activity of the Mint in producing coinage for various nations, but also is a record of the artistic side of coin and medal work.

*Maundy.

The Deputy Master points out that some progress has been made in the experiments with new designs for our own British coinage, and continued trials have been made to adapt the existing Royal effigy more suitably to the ideal requirements for coinage and medal work. An attempt was made at the British Empire Exhibition to give a fillip to medal work, but over and above that was the idea to represent the special significance of the Royal Mint and its branches "as the one remaining service which is common to the Empire as a whole, still producing, as far as the gold coinage is concerned, identical coins which are legal tender throughout all his Majesty's Dominions, and thus constituting, with the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, an outward and visible sign of Imperial unity under the Crown."

During 1924 silver coins of 925 fineness were withdrawn, and recoined to the value of £1,500,000, and further quantities were also withdrawn and sold as bullion. The position as regards the threepenny piece, says the Deputy Master, is a peculiar one. "It is certainly in demand in certain parts of the country, and especially north of the Tweed. With some notable exceptions, as for instance in the dockyard towns, it is unpopular in England, and particularly in London. But apparently the Scotsman when visiting London provides himself with a large supply of this nimble little piece, since stocks of it are constantly accumulating in the London banks. Arrangements have been made to counterbalance this process by passing the demands from Scotland on to the London banks. The existing stock of these pieces is thus kept in more constant circulation, while not increasing the total supply by the issue of new pieces from the Mint." There was a steady demand during the year for half-pence and farthings.

MONEY FOR RUSSIA.

An order for 40,000,000 poltinniks (half-rouble pieces) in 900 fine silver was placed by the Soviet Government with the Royal Mint. Large quantities of copper five-copek pieces were also ordered; a contract was entered into to supply one and two-zloty pieces (of 750 fine silver) for the Polish Government; and preliminary negotiations to supply two-lati pieces for Latvia and the entire silver coinage for Lithuania. The gradual return from paper to metallic currencies all over Europe, the Deputy Master remarks, showed a marked acceleration during the year, and "few countries now remain who have not abandoned or made arrangements to abandon, their dirty, low-value paper." With the approach of a more normal position most countries have hastened to revert to metal. In this country we escaped inconvenience by a reduction in silver content; in nearly all European countries silver coin disappeared from circulation, and many even abandoned their bronze and nickel currencies. "The flood of iron, zinc, brass, aluminium, and even earthenware coinage and local tokens, which was rushed in to provide urgent national needs, marks an epoch in the history of coinage comparable only with the Revolutionary and Napoleonic epochs and their aftermath." New or reviving nationalities, in their new coinage systems, have adopted various alloys which are new in the history of coinage. France, Italy, and Belgium, as members of the Latin Monetary Union, were precluded from returning to any metal but silver for the five, two, or one-franc pieces. Meanwhile, the exchange value or the franc or the lira made it impossible to use a material of an intrinsic value so greatly in excess of the present face value of these coins.

The Deputy Master notes that Governments all over the world appear likely to attach great importance to psychology in matters of finance, "and in these turbulent days it is perhaps refreshing to find one subject at any rate, namely the composition of the coins that they jingle in the pockets, upon which the democracies of the world are believed by their leaders to show conservatism, however unreasonable it may be." There could be no better illustration of this than in Russia, where the weights, sizes, and composition of the coins are identical with those issued under the Tsars.

The number of medals issued by the Royal Mint in 1924 was 107,052, as against 44,131, in the previous year. The following table of sales at Wembley is interesting :

Keepsake medals, in silver, nickel, or bronze.....	113,487
"King Alfred" pennies.....	10,434
Royal Mint medals in silver or bronze.....	1,917
"London" plaquettes in silver or bronze.....	177
Commemorative plaquettes in silver or bronze.....	120

KINGS.

Syracuse.

A young Sicilian, who had held a position of importance in the Syracusan contingent of the mixed army which Pyrrhus had led against the Carthaginians, rose to power in the disturbances which followed his departure in 276 B.C. His name, Hiero, possibly indicates that he originally came from the island of Hieria, one of the Lipari group just to the north of Sicily. Having been elected supreme general by the army he soon succeeded in obtaining complete power in the Syracusan republican government. Subsequent to his defeat of the Mamertines in 270 he assumed the title of βασιλεύς. First of all the Sicilian tyrants he issued coins bearing his own portrait. They represent him as a handsome young man with a firm mouth and a strong chin.

- 49704 Hiero II. B.C. 274-216. Α. Obv. Head of Hiero l. hair bound by diadem. R. Horseman in helmet and chlamys galloping r. with spear in rest. Ex. ΙΕΡΩΝΟΣ. Beautifully patinated. E.F. » 12 6

In 216, after long and prosperous reign, Hiero died and was succeeded by his grandson Hieronymus. This youth broke with the Romans and allied himself with the Carthaginians just then in the flush of their success at Cannae. During his short reign Hieronymus issued pentadrachms, didrachms and drachms bearing his portrait. They are carefully executed and well struck; they delineate decidedly weaker features than those of his grandfather.

Macedon.

After the death of Philip the Second in 336 B.C. his son Alexander the Great succeeded, endowed with even greater ability, to his father's army. He carried his arms from Greece to India. It is a remarkable fact that, in making a new issue of coinage, although he openly claimed divine honours as the son of Zeus Ammon, he never placed his own portrait on his coins. However Lysimachus who ruled as regent in Thrace from 323 to 281 placed the portrait of the young Alexander on his coins, giving him the divine attribute of the horns of Ammon. They represent him as a young man who, in spite of his thick lips, is fairly handsome.

After Alexander's untimely death, five kings ruled in Macedonia in quick succession none of whom issued any coin bearing their portraits. In 306 Demetrius Poliorcetes 'the besieger of cities' ascended the throne.

The victory gained by himself and his father in 306 over Ptolemy really re-established the Macedonian kingdom. He issued a gold stater, and a silver tetradrachm, drachm and half-drachm, bearing his portrait. These are not so carefully taken as some, and represent him as young with a small mouth.

Pyrrhus of Epirus, Antigonos Doson, and Demetrius II have not left us any portraits of themselves. The last-named left his throne to his son Philip V a youth of about seventeen, in 220. Six years later he entered into alliance with Hannibal, and so into hostilities with Rome. The Romans were not anxious to fight him, and concluded peace with him in 205. Thereupon he claimed the coast of Asia Minor as his portion of the Ptolemaic dominions, now under the rule of a boy. Attalus of Pergamum however appealed to Rome who, jealous of his restless activity, responded as soon as the battle of Zama in 202 left her free. Flamini, us defeated him once and for all at Cynoscephalae in 197.

In spite of his forced alliance with the Romans, Philip cherished his hatred of Rome and laboured to prepare troubles for his enemies in the East. Dying in 179 he left his throne and his work to his son Perseus, who allied himself with Antiochus IV of Syria and Prusias of Bithynia. The Romans, aware of his intrigues, declared war on him in 171 B.C. He lost both kingdom and freedom in 168 at Pydna, and ended his days as a prisoner. His coins are remarkable works of portraiture.

Pontus.

Mithradates 'the Persian' took advantage of the troubles following the downfall of Antigonos 'king of Asia' in 301 to erect for himself a small principality in the basin of the river Iris. This he expanded until all Pontic Cappadocia owned his sway, and he was able in 281 B.C. to assume the title of king. No coins are known either of himself, or of his son. His grandson however struck a very rare gold stater of the Alexandrian type. Mithradates III (220-185 B.C. ?) issued both tetradrachms and drachms bearing his own portrait executed in an altogether remarkable style. His son Pharnaces I (185-169 B.C.) continued the succession, and also issued coinage with his own portrait. He was succeeded by his brother Mithradates IV. He entered into alliance with Rome and Polybius mentions that he aided Attalus II of Pergamum against Prusias of Bithynia.

His son Mithridates VI, the Great was practically the last of the great kings of the East, and was indeed the one really important enemy with whom Rome found herself in rivalry during the 1st century B.C.

On his father's death the practical power fell with the regency to his mother Laodice whose portrait we have on very rare coins.

In 114 B.C. while still a youth he suddenly appeared in Sinope and deposed his mother. At one time he succeeded in the course of his ambitious career, in bringing practically all the near East and Greece under his sway. Though he was no doubt aided by the continued supineness of the Roman generals, until Lucullus and Pompey appeared, he owed his success largely to his own ability. He was a man of unusual courage and original ideas. He attracted loyalty by his personal beauty and prowess, and as being a true Persian by his descent from the Achaemenids. His coins depict a face of character and power though not strikingly handsome. His features betray no oriental cast and demonstrate how the pure Aryan type of the original Persians was maintained in the uplands of Asia Minor.

Bithynia.

In the year 298 B.C. Zipoetes, son of a previous satrap in Bithynia, defeated Lysimachus and assumed the title of king of the freed state of Bithynia. His son Nicomedes I (279-260) and grandson Ziaelus (260-228) both struck coins bearing their portraits, now very scarce. The son of the latter, Prusias I (228-183), struck tetradrachms depicting him as a middle-aged man with side whiskers. He actively pursued the interests of his kingdom, married Apama, sister of Philip V of Macedon, and left a strong state to his son Prusias II (183-149). This monarch entered into hostilities against Rome by marrying the sister of Perseus of Macedon. His affections apparently wandered elsewhere; he subsequently married a Thracian lady and sent no help to Perseus in his struggle with the Romans. The latter now heaped favours upon him as the rival of the powerful kingdom of Pergamum. He fell at last murdered by his son who succeeded him as Nicomedes II, 149-120. The reigns of this king, as also of his son Nicomedes III (120-94) were uneventful. His grandson Nicomedes IV (94-74), pursuing as his predecessors had done, a policy of friendship with Rome, soon fell foul of the ambitious ruler of Pontus. Mithridates VI expelled him from his throne, but allowed him to be restored by Roman intervention. As a Roman ally he allowed himself to be persuaded to attack the great king, who in return beat him, drove him away to Rome, and conquered all Asia. Sulla's victories restored Nicomedes, but in 74 he died and bequeathed his kingdom to Rome. The coins of the last three kings all depict the head of Nicomedes II, rather a characterless clean-shaven face. They can however be assigned to their various reigns by means of the dates.

Pergamum.

In the year 284 B.C. Philetaerus, the commander left by Lysimachus to guard his chest of nine thousand talents, threw off his allegiance to the descendants of Alexander. He did not however assume the style of king, and the coins he struck are either those of Seleucus I, whose suzerainty he acknowledged, with the Alexandrine types, or bearing his own name with the head of Seleucus. His four successors all issued coins bearing his head and inscription with monograms or symbols varying according to the reign. The kingdom grew to sufficient power to incur under Eumenes II the jealousy of Rome. Though the Pergamene fleet had rendered valuable assistance against the ambitious projects of Antiochus III, in the time of Attalus I, the Romans deliberately weakened the kingdom. The last king did not even issue coins and eventually, setting the precedent to Nicomedes IV of Bithynia, bequeathed his kingdom to the Republic.

Cappadocia.

In 301 Ariarathes son of Ariarathes I who had made himself independent of the Alexandrine dominion for a short while, reconquered Cappadocia and took the title of king, the second of that name. His son and grandson both struck coins bearing their portraits. Ariarathes IV married his daughter to Eumenes II of Pergamum, and himself married Antiochis daughter of Antiochus III of Syria. He issued both tetradrachms and drachms, representing him as rather young and good looking.

He was succeeded by his son Ariarathes V. who almost immediately, upon giving some offence, incurred the enmity of Demetrius Soter of Syria. This king then supported Orophernes the half brother of Ariarathes, in an attempt upon the throne. He succeeded for a while in driving his brother to take refuge in Rome, and during his brief reign (158-157) struck some tetradrachms bearing his strikingly handsome and refined features. These very rare pieces restore to us the proper reading of his name, frequently rendered as Holophernes by Diodorus, thus confusing him with the Holofernes of the Apocrypha, the invader of Judaea. The coins represent Ariarathes as practically a boy. Under his enlightened rule the country prospered greatly. He was succeeded by his son Epiphanes. He, in common apparently with other oriental sovereigns, was kept in seclusion by an ambitious mother; after her murder however he married the daughter of Nicomedes of Bithynia. He issued no tetradrachms.

Upon his death his son Ariarathes VII (112-100?) succeeded, and was in turn deposed by Nicomedes of Bithynia and by Mithradates the great. The latter slew him and placed on the throne his own son under the title of Ariarathes (reckoned the IXth). The Cappadocians revolted and calling in the second son placed him on the throne as Ariarathes VIII. Mithradates attacked and slew the young king after a short reign of only two years (100-97). The portrait on the tetradrachms and drachms of Ariarathes IX bears a strong resemblance to that of Mithradates.

He does not appear to have actually ruled in Cappadocia very long, because shortly after the death of Ariarathes VIII, the last male representative of the original line, we find two claimants for the throne. The Senate of Rome refused both and allowed the people to choose one themselves.

The subject of their choice, Ariobarzanes I ruled from 95-62, and his name, Philoromaos, indicates how he and his successors though issuing drachms of the old types, were henceforth mere puppets in the hands of Rome.

Syria.

In 316 Seleucus, appointed satrap of Babylon by the regent Antipater, after Alexander's death, was driven thence by Antigonus 'King of Asia'. Taking refuge with Ptolemy in Egypt, he was given command of the fleet. The victory of Gaza in 312 opened the way for return to his old satrapy. Thence, in a series of campaigns, he conquered the whole of Alexander's Asiatic dominions (282). In the meanwhile he had assumed the title of βασιλεύς. Most of his coinage is of the Alexandrine type.

His portrait is also found on the coinage of Antiochus I, his successor, and of Philetaerus of Pergamum. His son Antiochus I was associated king for 12 years before his death. His total reign (293-261) produced a long series of coins, depicting him at various ages, though mostly as middle-aged.

Seleucus II, son of the foregoing King, succeeded in B.C. 246 and reigned for twenty years, a troubled period of fighting against his brother Antiochus Theos who was assisted by Mithradates II of Pontus and Ptolemy, against the Parthians who under Arsaces marked by a great victory, a further stage in the dismemberment of the vast Seleucid Empire, and against Attalus I of Pergamum, who, in the disorder, extended his dominions in Asia Minor. His portraits carry us from beardless youth to bearded old-age. The surname of Pogon was no doubt due to his being the first portrait to appear with the beard.

Antiochus III, the Great, the second son of Seleucus II, was a youth of twenty when his brother died. Immediately by extensive campaigns in the far east, against Parthians and Bactrians, up to the Indus, he proved himself a king and commander of no mean order. On his return from these in 205 he attacked Egypt, now under boy-rule. Later he turned his attention to Asia Minor and Greece. In this last sphere he encountered the Romans who beat him on their own ground and finally, under Scipio, crossed to Asia and defeated him in a great battle at Magnesia. Shortly afterwards he died aged only 52. His long reign is marked by the progressive aging of his rather handsome features, on his coins.

The throne was taken afterwards by his brother Antiochus IV, a cultured prince best known for his attempt to force upon the Jews the worship of Greek divinities. His coarse features easily distinguish his portrait on the Seleucid coinage.

In the meanwhile, Demetrius, the son of Seleucus IV who had spent his youth as a hostage in Rome, succeeded in escaping. He came to Tripolis, raised an army and defeated and put to death his young cousin. Establishing himself on the throne, he drove away Timarchus, attacked first Judas Maccabaeus then Ariarathes V of Cappadocia whom he dethroned, and was eventually slain in battle with the pretender Alexander Bala.

- Demetrius, son of Demetrius I, taking refuge in Crete succeeded in supplanting Alexander in Ptolemy's friendship. He landed in Syria having been given the hand of Cleopatra, formerly his rival's wife, and overcame and slew Alexander. He succeeded in keeping his position for only a short while when he in his turn was driven from his capital by Tryphon the guardian of young Antiochus VI Dionysus. Demetrius continued his coinage until 140 when he was taken prisoner by the Parthians whom he had attacked. Meanwhile the young Antiochus VI's short reign 145-142 was ended by Tryphon killing him and taking his throne.

The fourth son of Grypus also took the field against Antiochus X after the defeat of his two twin-brothers. He proclaimed himself king (95) and for a while he and Philip between them possessed all Syria. Discord broke out between the brothers, which resulted in Demetrius being taken prisoner by Mithridates Sinaces the ally of Philip. His coins which are rare, are rather better executed than those of most of the later reigns.

- The fifth son of Grypus, Antiochus XII for three years (87-84) endeavoured to succeed his brother as king of Coele-Syria. His coins are exceedingly rare.

Eventually a grandson of Mithridates I of Parthia, having carved out for himself at the expense of Parthia, a powerful principality in Armenia, embarked on the conquest of the now broken and weakened empire of Seleucus. By 83 B.C. he was master of Syria, which he ruled peaceably and well until, becoming involved in the struggle of his father-in-law, Mithridates the Great, against Rome, he sustained a crushing defeat before his new city of Tigranocerta (69). Lucullus and Pompey despoiled him of all but his title.

In 56 he died the petty king of a nominal kingdom, having witnessed all nearer Asia fall into the hands of the invincible Republic.

- 49758 Tigranes (in Armenia 97-56). 83-69. \mathcal{A} . Tetradrachm. Head of Tigranes r. wearing lofty Armenian tiara (this is a far more realistic portrait than on most of the last reigns). \mathcal{R} . ΒΑΣΙΛΕΩΣ ΤΙΓΡΑΝΟΥ . U.S.A. SERIES.

N.B. Great care has been taken not to over-describe the coins.

SOMMER ISLANDS.

This coinage of Bermuda or Sommer Islands was doubtless the first ever struck for the English Colonies in America; these islands belonged to the Virginia Company. Crosby considers that this coinage was struck between 1616 and 1619.

- 50302 Æ. Shilling. SOMMER * ISLANDS *. Hog; above, XII. R. A full rigged ship, under sail. These pieces are invariably in poor condition as most of them have been found on the sea shore. M. 21 » »
- 50304 Æ. Sixpence. Similar but reading ILANDS and above VI. A most curious unpublished misspelling; much better than usual, the hog being quite clear also the grass showing beneath his feet, the design of the vessel is also quite distinct. F. 30 » »

MARYLAND.

This coinage was apparently made in London about 1659 under the orders of Lord Baltimore, to whom the charter of Maryland had been granted in 1632, and shipped to America to his brother who was acting as Secretary of State in the colony.

- 50305 Sixpence. + CÆCILIVS : DNS : TERRÆ-MARIÆ : &c. Draped bust of Lord Baltimore l. R. CRESCITE : ET : MVLTIPLI- C-AMINI. Crowned shield dividing v i. Very rare. V.F. 13 » »

ST. PATRICK or MARK NEWBY HALFPENCE.

In 1681, there arrived in New Jersey a party of emigrants from Dublin, Ireland, Mark Newby and his family being among them. He brought with him a quantity of the pieces known as St. Patrick's halfpence, which, owing to the scarcity of small money there, were, in the ensuing May made current by an act of that state.

- 50311 Æ. Halfpenny in Silver. FLOREAT : REX. A crowned king kneeling playing larp; above, crown. R. QVIESCAT PLEBS. St. Patrick standing facing holding crozier; on r., church; on l., reptiles and serpents. Almost V.F. F. 2 12 6

NEW JERSEY.

The law for the introduction of a mint was passed on 23rd May 1786 and its working was undertaken by one Walter Mould who had had previous experience in England.

T. 160. 26* TO COMPARE. THIS. HIS. TRYALL. PIECE. WITH. THE. DUTCH. AND. IF. MORE. TRVLY DRAWN. & EMBOSSED. MORE. GRACE. FVLLY. ORDER'D. AND. MORE. ACCURATELY. ENGRAVEN. TO. RELEIVE. HIM. (Patt. 2). This is one of the rarest and most sought after coins in the English series. As long ago as 1889 the Bieber specimen realized £500 under the hammer, and quite recently at a sale in London a poor specimen fetched over £300. From the Lord Ailesbury Collection. Patt. 2. F.D.C. Sold.
 .. At the Restoration, Thos. Simon, who had held the post of sole engraver to the Mint during the Commonwealth, was continued in office; but in 1662 his appointment was limited to that of engraving of seals, and Jan Roettier, a native of Antwerp was made sole engraver of dies. Enraged at being supplanted in this manner, Simon endeavoured to vindicate his cause by an appeal to the King, in the form of the above coin, which was modelled after Roettier's own coin, but which it far surpasses in general execution and beauty of engraving. The appeal was unsuccessful.

ENGLISH SILVER COINS.

Pennies.

EDWARD I-II.

The coinage of the first three Edwards has been exhaustively discussed and described in the British Numismatic Journal by Messrs. H.B. Earle Fox and Shirley-Fox.

In the Numismatic Circular for Sept.-Oct. 1924 under "How to distinguish the first three Edwards" an effort was made to summarize these coins. Dr. L.A. Lawrence, who therein published a tabular description of the coins of these monarchs, with illustrations.

Dr. Lawrence divided the coins of Edward I-II into two main periods.

a) 1279-1302, Edward I.

b) 1302-1327, Edward I-II, and the periods again

(a) Into ten classes, nine of which read EDW.

(b) Into two classes, variously reading EDW, EDWA, EDWAR, EDWARD. In reference to the coins of Edward I-II-III, it is interesting to recall the following from "The Silver Coins of England" (Hawkins); — the key to that classification being found in a comparison of the coins struck by Episcopal authority —

By careful comparison of the types and workmanship of the several bishops of those of the kings, it is possible to ascertain the reigns in which the royal coins were struck.

THE EPISCOPAL COINS OF DURHAM, struck during the reigns of Edward I-II, are distinguished by peculiar marks, indicating the prelates under whose action they were issued.

THE COINS OF BISHOP BECK, are marked with a cross moline, his family bearing; he held the see from 1283 to 1310, that is, during the last 24 years of Edward I. and the first three years of Edward II.

BISHOP KELLOW, held the see from 1311 to 1316; his coins are marked by one limb of the cross, on the reverse, being bent to the left in form of a crozier.

BISHOP BEAUMONT, held the see from 1316 to 1333, that is, during the eleven years of Edward II. and first six of Edward III. His coins are marked with a rampant, accompanied, generally, by one or more lis, his family arms.

BISHOP BURY, 1333 to 1345, is not known to have struck coins.

BISHOP HATFIELD, held the see from 1345, during the remainder of the reign of Edward III.

From accurate examination of a great number of these coins of the three Edwards found at Tutbury in 1832, the conclusion drawn is that, generally speaking, coins upon which only EDW appear belong to Edward I, that those upon which the whole name EDWARDVS appears belong to Edward III, and that all the intermediate modes of writing the name are of Edward II.

We must however make some exception to this rule with regard to some pennies which read EDWARD, and add FRA to the King's titles and therefore must belong to Edward III.

The shoulders of Edward I and II are always clothed, those of Edward III are not; and we consider this mark a sure guide for separating his coins from those of his two predecessors.

From the commencement of the reign of Edward I until after the first coinage of Henry VII, there appears to have been a conventional mode of representing the king's head upon the coin, unchanged by the varied features of the different reigns, or by any circumstances of age, size or countenance; any real or imaginary variation being attributable to the mechanical style of the artist, rather than any attempt to modify the head into a portrait. This king, then, Edward I, as well as his successors, is represented crowned, full face, beardless, the hair spread at the sides, the crown being open, decorated with three fleurs-de-lis, with intermediate pellet or small ball; some indication of the slope of the shoulder, and sometimes of the royal mantle. Rev. cross pattée, extending to the edge of the coin, and having three pellets in each angle.

All the earlier coins of Edward I were of the usual weight and standard, the pennies being 22½ gr. In his 28th year the weight was reduced to 22¼, this difference is so little that the respective coinages cannot now be ascertained by the scale. The PENNIES of Edward I read EDW. R. ANGL. DNS. HYB., but some slight variations in the legend occur on some London coins. The Rev. has the name of the city or town where struck, preceded by CIVITAS or VILLA, as the case requires; excepting only a few coins on which the name of the moneyer, Robert de Hadley, occurs, and it is the last instance of a moneyer's name forming the legend upon any English coin.

The pennies of Edward I were struck at London, Berwick, Bristol, Canterbury, Chester, Durham, Exeter, Kingston, Lincoln, Newcastle, Reading, St. Edmundsbury, York, and by Robert de Hadley.

During the reign of Edward II the coinage remained of the same weight, standard, and type as that of his father.

The king is styled EDWA, EDWAR or EDWARD, and his titles, of king of England and lord of Ireland, are added, with some variations; the usual form being R. ANGL DNS HYB.

His pennies are struck at Berwick, Bristol, Canterbury, Durham, London, Newcastle, St. Edmundsbury and York.

Royalist badges.

The medals now about to be described are badges evidently intended to be worn about the person by friends or partisans of the monarch. They are of various sizes and workmanship, and were executed at various times; some worn as ornamental or honourable decoration conferred for services performed, others to be concealed as tacit memorials of the royal person or cause, where an open avowal of such attachment would be troublesome or dangerous to the wearer.

COUNTERS.

The Counters now described are stamped in imitation or engraving. They were used as markers or counters "for reckoning and for play". They appear to have been issued in sets of thirty-six, composed either of pieces of different types or a repetition of the same type. Some of these counters were executed by Nicholas Hilliard, jeweller, goldsmith and engraver to Elizabeth, and afterwards to King James I. From the latter Hilliard received in 1617 a patent granting him the monopoly for twelve years of all engraved portraits of the King and Royal family, and in virtue of this patent he sold licenses to other engravers to execute these counters. Simon Passe and his brother, both of whom excelled in the art of engraving, are said to have received such licenses. Med. Ill., vol. I, pp. 375-6.

It is claimed for this work, that it is the key to the knowledge of Roman Coins; that by means of it all the various abbreviations in the legends may be expanded and even coins in poor state attributed with certainty. With its very extensive Indices even the student who does not read German will find it a quick guide to the attribution of coins, and serviceable for information on types, countermarks, mints, etc.

ADVERTISEMENTS

DIES FOR FALSE COINS

In the possession of the Museo Nazionale Romano are more than 1000 dies for making false coins, for the most part produced by the electrotyping process; about a hundred are however hand-engraved in steel. The various classes of coins and medals are represented in approximately the following numbers: Greek coins, 232; Roman 520; Medieval and Modern 294.

The Istituto Italiano di Numismatica, in agreement with the Direction of the Museum, has undertaken the publication of impressions from these dies, with descriptions, in a quarto volume with about 40 plates. An invitation issued some years ago for subscriptions to defray the cost of this work having met with inadequate response the publication has not proceeded. As, however, it is highly desirable, in the interest of museums and private collectors, that the forgeries from these dies should be exposed, the invitation is now renewed. Promises to subscribe at the rate of £1.10s. sterling or 6 dollars will be received by Dr. G.F. Hill, British Museum, London, W.C. 1, or Messrs. Spink and Son, Ltd., 17 Piccadilly, London, W. 1. Payment should not be actually made until notice is received that the work is ready for distribution.

NOW READY.

AES GRAVE

A STUDY OF THE CAST COINAGES OF ROME AND CENTRAL ITALY

BY

EDWARD A. SYDENHAM M.A.

Quarto, 145 pages, 28 plates, boards, linen back and corners.

The Aes Grave forms the first chapter of the long story of the Roman Coinage but hitherto no complete account of it has been set forth in English. The well known works of Garrucci and Haeberlin are unwieldy in size and almost prohibitive in price. The present study surveys the whole field from a thoroughly scientific point of view, contains a corpus of over 350 pieces, and is illustrated with a series of plates from recent Sale Catalogues which should meet all practical requirements. The price has been put as low as possible, for a work of this class, in the hope that it may reach all who are interested in the fascinating problems of the origins of the famous coinage of ancient Rome.

Nearly ready.

EDITORIAL

has been decided to resume the monthly publication of the Numismatic Circular as being more in accordance with wishes of subscribers. This change will obviously necessitate the inclusion of less matter in each issue, but nevertheless the sum-total for twelve months will not be less than heretofore and may conceivably be larger. From this time onwards therefore our subscribers should receive their copies about the first of each month. Should there be any failure in this respect, perhaps they will kindly notify us as soon as possible.

THE COINS OF THE DUTCH EAST INDIES.

An Introduction to the Study of the Series (excluding those specially struck for India and Ceylon)

By SIR JOHN BUCKNILL M.A. (OXON).

All the Ducats which were officially counterstamped bore a milled edge; but it would seem that private individuals imitated the counterstamp, impressing it upon gold Ducats with a plain edge and which therefore, no doubt, were or might be easily clipped or were in fact already of inferior intrinsic value. These coins with a plain edge which had been thus irregularly overstruck were by a Resolution dated January 8th 1860 ordered to be withdrawn from circulation but were permitted to be exchanged at the Treasury for eighteen "Schellings" or ninety Stivers only. The Official counter-stamping of gold Ducats with the word "Djawa" ceased from August 17th 1761.

Some of these Ducats thus counterstruck are in existence but they are extremely rare: the writer is not aware that any attempt has been made to compile a complete list of these counterstamped coins but specimens ranging in date from 1750 to 1759 and emanating from the Provinces of Holland, Utrecht, Zeeland and Westfrisia have been recorded; whilst a curiosity in the shape of a Seven-Guilder gold piece of the Province of Overysse dated 1760 is also known with the "Djawa" counterstamp.

The actual type of impression varies slightly and at least three different forms can be noticed; but as no date was struck on the coins synchronously with the word "Djawa", it is not possible to tell when any particular specimen was actually counterstamped. The following observations give an account of such examples as have been brought to the writer's notice:—

18. 1750. Ducat of Holland (c. f. V. Pl. 39, f. 6). D. 21.9. W. 3.49 (B.).

Obv. A Knight in armour, standing facing to right; with sword in right hand and bundle of arrows in left. On left of the knight's legs the figures "17" and on the right the figures "50". Legend around, "CONCORDIA. RES. PAR(VAE). CRES(CUNT). HOL(LANDIAE)". Mr. Schulman renders this as "Little things grow (or prosper) through Concord": (coin of) Holland; but Mr. Allan thinks that it may be freely translated as "The little State of Holland will prosper through Concord". On the left side of the coin is deeply stamped a small circle (D. 4.5) in which, in strong relief, appears, in Arabic script, the word "DJAWA" (i.e. "JAVA").

Rev. Within a square frame, ornamented externally by scroll-work, the legend, "MO(NETA): ORD(INUM): PROVIN(CIARUM). FOEDER(ATARUM) BELG(II). AD LEG(EM). IMP(ERII)". This may be freely translated; "Coin (or money) of the Parliament of the United Provinces of the Netherlands (struck) according to the Imperial Law (or Standard)". The Latin word "Ordo" here means a "Council" and used in the plural, as it is, is intended to refer to that Dutch Legislative Body usually designated The States-General of The Netherlands: the appellation "Belgium" was, in those days, utilised to describe the political entity then known in Great Britain as The Netherlands or Low Countries.

The coin described and figured is in the writer's Cabinet.

19. 1753. Ducat of Holland (c. f. V. Pl. 39, f. 6). D. 21.9. W. 3.46 (G.).

Similar, generally, to No. 18 save for date. There was a specimen in the Grogan Collection (G. p. 37 and Pl. f. 629).

20. 1754. Ducat of Westfrisia (c. f. V. Pl. 59, f. 5).

Similar, generally, to No. 18 save for date and that the obverse the legend reads "CONCOR(DIA). RES. PAR(VAE). CRES(CUNT). WESTF(RISIAE)". (Steph. 6447).

21. 1758. Ducat of Holland.

Similar, generally, to No. 18 save for date. Mr. Schulman records this specimen.

22. 1758. Ducat of Utrecht (c. f. V. Pl. 98, f. 3). D. 21.9. W. 3.46 (G.).

Similar, generally, to No. 18 save for date and that on the obverse the word "TRA(IECTI)", (i.e. of Utrecht) replaces the word "HOL(LANDIAE)".

This coin was in the Grogan Collection and is now in the British Museum.

25. 1759. Ducat of Utrecht.

Similar, generally, to No. 22 save for date. Mr. Schulman records this specimen.

26. 1759. Ducat of Zeeland. D. 21. W. 3.54 (G.).

An example of this coin is mentioned and figured by Netscher and Van Der Chijs and a specimen existed in the Grogan Collection. A very fine example formed Lot 1 in Schulman's Sale at Amsterdam held in February 1900 realizing £ 7.10.0.

(N. & C. (obv.). Pl. 2, f. 9; G. p. 37.)

1759. Ducat of Westfrisia. D. 22. W. 3.49 (G.).

Similar, generally, to No. 20 save for date. A specimen of this coin was in the Grogan Collection.

1760. Seven Guilder Piece of Overysseel.

Lot 367 of the famous Fonrobert Collection consisted of a gold Seven Guilder Piece (also called a "Half-Rider") issued from the Dutch Province of Overysseel dated 1760 which was counterstamped "DJAWA" in Arabic script. This remarkable curiosity may have been and probably was thus overstruck by some person without the Company's authority.

e) Fifth Group. 1766.

Second Regular Issue.

The counterstamping of the Dutch European gold Ducats was, it appears, a very successful scheme and it was, eventually, decided by a Resolution dated October 29th 1765 that coins to be called Single, Double and Quadruple Gold Rupees might be struck, at the request of and for private persons, at the Mint at Batavia. These pieces were to be of the respective weights of 4.003, 8.006 and 16.012 grammes of twenty carat gold. By a Notification dated November 8th 1765, the gold Rupees were declared current but only coins dated 1766 are known. It is not probable that any bearing other dates were produced; they are all of the very highest purity: those hitherto discovered are heavier than the regulation weights. Their design was ordered to be identical with that of the contemporary silver Rupees and these gold coins were in fact struck on the dies used in the production of silver pieces.

Owing to the discovery that counterfeiting of these gold pieces as being extensively practised, it was resolved, on January 15th 1768 to withdraw all these gold coins from circulation but to receive them in exchange for other currency at the Mint up till February 13th; it was further proclaimed that after that date they could be regarded as demonetized and no longer current. Apparently no less than one hundred and fifty pieces were broken up at the Mint on February 9th 1768 (M. pp. 359-366; G. p. 36). Moquette does not figure these three gold pieces themselves but the silver Rupees from the Dies for which the gold coins were struck (M. p. 429).

1766. Quadruple Java Rupee.

Similar, generally, to No. 11 save for date and that the Mint-mark is a kind of rough cross. Moquette mentions a specimen in the Batavian Museum (M. p. 429 and c. f. Pl. 35, f. 666).

1766. Double Java Rupee. D. 26. W. 11.5 (H.).

Similar, generally, to No. 29 but lighter. Moquette mentions specimens in the Royal Coin Cabinet at The Hague and in the Batavian Museum respectively: two varieties of Die are recognisable (M. p. 429 and c. f. Pl. 35, ff. 665, 666).

Fig. 20.

1766. Single Java Rupee.

Similar, generally, to No. 30 but lighter. Moquette mentions one specimen in the Batavian Museum (M. p. 429 and c. f. Pl. 35, f. 666).

f) Sixth Group 1783-1785.

Third Regular Issue.

In 1782 it was again resolved that gold coins should be minted. These were to be known officially as Single, Double and Quadruple

Java Rupees and were to be respectively of the weight of 4, 8 and 16 grammes of nineteen carat gold. The Single Rupee is not known to have been struck but specimens of the other two denominations are known although they are of very great rarity. There is some danger, both in connection with this issue and with the later gold rupee issues from the Batavian Mint, of a confusion in nomenclature: the Officials at the Batavia Mint were accustomed to refer to the Double Rupee as a "Half" Rupee and to the Quadruple Rupee as a "Whole" Rupee; no doubt they would have called the Single Rupee a "Quarter" Rupee, had such a coin been actually produced. The reason for this apparent lack of uniformity in designation is a simple one: — Sixteen silver Rupees of the Batavia Mint were equivalent in value to one full gold Batavia Rupee; just as sixteen Indian Rupees were equal to one Indian gold Mohur. The "Single" gold Batavian Rupee of 4 (or about 4) grammes in weight was worth only four silver Rupees of Batavia; similarly, the "Double" gold Batavian Rupee of 8 (or about 8) grammes in weight was worth eight silver Batavian Rupees; the so-called "Quadruple" gold Batavian Rupee was the full, or, as the Mint Officials not unnaturally called it the "Whole" Rupee equal to and worth sixteen silver Rupees of Batavia.

32. 1783. Quadruple or "Whole" Java Rupee. D. 23-25. W. 15.76 (Steph.).

Similar, generally, to No. 13 save for date. The "Cock" mintmark had by now at any rate become conventionalized and was not (whatever it may have been in 1746) that of any individual Mint-Master: it appears on all the gold minted in Batavia from this date up till the year 1807. Moquette figures (Pl. 35, ff. 670, 671) two specimens which show marked variation both in size and script; one of these formed Lot 6461 of the Stephanik Collection at the sale of which it was bought for the Batavian Museum.

33. 1783. Double or "Half" Java Rupee. D. 22. W. 8.14 (G.).

Similar, generally, to No. 13 save for date. Moquette figures a specimen in the Zeeland Museum at Middelburg (Pl. 35, f. 672) and, as none of these coins with the date 1783 are clearly mentioned in the records of the Batavian Mint as having been struck, he was inclined to think that the example figured by him was issued in 1784 but stamped 1783 by some mistake (p. 450): but the occurrence of another specimen in the Grogan Collection seems, perhaps, to dispose of his doubts.

(G. p. 37. L. 642 (£21"13"4) and Pl. 5, f. 642.)

34. 1784. Quadruple or "Whole" Java Rupee. D. 26. W. 15.74 (B.M.).

Similar, generally, to No. 32 save for date. This coin is mentioned by Marsden (p. 812) and Moquette figures the specimen illustrated below (Pl. 35, f. 673).

35. 1785. Double or "Half" Java Rupee. D. 22. W. 7.77. (B.M.).

g) Seventh Group 1796-1798.

Fourth Regular Issue.

Gold was again, in 1765, ordered to be coined at Batavia. The coins were to be of the same "Half" and "Whole" denominations as were those of the preceding issue; and are of similar design. Although the Company was dissolved in 1798, its concessions expiring and becoming the property of the Batavian Republic in the following year, the Mint at Batavia continued to produce gold coinage up till the year 1807 and silver until 1808 by which time the French had definitely taken over the administration of the Dutch East Indies. The coinage of and from the year 1799 up to the year 1808 is dealt with in later portions of this work. The gold of the period at present under consideration is all very rare.

36. 1796. "Whole" Rupee. D. 24.5. W. 15.60 (B.).

Similar, generally, to No. 32 save for date. Moquette, who had not heard of a specimen with this date, thought that it very probably existed (p. 431), and his view was correct. An example, in fleur-de-coin condition, was sold in 1890 at Amsterdam at the disposal of the Collection of Mr. W.E. Rynbende being then bought by Mr. Schulman; from him it passed into the famous Collection of the late Marquis la Renotière de Ferrari and at the sale of a portion of that Nobleman's Collection in Paris in 1922 it formed Lot 731 and was illustrated in the Catalogue (Pl. 12, f. 731). It, eventually, again came into the hands of the firm of Schulman and is now in the writer's Cabinet.

Fig. 23.

From the coin in the writer's Cabinet.

37. 1797. "Whole" Rupee. D. 24. W. 15.46 (B.M.).

Similar, generally, to No. 36 save for date. This coin is mentioned by Marsden who figures an example (p. 812 and Pl. 54, f. 1248): Moquette gives several illustrations; Pl. 37, f. 693 (Royal Antiquarian Society of Amsterdam); f. 694 (a) (Rev.); f. 694 (b) (Rev.) (British Museum); there was a specimen in the Grogan Collection (p. 38. L. 652. £ 33 6s. 8d. and Pl. 7, f. 652) and two specimens in the Ferrari Cabinet (L. 741). A very fine example formed Lot 5 of Schulman's Sale at Amsterdam held in February 1925 realizing £ 22 10s. od.

38. 1798. "Half" Rupee. D. 18. W. 7.51 (B.M.); W. 7.90 (Steph.).

Similar, generally, to No. 33 save for date. This coin is mentioned by Marsden (p. 812): there was a specimen in the Stephanik Collection (Lot 6469) which was bought by Moquette in 1904 for the Batavian Museum where it now is; it is figured by Moquette (Pl. 37, f. 695): there was also a specimen in the Grogan Collection (p. 38. L. 653. £ 29. 3. 4 and Pl. 7, f. 653) and two in the Ferrari Cabinet (L. 742).

Silver.

Struck at Batavia, Java.

The silver coinage which was actually minted in Java under the direct authority of the Company falls naturally into two well defined divisions: —

1) An issue in 1645 of pieces of Forty-eight, Twenty-four and Twelve Stivers which were also, and perhaps more usually, known respectively as Batavian Crowns, Half-Crowns and Quarter-Crowns.

2) A rather long series of Rupees extending, with some considerable intervals, from 1747 up to the dissolution of the Company. This Rupee issue must, as was that of the regular gold coinage, be separated into four groups, namely: 1747-1750, 1764-1767, 1782-1789 and 1795-1798: it will be observed that these groups correspond in date closely with those periods of activity at the Batavian Mint during which gold was struck.

It must, however, be, at this stage, noted that, as, again, was the case with the gold coinage, silver pieces, of both Dutch and non-Dutch origin, were, at various times and for various reasons, counter-struck in Java by the Company's orders with some distinctive device or word; and the occasions upon which silver was thus treated also synchronize, approximately, with those on which gold coins were, somewhat similarly, dealt with: they took place in the case of silver, in the years 1686, 1687, 1693 and 1753.

It must be borne in mind that, during the whole of the period under consideration (or at any rate up till after the year 1786 at which date the Dutch Provincial European Mints began to turn out large quantities of silver coins for use in the Dutch East Indies) although the ordinary silver Dutch European coinage was not only there current but without doubt constituted the great bulk of silver currency in local circulation, there was never an adequate supply.

The natural tendency, too, was, as is the universal rule, for pieces of high intrinsic metal value (such as were the coins emanating from Europe) to be displaced by those of less worth and so gradually, to disappear.

Much counterfeit money seems always to have existed, as has usually been the case where Chinese congregate (some of whom are most expert and persistent forgers), as they have for centuries in the Malay Peninsula and Archipelago.

NOTES ON THE MYTHOLOGICAL TYPES ON ROMAN REPUBLICAN COINS.

PAN.

Pan appeared on the coinage of Magna Græcia at Metapontum and Salapia on bronze, on silver only at Pandosia, and through these Greek colonies his name was introduced to the Romans. (p. 192 of "The Coins of Magna Græcia" the writer of these notes has written of the meaning of the cult of Pan in those colonies). The earliest appearance of that god on the coins of Rome appears to be the mask of Pan on coins of M. Porcius Cato about 101 B.C. but only as a symbol not as a type; then between 86 and 90 B.C. we find Pan as a type on coins of C. Vibius Pansa and Quintus Titius who were moneyers together at that time.

No. 8 of Babelon's Vibia shows a mask of Silenus on the obverse and of Pan on the reverse. On a variety of the positions of the gods reversed, i.e. Pan obv., Silenus on rev.

No. 18, Vibia, the mask of Pan is on the Obv. of a Denarius whose reverse is a figure of Jupiter Axur; one would have expected Jupiter Lyceus.

No. 22 the mask of Pan is on the Obv. of a denarius whose reverse has two hands clasped round a caduceus.

The type of Pan is said to have been chosen as a pun on name Pansa, a name which Pitiscus says was given to him on account of his large feet. Plautus uses the word as a noun for splay footed (root PANDO).

Quintus Titius appears to have chosen his Obv. type, of the god Mutinus Titinus, in a similar way as a pun on his name. On the obv. of no. 6 Babelon, a Triens, a bearded head of Pan occurs, on the R. of which is a figure of Ceres.

A similar head of Pan is seen on the R. of a Triens (no. 7 Babelon) on the Obv. of which a head of Silenus appears.

Surely this is earlier than the Vibian coins (43 B. C.).

The next head of Pan to appear occurs on the obv. of a Sestertius of Titus Carisius a moneyer under Julius Cæsar, circa 48 B. C., on the R. a panther holding a thyrsus appears. This is in harmony with the common way of thinking of Pan in association with Dionysus or Bacchus, the panther and thyrsus being emblems of that cult.

The figure of Pan nude, seated, with a double pipe or flute occurs on the R. of denarii of P. Petronius Turpilianus no. 17 Babelon. The Obv. bears the head of Augustus.

This moneyer probably chose the type because his ancestors had been connected with the cults of Liber and Bacchus, with which cults Pan was associated.

This type of Pan seated is known also from a beautiful stone with the same design which was in the Marlborough Collection; see a good illustration of it in Num. Circ., p. 10331. On another denarius of the same moneyer Pan is represented on the R. standing, facing left, and holding syrinx and pedom or shepherd's crook.

During the reign of Marcus Aurelius Pan appeared on coins of Colonia Laus Julia Corinthus.

In Caracalla's reign Pan appears on a coin type carrying the infant Dionysos.

In the reign of Severus at Thelpusa in Arcadia Pan was represented on a coin as seizing his love Syrinx, who was then turned into a reed (Achilles Tatius, VIII, 6). In Diadumenian's time on coins of Cæsarea, Paneas, the grotto of Pan, and his image within and a balustrade were represented on coins.

The early Greek types date from 420-396 B. C., during which period the head of Pan appears on coins of Messina and also seated figures of the god.

About 370-300 B. C. in Arcadia at Megalopolis the head of Zeus Lykaeos appeared on the Obv. of staters and Pan seated on a rock with his pedom, and his syrinx at his feet, and on obols the head of Pan. When we look upon these images of Pan on the Roman coins we naturally wonder what the types meant to those who handled them, and when we turn to the literature of Rome we find a variety of ideas, and we see that those ideas changed in the course of time so that the thoughts of those who used these coins must have depended on their interests in pastoral pursuits or in hunting or in literature.

The coins belong to a time when the old pastoral associations were no longer prominent and the meaning of the myth and of the name Pan had changed.

When the Romans came under the influence of Magna Græcia they saw in the Greek god Pan the same supernatural power which they near Rome named Inuus as the god of their flocks and herds, and he was also partially identified with Faunus and Lupercus. In the note of Servius in Virgil's Aen., VI, 776 we read "Inuus is Pan" and Livy (I, 5) mentions "Lycaeus Pan whom the Romans call Inuus".

Servius explained the name Lycaeus in his note on Virgil, Aen., III, 343 thus, "Pan was called Lycaeus because he did not allow the wolves to worry the sheep". The name Pan is derived from the Root IIA from which the Latins derived "pasco". The Greeks frequently added the letter "ν" to a verb stem to denote the doer of an action, so we find ποιμήν, θάλασσαν; Ζην a variant of Ζεύς, and Πάρις are examples of the same ending.

By the early Greeks and Romans the word was associated only with pastoral ideas, but later when philosophic speculation affected their ideas of the derivation of words some men associated it with the word for "all" πᾶς πᾶσα πᾶν, because they thought of the god Pan as the god of all nature. So Bacon wrote of Pan as "Pan sive natura", in de Sapientia Veterum, and in regard to the Pedom he wrote "every wand or staff of empire is curved at the top".

The character of Pan as described by the ancient writers makes it difficult to remember that the idea of the supreme God was also associated by the Hebrews with the Shepherd Jehovah as in Psalm XXIII, in Ezekiel and in the N. T. Homer called Agamemnon the Shepherd of the people, but did not apply the word to Zeus. Some have regarded Pan as the god of the Pelasgian dwellers in Arcadia, and hence his image was placed near that of Zeus Lycaeus, and this Zeus was probably a later name for Pan introduced by those who settled among the Pelasgians.

The prayer of Socrates to Pan at the end of the Phædrus of Plato "grant me beauty in the inward soul" shows that a higher view of Pan's nature had been developed.

Virgil's reference to Pan also in the Georgics (I, 16) "O Pan guardian of the sheep — whose province it is to guard the fields", is followed by words strange as coming from the pen of a student of Lucretius, and shows his innate sense of divine protection and providence.

Among these wider views of Pan we may place the note of Macrobius (Satir., I, 22). The heading of which is "That Nemesis, Pan (whom they call Inuus) and Saturnus are nothing other than the Sun", and Virgil (Georg., III, 391) implies that the moon was his wife! "Thus Pan deceived thee, O moon, captivated with a snowy offering of wool, inviting thee into the deep groves: nor didst thou scorn his invitation" (So Macrobius, V, 22 describes how the Moon followed Pan, transfigured into a white ram).

Ovid (Faste, II, 279) witnesses to this god's care of sheep: "Pan was the guardian of the herd, Pan, was there the god of the mares; used to receive offerings for the preservation of the sheep. Evander brought over with him the woodland divinities. Here where now the city stands was then merely the city's site. Thence do we reverence this god, and the rites imported from the Pelasgians" Virgil said (Eclogue II) "Pan guards both the sheep and the shepherds".

Music was associated with the pastoral life both in Greece and Italy, and Pan is spoken of as the teacher of music in the same passage of Eclogue II. "In the woods along with me thou shalt rival Pan in singing, Pan first taught men to join several reeds with wax", and in Eclogue IV we read "Should even Pan with me contend, Arcadia's self being judge, even Pan should own himself overcome". We read in Theocritus Idyl, I, line 3 "After Pan the second prize shalt thou bear away".

The syrinx or shepherd's pipes is seen on several of the coins bearing Pan's image.

Virgil (Ec. II, 32) records the legend that Pan was the inventor of the pipes "Pan first taught men to join several reeds with wax (VIII, 24). Pan the first who suffered not the reeds to be neglected".

When we read in Pausanias VIII, 36, that the inhabitants of the neighbourhood of Mount Maenalus "heard Pan playing on his pipes" it is to be supposed they refer to the noises made by the wind in the forests, or the songs of birds, or other woodland mountain sounds.

The Romans called the syrinx "fistula" (Horace, Carmen IV, 12, 10. Ovid, Met. VIII, 192). The usual number of hollow stems or reeds was seven, adjusted so as to form an octave, but sometimes nine reeds were used as in Theocritus, VIII, 18. Homer never mentions Pan (though he occurred in the Hymn to Pan) he does mention pipes in Il. XVIII, 526 "and with them" (the cattle) two herdsmen playing on pipes ("σύρυγγι"). It is noticeable that this humble instrument was afterward developed into organs. The legend of the Arcadian nymph pursued by Pan fleeing into the river Ladon and turning into a reed, with which Pan made a syrinx is told by Ovid in his Metam. I, 690.

The dread of the heat of the midday sun was regarded as a dread of the powers of destruction in Nature which the Greeks and Romans associated with Pan. Theocritus in his first Idyll makes a goatherd say "Nay, shepherd, it may not be, we may not pipe in the noontide. 'Tis Pan we dread, who truly at this hour rests weary from the chase, and bitter of mood is he, the keen wrath sitting ever at his nostrils".

In Psalm XCI, 6, we read of "the destruction that wasteth at noon day" which the vulgate translated "daemonio meridiano" from the LXX θάλασσαν μέσημβριον. On this passage confer Lawson's "Greek folklore" p. 79.

Herodotus (II, 46) relates that the Mendesians (of Egypt) consider Pan one of the eight gods who existed before the twelve. Their painters and sculptors represent Pan with the face and legs of a goat as the Grecians do, not that they imagine this to be his real form for they think him like other gods. But why they represent him in this way I had rather not mention". In § 145 Herodotus goes on, "Among the Greeks the most recent of the gods are Heracles, Dionysos and Pan; but by the Egyptians Pan is esteemed the most ancient". In the next paragraph he gives the date of Pan's birth from Penelope and Hermes as 600 years before his time.

In B^k VI, 105 Herodotus relates how the cult of Pan was introduced to Athens. A herald sent to Sparta told the Athenians that Pan had met him and asked why he was not worshipped by Athens. The citizens believed his story and built a temple to Pan beneath the Acropolis and propitiated him with yearly sacrifices and the torch race.

Some writers on the subject of Pan, as Welcker, Gerhard and Bérard, seem to regard him as a god of nature or physical life, but as nothing is related of him which is related to any higher subjects than pastoral, it is probable that such ideas are very late and were held not by shepherds but by citizens of great cities. The following passage of Silius Italicus (XIII, 326), who lived between 25 and 100 A.D., gives a picture of the appearance of Pan as imagined by the Romans. Perhaps drawn from a picture. "Pan had been sent by the wish of Jove that the Trojan dwellings should be saved. Pan ever like to one hanging and scarcely planting on the ground any footsteps with his hoof. His right hand is dealing cheerful lashes with the skin of a slain Arcadian goat in the festal throng at the cross roads.

A prickly pine branch surrounds his hair and shades his temples, and small horns sprout from his ruddy forehead. His ears are pricked up, and a shaggy beard flows from beneath his chin. The god has a shepherd's staff, and a comely hide from the body of a tender doe covers his left side. No crag is there so steep and precipitous, so forbidding that he, balancing his body and like to one flying, would not bear his horny feet over the pathless crags. At times turning round he looks back smiling at the waving of his shaggy tail springing from the middle of his back, and stretching out his hand he prevents the sun from growing warm on his forehead and surveys the pastures with shaded eyes".

The outward appearance of Pan has been by some regarded as evidence of Phœnician influence, and three passages in the old Testament are quoted as having reference to such hairy wild beings, viz. Isaiah, XIII 21, XXXIV 14, and Leviticus, XVII 7. In the English version the Hebrew word is translated by "satyrs" in the two first passages and by "devils" in the last.

In Isa. XIII 2, Vulgate has "pilosus" and the LXX, δαίμονιος. In Isa. XXXIV 14, the LXX translate "a kind of ape". In Lev. XVII 7, Vulgate has demonas and the LXX δαίμων. Desolate and uninhabited places were thought to be awe inspiring, and the creatures who dwelt in such places shared in this power of inspiring awe.

The poem by Mrs. E. B. Browning "The dead Pan" is probably known by most of the readers of the N. Circular, but the passage in Plutarch's "de oraculorum defectu" is not so generally known, and will form a suitable conclusion to these notes in Pan.

The above mentioned poem is said to have been suggested by Schiller's "Gölter Griechenlands".

The legend reports that at the hour of the crucifixion the cry "Great Pan is dead" was heard by certain sailors. Plutarch's account is as follows: "About the death of such beings I have heard the story of a man not foolish, or an idle talker, for of Aemilianus the rhetorician, whom some of you also have heard, the father was Epitherses, my fellow citizen and a teacher of grammar. He said that once on a voyage to Italy he embarked on a ship that conveyed merchandise and numerous passengers. When it was now evening off the Echinades islands the breeze died down, and the ship being carried different ways, came near to Paxi; most were awake and several were still drinking after supper. Suddenly a voice from the island of the Paxi was heard calling loudly for a certain Thamus, so that they wondered. Now Thamus was an Egyptian pilot not even known by name to many on board.

Twice he remained silent to the call but the third time he answered the caller, and the latter raising his voice said, "When you are off Palodes announce that the great Pan is dead".

When they heard this, said Epitherses, all were amazed, and on debating among themselves whether it were better to do what was commanded or not to trouble, but let the matter alone, Thamus decided thus — if there were a breeze to sail past, keeping quiet, if there were no wind, but a calm off the place, to announce what he had heard. When therefore he was off Palodes there being no wind or swell, Thamus, looking from the stern to the shore, said as he had heard, that the great Pan was dead. He had hardly ceased to speak when there arose a great lamentation, not of one but of many, mingled with expressions of wonder, and as many persons were present the report was quickly spread in Rome and Thamus was sent for by Tiberius Caesar who trusted so much to the story that he made enquiries about Pan, and the learned men about him said it was Pan the son of Hermes and Penelope."

The whole within an ornamented rim.

E. — Milled with straight lines.

I am again much indebted to my good friend Mr. John Allan. M. A., for kind help in describing this coin.

On Thursday, March 16th 1922, Fuad the First, Sultan of Egypt, was proclaimed King, and the new Kingdom was saluted by one hundred and one guns in Cairo, Alexandria, Port Said, Assuan and Khartum, where a Royal rescript was read by the authorities.

The British Residency and the Egyptian Government on the same day notified the foreign diplomatic agents that henceforward their relations with Egypt would be direct through the Egyptian Ministry for Foreign Affairs. Lord Allenby, with his Staff, visited the Palace in Cairo, in the afternoon to congratulate King Fuad, who on Friday, March 17th, 1922, prayed at the Mehemet Ali Mosque in the Citadel, in Cairo, where Mehemet Ali, the founder of the dynasty, is buried, and where Egyptian Sovereigns always prayed on the first Friday after their accession and on the occasion of great national events.

He is wearing a crested helmet with a tail of hair floating behind. A chlamys flowing freely at the back is fastened in front by a fibula. On the right shoulder a balteus for suspending the gladius. The feet and lower portions of the legs are protected by armour, but the toes are uncovered. The horse apparently half advances, half shrinks, from the fabulous animal at its feet. Saint George has broken his lance by wounding the winged monster, and a portion of it remains in its body, the other part is lying upon the ground, with the initials W.W.P. (William Wellesley Pole) beneath it. The dragon is preparing itself for a deadly spring, and Saint George is about to slay it with the gladius he holds in his right hand. Below the ground, the date, 1925, and the initials B.P. (Benedetto Pistrucci). On the ground above the date the mint marks SA (South Africa). The whole within a plain circle encircled by an ornamented rim.

HANDBUCH ZUR MÜNZKUNDE DER RÖMISCHEN KAISERZEIT. Von Dr. Max Bernhart, Professor und Konservator am Staatlichen Münzkabinett, München. In 2 vols, 4to (vol. I, pp. 420; vol. II, 102 plates).

A. Riechmann and Co., Halle (Saale), 1926.

Price : £ 5.

This is another excellent Handbook on Roman Coins, which fully answers expectations. The publication of this work had been announced for some time, and one naturally wondered how the author would find it possible to condense within the compass of one single volume the immense material that he proposed to deal with. Every one will agree that Dr Bernhart's Manual is a wonderful achievement, deserving the praise and gratitude of the many collectors and students to whom it will be of daily use. The editors, the enterprising firm of A. Riechmann and Co., are also to be congratulated for bringing out this truly valuable book.

In dealing with his subject Dr Bernhart has adopted a plan of his own, so that his work will not clash with others in course of publication, such as Mattingly and Sydenham's "Roman Imperial Coinage", or the older work of Cohen's, which for rapid classification will probably remain in use for many years to come.

We cannot here give more than a general outline of Dr Bernhart's "Handbook", by giving the titles and subtitles of the different chapters. This will suffice to show that the whole field of Roman numismatics has been touched upon in a thoroughly scientific method.

- A. History of Roman Imperial Numismatics (1-8).
- B. The right of coining and survey of the Coinage (9-11).
- C. History of the Coinage (12-25).
- D. Medallic Coins (26-30).
 - I. Medallions (26 sq.).
 - II. Contorniates (27-29).
 - III. Tesseræ (29 sq.).
 - IV. Exagiae (30).
- E. Types and Inscriptions (31-261).
 - I. Obverse (31-44).
 - (a) Types (31-37).
 - (b) Legends (37-44).
 - II. Reverse (45-261).
 - (a) Types (45-141).
 - A. Gods of the Roman religion (45-74).
 - 1. The twelve chief Gods (47-56).
 - 2. Demi-gods, Heroes, etc. (56-70).
 - 3. Foundation legend (70).
 - 4. Divi Imperatores (72-74).
 - B. Forms of Cultus (75-80).
 - C. Personifications (80-115).
 - 1. Abstract conceptions (80-102).
 - 2. Countries, Cities, Rivers (103-115).
 - D. The Emperor (115-141).
 - 1. His Person and his Family (115-117).
 - 2. His connection with the people (118-120).
 - 3. Foreign Policy (121 sq.).
 - 4. His connection with the Army (122-124).
 - 5. Architectural activities of the Emperor (124-141).
 - (b) Legends (142-261).
- F. Countermarks, Counterstamps and Restituted Coins (262-267).
- G. The Dating of the Coins (268-321).
- H. Mints (322-368).
- I. Coin Technique and Falsifications (369-377).

K. Contracted legends and problematic inscriptions (378-388).

To give an idea of the thoroughness of the work, let us take for example the Chapter dealing with the Architectural Activities of the Emperors (pp. 124-141). This is subdivided as under :

- (a) Temples and Altars.
 - Temple of Juppiter Capitolinus.
 - Temple of Juppiter Ultor (?)
 - Temple of Juno Martialis.
 - Temple of Mars Ultor.
 - Temple of Janus.
 - Temple of Venus and Roma.
 - Round Temple of Mercury.
 - Iseum Campense.
 - Temple of Concordia.
 - Temple of Vesta.
 - Temple of Divus Augustus.
 - Temple of Trajanus Pater (?)
 - Basilica Ulpia.
 - Temple of Matidia.
 - Temple of Divus Antoninus and Diva Faustina.
 - Heroum of Divus Romulus.
 - Ara Pacis.
 - Other Altars.
- (b) Triumphal Arches.
 - Arch of Augustus.
 - Arch of Drusus.
 - Arch of Nero.
 - Arch of Domitian.
 - Arch of Trajan.
 - Arch of Septimius Severus.
 - Arch of Postumus.
- (c) Columns and Statues.
 - Diana Ephesia.
 - Column of Trajan.
 - Column of Antoninus Pius.
- (d) Bridges.
 - Bridge over the Danube.
 - Pons Aelius.
 - Marcus Aurelius' Bridge of boats.
 - Bridge of Sept. Severus.
 - Rhine Bridge at Mayence.
- (e) Other Buildings.
 - Circus Maximus.
 - The Flavian Amphitheatre.
 - The Macellum.
 - The Forum Traiani.
 - The Navalia.
 - The two Harbours of Ostia.
 - Thermae of Caracalla.
 - Nymphaeum Divi Alexandri.
 - View of Treves.
 - View of London.
 - View of Mayence.
 - Roads and Aqueducts.
 - Hadrian's Mausoleum.

These architectural monuments are described and the coins noted under their issuers.

If we take another chapter, that on the Mints (pp. 322-368), we find first a history of each individual mint, then a list of the emperors with the indication of the mints they coined at and mint-marks they used.

The chapter on the dating of the coins is also important and useful for quick reference.

A list of all the legends found on Roman coins is given in another chapter, and with each legend the names of the Emperors of whose coins these legends are used.

But these are only a few of the features of Dr Bernhart's Handbook which is so replete with information on all the various aspects of Roman numismatics.

An album of 102 photogravure plates accompanies the text volume. The Plates illustrate all the important types of the gold, silver and copper currency, including medallions, contorniates, and tesseræ. The contorniates and tesseræ are on Plates 30-32; Plate 33 is entirely devoted to the Spintriate. Among the medallions illustrated, one of Marcus Aurelius (Pl. 25, 2), with large border is the very coin that appeared in the Levis Sale Catalogue (Lucerne, June 1925), lot 617, and the Constantine the Great (pl. 71, 9) figured in that same sale, under n° 699. The famous London medallion in gold commemorating the entry of Constantius Chlorus in to London in 296 (from the Arras find) is mentioned on p. 139 of the text, but no reproduction of it is given. On Plates 100-102 we have reproductions of various types of falsifications by Becker, Cigoi, the Paduans, and modern forgers.

We warmly recommend Dr Bernhart's Handbook, which although written in German, is meeting with a ready sale in this country.

DIE MÜNZE in der Kulturgeschichte. By Ferdinand Friedensburg. Second edition.

8vo. 244 pp., with many illustrations in the text. Berlin 1926, Weidmannsche Buchhandlung.

The fact that it has been found necessary to publish a second edition of this Coin Manual speaks for the favour with which it has been received. A large number of Public Schools in Germany have incorporated it in their libraries as a trustworthy guide in the study of numismatics.

The coinage is considered in all its varied connections with science, religion, political economy, and art.

The author had primarily the German reader in view, and he naturally devotes a good deal of space to the mediaeval coinage of Germany, and the evolution of the currency in the German states; nevertheless his book appeals to all numismatists and will be consulted with profit by students.

CEYLON COINS AND CURRENCY. By H.W. Codrington, C.C.S., B.A. (Oxon), F.R.N.S.

Large Quarto. 290 pp. + VII Plates (Memoirs of the Colombo Museum, edited by Joseph Pearson, D.Sc., F.R.S.E., F.L.S., Director of the Colombo Museum).

Printed by A.C., Richards, Colombo. London Agents: Messrs. Luzac and Co.; or may be ordered from Messrs. Spink and Son Ltd.

A great deal of attention is now given to Indian numismatics, and one work after another has been coming out within recent years to enrich our knowledge in this special series. To-day we have a large book before us dealing with the Coins and Currency of Ceylon, which will supersede Professor Rhys Davids' "Ancient Coins and Measures of Ceylon", published in 1877, now out of date.

Mr Codrington's work embraces the whole history of Coinage and Currency in the Island, and thanks to the assistance of many specialists he has been able to bring it to a satisfactory conclusion.

The earliest currency of Ceylon, dating probably from before the time of Alexander the Great, consists of punch-marked coins, called in Sanskrit 'purāṇa', "old", Englished as "edling, possibly imported from India. Single-die coins in silver and copper, punched with a number of symbols; Buddhist "Cakram type" coins, assigned to the early Pāndyans, follow these prehistoric issues. In the next period we get the "Elephant and Svastika" type, Horse and Svastika, Lion and Svastika, Tree and Svastika, Rectangular Bull type, and Maneless Lion type.

Roman "third brass" are found in large quantities in Ceylon, which may be considered as a possible indication of the residence of Roman agents in the Pandyan kingdom. The Roman coins range from Republican pieces to Byzantine copper.

The coins of Mediaeval Ceylon are the most interesting in the series and a very full and complete catalogue and description of all the known varieties is given. From a study of these the following conclusions result:

"(1) The Sinhalese kahavanu or the so-called "Lankesvara" coins are older than the Rājārāja issue. This type is probably of the tenth century.

"(2) The Sri Lankā, Lakshmi, Nandakī and Uraka coins are fractional pieces of the kahavanava, to various types of which they can be assigned with some probability.

"(3) The "gold" and silver pieces with the name of Vijaya Bāhu were not issued by the third and fourth kings of that name, but by Vijaya Bahu I. They are, therefore, intermediate between the issues of Rājārāja I. and the coinage of Parākrama Bahu I.

"(4) The currency to the end of the tenth century was of gold, perhaps eked out with a few silver coins; in the eleventh it was of very poor gold or of silver washed with gold, possibly supplemented by a little copper, if the few coins of this metal be not ancient forgeries. From the time of Parākrama Bāhu I. the coinage of the precious metal entirely ceased, though silver was used to wash coins of base metal. Gold continued to be current until the reign of Vijaya Bāhu III".

"(5) The majority of the Sri Parākrama Bahu coins are to be attributed to the second king of the name, and the Sri Vijaya Bāhu to his successor.

"(6) The standard of all the coins was the kalaṇḍa of about 68 to 70 grains, supposed to have been the same weight as the kahāpana of the Buddhist Scriptures, as a revival of which the gold kahavanu, perhaps, was issued. This standard shows a tendency to drop from the reign of Vijaya Bāhu I.

"(7) The kalaṇḍa is practically identical in weight with the late Roman solidus. This coin was current in the Island, and may have influenced the weight of the kalaṇḍa. "Throughout India the old standard of weight seems almost universally to have been the current coin of the locality". (Report of Col. R. Strachey, 1867, quoted in A.I.W., p. 25, note 2.)

"(8) The word massa signifies coin. Masuram was applied to any gold coin, and not exclusively to the kahavanu; ultimately it was used of the copper coinage.

"(9) The fanam was introduced into Ceylon at least as early as the fourteenth century.

"(10) The Setu series in all probability is to be attributed to the kingdom of Jaffna, and the "Lion" coin to the same mint, in which case it must have been issued by Parākrama Bahu VI". (p. 81-82).

The next chapter (VII) of Mr. Codrington's work deals with the Mediaeval Indian Cola, Pandya, and other dynasts who held sway over Ceylon and issued currency there.

Chapter VIII gives us a very full account of the Portuguese coinage for Ceylon; chapters IX and X are concerned with the Dutch, and chapters XI with the British series issued in the Islands. These chapters are very exhaustive.

In the concluding chapters XII to XIV we find a survey of the various European, Muhammadan, Indian and Far-Eastern currencies which appear to have been used at different times in Ceylon, or which have been found there.

In the Appendices and Supplement a vast amount of additional information is given in the form of notes.

All the principal types of Sinhalese coins are illustrated on seven excellent plates.

There is no doubt that such a work as the present will greatly promote the study and the collecting of Ceylon coins, and we heartily congratulate the author who has thus rendered an eminent service to numismatic science.

NUMISMATIC QUERIES

Q. 6. The coin illustrated above came into our possession with a miscellaneous lot of silver coins giving no clue to their origin, and after the purchase was completed the owner confessed that he had only given 5s. for the whole lot. The description of the coin is as follows: — Obv. Laureate and turreted female head r., wearing necklace. R. GEW. 450 GR. TROY. — FEIN 447, 75 GR. TROY. In centre 2 1/2 TOLA — FEINGEH. O, 995. Milled edge.

The question immediately arises, as to what country this coin should be assigned. A Tola, according to A.R. Frey, is an Indian Weight, which was assimilated to the weight of the Farrukhabad Rupee in 1833 and stabilised as the unit of a general system of weights for Government transactions. Granted that this coin belongs to India, why should it have German legends? The suggestion has been made that it was only intended for a weight. What other weights are known with a milled edge?

Any information tending to elucidate the piece will be welcomed.

Q. 7. On plate II of the B.M. Catalogue of Anglo-Saxon Coins (Vol. I) the priest (?) holding a cross or crosses is depicted standing upon a crescent with globular ends. Can any reader throw light upon this peculiarity? Is the crescent a relic of paganism?

NUMISMATIC SOCIETIES, MUSEUMS, &c.

KENT NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

The monthly meeting of this Society was held on 12th Feb. 1926 at the Maidstone Museum, with Mr. H. Risch as chairman. Mr. E. H. Clark read a paper of great interest on "The Coinage of the Channel Islands", which he illustrated with a carefully tabulated collection of coins. At the conclusion of his paper, a vote of thanks was proposed by Mr. Walter H. Day, which was carried unanimously. The following coins were exhibited: By Mr. Bridge, a Roman coin showing the Chi-Rho (labarum) of Constantine; two silver Siamese bullet coins of 1/2 and 1 tical. Mr. E. H. Clark, a collection of coins of the Channel Islands and a copper coin of Indore. Mr. E. T. Clark, a Guinea bank weight 2 grs. short of the standard, for coins struck earlier than 1772; a copper memorial token of Roger Heath, 1747; a copper token, probably used in a convict prison, struck on a Victoria copper 1/2d., and various countermarked copper coins. Mr. Cook, a collection of Nuremberg tokens including the Venus, Ship and School pennies, from the Museum collection. The Society's case in the Great Hall of the Museum now contains new exhibits of Portrait medals by Jean Dassier, of the Kings and Queens of England, also "Pennies of All Ages", over a range of 2,000 years, from the earliest Roman denarius to the present day.

NUMISMATIC SOCIETY OF VICTORIA.

Though the holidays were scarcely over, the January Meeting attracted a fair attendance which was presided over by P.C. Clement, Esq. (President).

After the more formal business, Mr. Kenyon mentioned that the Trustees of the Museum had appointed guide lectures to several sections of the Museum Collections but that none had been appointed for that of Numismatics, and suggested that the Trustees should be approached on the matter. Attention was drawn to a paragraph in the daily press by Mr. Anthony announcing the early closing of the Sydney Mint. The matter of the appointment of a trustee for the Society was also brought before the meeting by the same speaker, who pointed out that such an appointment was unnecessary as the rules provided that the legal ownership of the property of the Society was vested in the Executive Council elected for the time being.

A paper was read by Mr. Gardner on "The Coinage of the Reign of Queen Victoria" suggesting its study by those members interested in British Coins. He pointed out that it might be considered too modern but that "No coinage is too new nor too old to be considered by Numismatists". He had no hesitation in saying that both Britishers and Australians as a whole knew very little about the coinage issued for their own country during the reigns of the last three sovereigns. He also stated that they were very interesting and as an example of how interesting they were he re-read an earlier paper on the "British Florin".

NUMISMATIC NOTES.

A NEW IRISH MONEYER.

Two years ago I acquired a masle farthing of John with the legend ISWA. As there was no known moneyer to whom to attribute it, it was provisionally read SIWA, and Simund of Waterford was suggested as a possible solution. There were however two serious objections to this reading: (1) all other masle farthings faithfully reproduce the first four letters of the moneyer's name, e.g. NORM, NICO, GEFR, ROBE, etc., and ignore any suggestion of the mint town, (2) Simund is only known as a Dublin and Limerick moneyer during this period.

However the complementary halfpenny has just turned up — unfortunately with the legend partly struck off the flan — reading. Obv. ... ANNES DOMI. Rev. ... SWARDD... This, I take it, is Isward de Wa, as the only other (published) coins of this reign substituting DE for the common ON are all of Waterford. Incidentally they are all in the Royal Irish Academy collection and read Will (or Willelmus) de Water (or Wa).

It would be interesting to know if any of your readers can confirm this reading from his own collection.

THE GOLD MOHUR.

It is not in the proceedings of a Currency Commission that we look for the light of romance. Arguments about the gold standard are not apt to brighten the life of any man who does not profess political economy. But when the Indian Commission publishes a plea for the return to the mohur it stirs the heart. Gold mohurs sound the glory of the gorgeous East. Our own sedate JANE AUSTEN, when she wanted to call up a vision of India, must write of "nabobs, gold mohurs, and palanquins." The nabobs are gone for ever, and the princes and princesses of the East abroad not in palanquins but in motor-cars of many cylinders. But if India coined her golden mohurs again we should feel that the world still had some of its old mysterious treasure. Governments and exchequers in our time have forgotten how to deal with money. They can spend it, we know to our sorrow; it burns holes in their pockets, but they have dramatically failed to make it interesting, to preserve its old charm. Who can feel any emotion about a Bradbury or a Fisher? But a sovereign was a pleasant thing, a thing to honour and cherish. Our ancestors well understood the importance of giving a coin a good name. EDWARD III. offered his country gold nobles, EDWARD IV. went one better, and turned them into angels. Such was the virtue of the angel (it took its name from St. MICHAEL) that after it had fallen out of use it was still coined for a King to give to those whom he touched to cure them of the "King's evil," scrofula. Then there was a GEORGE noble and a Rose noble, and Scotland must needs coin a Thistle noble. The value of all these English nobles was something about 10s, but when did 10s ever sound so well as a rose noble, we protest, is a far, far better thing than half a sovereign. There is very much in a name. For all time the sound of ducats will bring up visions of vast wealth. What churl would remind us that Shylock's ducat was a mere three and six? There are words that chink like gold. Dollar still sounds well, yet not so well as doubloons, or pieces of eight, or pistoles, which seem to speak of El Dorado itself. Was not the word a pleasanter place while still we talked of crowns? A franc is well enough, but we submit, without a thought of politics, that a louis sounds infinitely more opulent.

THE GUINEA AND ITS PAYERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—Can anyone say when the above-named coin was last issued for circulation from the Mint? I dimly remember, sixty years ago, an aged tinker, who hung at the end of her watch-chain one of these coins as a memento of a bygone age. This is the time of year when one's thoughts go to family connections and old friends, and the usual custom of reminding them of our continued affection or remembrance lies in the shape of a gift of some kind or another. Moreover, our creditors will soon be pressing us their claims for payment. Both of these duties we like to discharge if we can. But why these "guineas" charged for toys or other trifles, and especially noticeable in "accounts rendered"? Our coin is expressed in £ s. d., and the highest value is the £—20s. Why should an ancient coin with a shilling higher value be substituted for it? I fancy that many subscribers like to see their names in public print, and would be glad by double instead of single figures, while professional men and tradesmen make a practice of securing the extra shilling. They will not get it from me. — Yours, &c.,

A. VICTIM.

THE NEW SIXPENCE.

1925 COINS WITH FLATTER EDGES.

Eagle-eyed cashiers have observed that the bright new sixpenny pieces lately issued bearing the date 1925 appear slightly different in design from those of other years, in that the milled ridge around the edge is flatter and less pronounced. Older sixpences have a comparatively sharp edge, and on the new coins the edge is rounded and smooth, and this has the effect of making the coin look thinner.

"There is no difference in design," a Press representative was informed at the Royal Mint yesterday. "It is possible that some slight difference in the manufacturing process may have occurred, or the tools used may have produced a difference in the edge of the coin. There is, however, no difference in weight, and as far as we are concerned the coins are not altered." Treasury officials were interested when the point was brought to their notice, but they, too, explained that there had certainly been no change in design, as such an alteration would involve a very long process, including formal approval by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, as Master of the Royal Mint, and, in certain circumstances, the King himself.

After an examination of samples of the old and new coins Treasury officials decided that the difference was very small. "If coins produced at the beginning of the year are compared with those produced at the end of the year, very slight differences may quite likely be found," it was explained. "For one thing, the dies used wear out. The Mint is always trying to improve the coinage."

EDWARD I. PENNIES.

Valuable additions of early English coins have been made to the British Museum, from the recent find on land at Newminster Abbey, near Orpeth. Treasure trove being by law the property of the Crown, the land was granted to Sir George Renwick, Bt., the owner of the land, subject to the payment by him of a percentage of the value to cover administrative expenses. Sir George has generously presented 132 coins the total of 486 found to the British Museum. They are largely English pennies of Edward I.

FIND OF ROMAN COINS.

SILVER HOARD AT WIGAN.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

WIGAN, Sunday. — An important find of Roman silver coins has just been made near Boar's Head, Wigan. A labourer while digging a shallow trench turned up a hoard of about fifty coins, mostly in remarkably good preservation, as well as a number of fragments. By the efforts of Mr. Hawkes, the Wigan borough librarian, nearly all the coins unearthed have been acquired for the town. The hoard was found about 10 ins. below the surface, near the River Douglas, in ground that has been practically virgin and unturned since the days of the Roman occupation of Britain. The coins were lying in the soil, not being enclosed in any kind of box or pot, although probably originally they would be wrapped in some sort of perishable container. The coins, so far as at present identified, belong to the following reigns:

(?) Galba, 68; Domitian, 81-96; Trajan, 98-117; Hadrian, 117-138; Antoninus Pius, 138-161; Faustina the Elder (wife of Antoninus Pius), 138-141; Crispina Augusta (wife of Commodus), 180-192; Julia Augusta (wife of Lucius Septimius Severus), 193-211; Septimius Geta, 198-209; Plautilla Augusta (wife of Caracalla), died 212; Caracalla, 212-217; Macrinus, 217; Marcus Aurelius Antoninus (Elagabalus), 218-222; Alexander Severus, 222-235; Julia Mamaea (mother of Alexander Severus), 222-235.

Wigan has been identified as the Roman station Coccium mentioned in the 10th Itinerary of Antoninus (Marcus Aurelius Antoninus) as an important centre of cross roads. At the beginning of the nineteenth century the remains of a Roman agger and vallum were still visible, and the general plan of the centre of Wigan conforms to the usual features of a Roman fort.

It is believed that the Romans mined coal in the Wigan district nearly 2,000 years ago for the smelting of iron at the Roman Veratimum, which has been located at Wilderspool, on the banks of the River Mersey, near Warrington, where their long-buried furnaces have been uncovered in recent years.

"We have not anything new in the way of antiquities here, but the season of potato digging is our best time for coins."

RICHARD SAINTHILL.

Cork, 30 Oct. 1841.

The Curator of a City Museum thus described a Nomisma of Michael VIII taken to him for identification:

"The enclosed is a Medal, not a coin. The obv. represents a Knight in armour confronting a Lady. The Greek letters behind the Lady seem to be a contracted form of Christos.

The Reverse is too much worn to be identified. It may have been a coat of arms, with a motto in Gothic German characters, but these are defaced beyond recognition.

The medal may belong to the 14th or early 15th Century."

- Romulus was the legendary founder of Rome, reputed son of Mars and Rhea Silvia; exposed at his birth along with Remus, was suckled by the Wolf and brought up by the Royal shepherd Faustulus. As a young man he opened an asylum for fugitives on one of the hills of Rome and founded a city in B.C. 753.*

- Tarpeia, a vestal virgin, betrayed the city to the Sabine soldiers, then besieging Rome, on condition that they gave her what they wore on their arms, as she coveted their gold bracelets; instead, the soldiers flung their shields (borne on their left arms) upon her, so keeping the letter of their promise, and visiting perfdy with merited punishment.*

The Marcia gens claimed descent from Ancus Marcius, the fourth king of Rome, who is said to have been the first to bring water to Rome by means of aqueduct. The lituus may refer to the priestly offices and ceremonies instituted by the early kings. The equestrian statue on the reverse is that of Q. Marcius Rex, who was commissioned by the Senate to repair the old aqueducts and to build one which would give a supply of water to the Capitol; this aqueduct is known as the Aqua Marcia; in commemoration of the great benefit derived from this new water supply the Senate placed an equestrian statue of Marcius on the aqueduct. The flower under the horse may be identified with the flower, Martialis, a punning allusion to the name Marcius.

Servius Sulpicius Rufus* in B.C. 44. V.F. 5 5 »
- The type relates to the relief of Tusculum B.C. 374, by the Roman military tribune, Servius Sulpicius Rufus, on which occasion the Latins having captured the city forced the inhabitants to take refuge in the citadel, where the Temple of the Dioscuri was situated.*
- 52168 Capture of Privernum. B.C. 329. R. Obv. P. YPSAE [s.c.]. Diad. head of Leuconoe to r., behind dolphin. R. C. YPSAE. COS. PRIV CEPIT. Jupiter in quadriga galloping l. B., Plautia, 12. Struck by P. Plautius Hypsaenus in B.C. 91. E.F. » 12 »
- The Hypsaei traced their descent from Neptune and his daughter Leuconoe. The rev. type commemorates the capture of Privernum by an ancestor of the moneyer, C. Plautius Decianus Hypsaenus B.C. 329, for which on his return to Rome he received a triumph. The scorpion is the Zodiacal sign of the city of Comma-gene and may suggest that Hypsaenus held some command in the army of Pompey when he invaded that district. The symbol seems to confirm the supposition that these coins were struck on the occasion of Pompey's triumph. B.M.C., 1, 477.*

RVB[R]. B., Rubria, 4. Struck by L. Lubrius Dosumus in B.C. 86. V.F. » 5 »
- The Victory refers to the public games; the altar is that of Aesculapius, which was placed on the island in the Tiber; and the head of Neptune... recalls the episode of the expedition which was sent to Epidaurus in B.C. 293 to seek the god, in which an ancestor of the moneyer may have taken a prominent part. B.M.C., 1, 312.*

- 52171 Third Samnite War in B.C. 290. R. Obv. Bust of Mars r. with slight beard, wearing crested helmet, ornamented on each side with a feather or aigrette, and chlamys fastened on the shoulder; behind, TI. VER and X. R. A youth kneeling l. on l. knee between two warriors who touch with their swords a pig, which the youth holds in his hands; the warrior on the r. to whom the youth turns his head is in Roman dress and leans with l. hand on spear; the warrior on the l. is bearded and naked to the waist; he also leans with l. hand on spear; above the group, [RO]MA. B., Veluria, 1. Struck by T. Velurius in B.C. 129. E.F. » 8 6

The reverse represents the mode of taking an oath amongst the inhabitants of the Italian states. Probably it records the close of the Third Samnite War in B.C. 290 in which an ancestor of Ti. Velutius may have taken a prominent part. B.M.C., II, 282.

 Behind, lituus. ℞. C. SERVEIL C.F. Two warriors armed with shields, standing facing each other; in their r. hands they hold their swords, the hilts of which are touching. The boss of the shield of the warrior on the r. is ornamented with a star. (A very interesting coin, the obv. probably referring to the institution of the Floralia on the occasion of the dedication of the temple to Flora (B.C. 240); and the rev. to the numerous single combats fought by M. Servilius Pulex Geminus, the two warriors being shown measuring swords before a duel.) Struck by C. Ser-

 1. Struck by M. Sergius Silus. B.C. 104. E.F. » 8 6
 The type of the rev. is an allusion to the bravery of M. Sergius Silus, the great-grandfather of Catiline (of whom the moneyer was perhaps the father) who distinguished himself during the second Punic War. Although he had lost his r. arm and had received twenty-three wounds in two campaigns, M. Sergius Silus fought four times against the Carthaginians with his l. hand only. He had made a r. arm of iron, and during the time that he wore it he took Cremona by siege, relieved Placentia, and captured twelve camps of the enemy in Gaul. That is why he is represented holding his sword and a human head (that of a Gaul) in his l. hand B.M.C.,

 Servius Sulpicius Galba. B.C. 64. F. 1 10 »
 Cavedoni explains the rev. type as relating to the expedition of the ancestor of the moneyer, P. Sulpicius Galba Maximus, pro-consul in Greece, B.C. 209-208, against the island of Aegina, in the course of the war with the Aetolians and Philip of Macedon.
 The trophy would refer to the destruction of the enemy's fleet, and the prisoners to the captives who were sold sub hasta and repurchased by their fellow-citizens; the latter being represented by the draped

 In B.C. 201 three ambassadors were sent from Rome to the Egyptian court to administer the affairs of the Kingdom for the infant sovereign, Ptolemy V. Lepidus the youngest of the three seems to have enjoyed the most power, and he alone is spoken of as the tutor of the king.

 by Caius Servilius in B.C. 94. F. » 3 6
 The warrior here represented was elected augur in B.C. 211, filling that office for about 40 years. He is said to have received wounds in twenty-three single combats and to have been victorious in all.

- 52179 Battle of Cynoscephalae. B.C. 197. Æ. Obv. Head of tius in B.C. 134. E.F. » 8 6

 The type of the rev. and also the symbol, the shield, relate to the great victory of T. Quinctius Flaminius over Philip V. of Macedon at Cynoscephalae in B.C. 197, after which that general offered up special vows to the Dioscuri at the temple of Delphi. This would account for the recurrence of a type which had fallen out of use for some time. The flamen's cap on the obv. is a 'symbole parlant' of the moneyer's cognomen. B.M.C., I, 155.

 L. Valerius Flaccus in B.C. 90. V.F. » 7 »
 The types appear to record three events connected with the Valeria gens, viz., the successes of L. V. Flaccus in north Italy against the Gauls in B.C. 194, represented by Victory and Mars; the colonization of Placentia and Cremona by the triumvir of the same name in B.C. 190, referred to by the corn-stalk; and the appointment of L. V. Flaccus, the consul of B.C. 131, as

 The obv. type is supposed to relate to the mission of L. Marcus
 Q. f. Philippus who concluded with Philip V. a treaty of friendship.
 The rev. type records the erection of a statue or monument to a member of the Marcia gens; perhaps that of Q. Marcus Tremulus which was erected in the Forum after his victory over the Hernici in B.C. 306; or that erected to Q. Marcus Philippus, the conqueror of Perseus. B.M.C., II, 277.

 In the obv. type there is perhaps a reference to the praetorship of L. Postumius Albinus over Spain and to his successful expeditions against the Vaccae and Lusitani (B.C. 180-179). The scene on the rev. may relate to the levying of troops for his Spanish campaign. B.M.C., I, 352.

Q. Caepio was quaestor urbanis in the year in which L. Appuleius Saturninus proposed his 'lex frumentaria de semissibus et trientibus', by which the state was to let people buy corn at a semis and triens for a modius. The chief opponent of the law was Q. Caepio, who protested against it, on the ground that such a largess would put too great a strain on the public treasury. To enable the quaestors to fulfil the Appulian law, the senate ordered them to strike this special issue of coins. The order is expressed by the legend EX S.C. which now occurs for the first time.

MEDALS COMMEMORATIVE OF BRITISH HISTORY.

THE COMMONWEALTH.

1649-1660.

52979	Henry Scobell, Clerk of Parliament. A. Bust of Scobell in profile to left, plain collar, doublet. No legend. R. Engraved HENRY SCOBELL Esq. Med. Ill., I, ³⁸⁵ / ₂ var. Pl. xxxiv, 20. Size 1.35.	E.F.	125	»
-------	--	------	-----	---	--	--

This very rare medal is the work of the famous artist Thomas Simon, and has a loop for suspension. Henry Scobell was appointed Clerk of Parliament in 1648 and 1649, again appointed 1653, and again 1654. In the following year he appears to have been Clerk of the Council. Scobell was deprived of his offices at the Restoration.

52980	Oliver Cromwell, Captain General and Commander-in-Chief. 1650. A. OLI : CROMWEL. MILIT : PARL : DVX. GEN :. Bust of Cromwell ³ / ₄ to right, plain collar, armour, scarf. Plain reverse. Med. Ill., I, ³⁸⁵ / ₂ . Pl. xxxiv, 25. Size 1.4. RR.	E.F.	30	»
-------	---	------	----	---	--	--

This medal is oval, but struck on a round flan, and is another choice example of the work of the famous artist Thomas Simon. The medal is finely executed, and the bust is in high relief. The upper part of the die was evidently broken, probably before any medals were completed.

- 1981 A. — Another, not quite so fine, but showing less marks of the break in the die. Pierced for suspension. V.F. 25 » »
 1982 R. — The oval medal cut out of the round flan. E.F. 2 2 »

1660-1685.

The following badges were doubtless worn as medals or ornaments, and were indications of affection to the monarchy, either upon the prospect of its speedy restoration or upon its actual re-establishment. All must have been made, as the portraits and dress show, either during the King's exile or very early in his reign.

BADGES.

52997 Charles II. A. Incuse legend: Carolus Secundus. * This medal was struck in Holland and is the work of Christopher Adolfszoon. The burning ships on the obverse allude to the destruction of English ships at Chatham. This medal gave great offence to the English government, official remonstrances were made, formal apology offered, insult disclaimed, and the dies destroyed. The wound, however, rankled, and the medal was one of the stated grounds of offence in the declaration of war in 1672.

* This brave old corps — the first foot regiment added to the Army after the accession of the House of Brunswick — dates its regimental existence from the 25th August, 1717, when certain independent companies of foot, which for many years had done duty in the West Indies and American Plantations, were ordered to be regimented at Annapolis Royal, under the command of Colonel afterwards General, Richard Phillips the newly-appointed governor of Nova Scotia. The regiment took rank as the 40th Foot....

It continued to serve in Nova Scotia, Maine, and Newfoundland for some thirty years longer.

After the breaking out of the Seven Years' War, the regiment went to Louisbourg, Cape Breton, and took part in the capture of that famous stronghold ; its grenadiers with the "Grenadiers of Louisbourg" fought under Wolfe at Quebec in 1759. Arriving from Cape Breton in the following spring, the regiment witnessed the conquest of the French at Montreal in September, 1760, completing the conquest of the Canadas, and was afterwards at the taking of Guadaloupe in 1761, and at the conquest of the Havana in 1762.

After forty six years' continuous foreign service, the 40th came home, and was for some years on the Irish Establishment. It went back to America at the commencement of the War of Independence, and fought at Long Island, at the capture of New York, in the battles of Brandywine and Germantown, and other affairs....

The flank companies were much distinguished at the landing at Aboukir, where they were among the first troops on shore, and in the great battle before Alexandria on 21st March 1801.

The Sultan of Turkey presented gold medals to British officers for services in Egypt 1801. Obv. The Sultan's cypher with an ornamental border and the date 1801. R. The crescent and star within a similar border. A short gold chain and hook is attached to each medal.

In 1806 the first battalion proceeded to South America, with the reinforcements under Sir Samuel Auchmuty, and fought at Monte Video and Buenos Ayres. The same battalion accompanied Sir Arthur Wellesley to Portugal in 1808, and was present at the actions of Roleia and Vimiera. Afterwards it was detached from Portugal to Seville. Rejoining Sir Arthur Wellesley on his return to Portugal in 1809, it made all the subsequent Peninsular campaigns, and had a distinguished share in the glories of Talavera, Badajos, Salamanca, Vittoria, the battles of the Pyrenees, where it had some desperate fighting at the Pass of Roncesvalles, 28th July, 1813, the passages of the Nivelle and Nive, and the battles of Orthes and Toulouse.

At Waterloo it had 25 killed and 142 wounded out of a total of 761 of all ranks.

In the first Afghan War it fought under General Nott, and served at the defence of Candahar during the winter of 1840-1, when that city was beleaguered by a force of 10,000 Afghans, at the action at Gouine and recapture of Ghuznee, and the force under Nott, which marched to join General Pollock and reached Kabul 17th September, 1842. In the following year the 40th was present at the defeat of the Mahratta Army at Maharajpore, on which occasion it much distinguished itself and captured four of the enemy's standards. Served in New Zealand from 1860-66. Vide Record and Badges.

53 Sir Robert Macara, K.C.B. RRR. F.D.C. 500 » »

* The death of Sir R. Macara at Quatre Bras was inexpressibly sad. "He was wounded about the middle of the engagement, and was in the act of being carried off the field by four of his men, when a party of French unexpectedly surrounded and made them prisoners. Perceiving by the colonel's decorations that he was an officer of rank they immediately cut him down with his attendants.

"Here the Goddess ceased her lay;
Weak, her wings refused to fly;
Faint, her voice forbode to say
How Macara dared to die.

"Be it, then, to friendship giv'n
Such a warrior's name to save While'tis borne on breeze of heav'n
That he found a soldier's grave.

"By unequal hosts oppos'd,
Still he proved his valour true;
For his bright career was clos'd
On the plains of Waterloo!"

Vide Waterloo Roll Coll.

We were all ready and in line — "Forward!" was the word of command, and forward we hastened, though we saw no enemy in front. The stalks of the rye, like the reeds that grow on the margin of some swamp, opposed our advance; the tops were up to our bonnets, and we strode and groped our way through as fast as we could. By the time we reached a field of clover on the other side, we were very much straggled; however, we united in line as fast as time and our speedy advance would permit. The Belgic skirmishers retired through our ranks, and in an instant we were on their victorious pursuers. Our sudden appearance seemed to paralyse their advance. The singular appearance of our dress, combined no doubt with our sudden debut, tended to stagger their resolution: we were on them, our pieces were loaded, and our bayonets glittered, impatient to drink their blood. Those who had so proudly driven the Belgians before them, turned now to fly, whilst our loud cheers made the fields echo to our wild hurrahs. France fled or fell before us, and we thought the field our own. We had not yet lost a man, for the victors seldom lose many, except in protracted hard-contested struggles: with one's face to the enemy, he may shun the deadly thrust or stroke; it is the retreating soldier that destruction pursues.

We drove on so fast that we almost appeared like a mob following the rout of some defeated faction. Marshal Ney, who commanded the enemy, observed our wild ungoverned zeal, and ordered a regiment of lancers to bear down upon us. We saw their approach at a distance, as they issued from a wood, and took them for Brunswickers coming to cut up the flying infantry; and as cavalry on all occasions have the advantage of retreating foot, on a fair field, we were halted in order to let them take their way: they were approaching our right flank, from which our skirmishers were extended, and we were far from being in a formation fit to repel an attack, if intended, or to afford regular support to our friends if requiring our aid. I think we stood with too much confidence, gazing towards them as if they had been our friends, anticipating the gallant charge they would make on the flying foe, and we were making no preparative movement to receive them as enemies, further than the reloading of the muskets, until a German orderly dragoon galloped up, exclaiming, "Franchise! Franchise!" and, wheeling about, galloped off. We instantly formed a rallying square; no time for particularity; every man's piece was loaded, and our enemies approached at full charge; the feet of their horses seemed to tear up the ground. Our skirmishers having been impressed with the same opinion, that these were Brunswick cavalry, fell beneath their lances, and few escaped death or wounds; our brave colonel fell at this time, pierced through the chin until the point of the lance reached the brain. Captain Menzies fell, covered with wounds, and a momentary conflict took place over him; he was a powerful man, and, hand to hand, more than a match for six ordinary men. The grenadiers, whom he commanded, pressed round to save or avenge him, but fell beneath the enemy's lances.

* Accompanied Abercromby to Egypt, and were present at the landing in Aboukir Bay, and the battles before Alexandria, when the main body of the army advanced on Cairo, the two battalions of the 54th remained with the troops blockading Alexandria, and was subsequently employed with the force set to attack the city from the western side, where the first battalion particularly distinguished itself by the capture of the important fortified post of Marabout. A French field-piece was also captured on that occasion.

- * The above medals record the most famous siege of Gibraltar lasting from 1779 to 1783, by a combined force of Spaniards and French, which was successfully withstood by the English under General Eliott, afterwards Lord Heathfield; a siege almost unparalleled in the annals of ancient or modern warfare. The English were more than once reinforced or revictualled by sea; but the investment continued, and a very severe bombardment and powerful floating batteries were tried in vain against it.

- * Capture of French frigate "Didon". This action is ranked by James as one of the most gallant during the war.
- "I cannot but exult in the honour of imparting to you the extreme good fortune of His Majesty's ship under my command on the 10th instant, in the capture of La Didon a remarkable fine, and the fastest sailing frigate in the French Navy, of 44 guns and 330 men, which had sailed a few days from Corunna, and was upon a secret cruise. The action commenced at a quarter past nine in the morning ("La Didon" having waited my approach to leeward), and lasted three hours, never without pistol shot; during which all our ropes were cut to pieces, our maintopsail yard shot away, and most of our masts and yards severely wounded. The necessity for our engaging to leeward, in order to prevent the possibility of the enemy's escape, exposed us to several raking broad sides before it could be prudent to return the fire; and the superiority of "La Didon's" sailing, added to the adroit manœuvres of Captain Milins, convinced me of the skill and gallantry I should have to contend with, which was fully evinced by the stubborn defence of his ship until she became a perfect wreck, and his subsequent honourable deportment. Owing to the lightness of the wind, and "La Didon's" attempt to board, brought our starboard quarter in contact with her larboard bow, in which position we remained full three quarters of an hour, subject to a galling fire of musketry, that robbed me of such support of officers and men as there could be no compensation for but in complete victory."

AES GRAVE

A Study of the Cast Coinages of Rome and Central Italy

BY

EDWARD A. SYDENHAM M.A.

Quarto, 145 pp., 28 plates, boards, linen back and corners.

The Aes Grave forms the first chapter of the long story of the Roman Coinage but hitherto no complete account of it has been set forth in English. The well known works of Garrucci and Haeberlin are unwieldy in size and almost prohibitive in price. The present study surveys the whole field from a thoroughly scientific point of view, contains a corpus of over 350 pieces, and is illustrated with a series of plates from recent Sale Catalogues which should meet all practical requirements. The price has been put as low as possible, for a work of this class, in the hope that it may reach all who are interested in the fascinating problems of the origins of the famous coinage of ancient Rome.

Just published.

DIES FOR FALSE COINS

In the possession of the Museo Nazionale Romano are more than 1000 dies for making false coins, for the most part produced by the electrotyping process; about a hundred are however hand-engraved in steel. The various classes of coins and medals are represented in approximately the following numbers: Greek coins, 232; Roman 520; Medieval and Modern 294.

The Istituto Italiano di Numismatica, in agreement with the Direction of the Museum, has undertaken the publication of impressions from these dies, with descriptions, in a quarto volume with about 40 plates. An invitation issued some years ago for subscriptions to defray the cost of this work having met with inadequate response the publication has not proceeded. As, however, it is highly desirable, in the interest of museums and private collectors, that the forgeries from these dies should be exposed, the invitation is now renewed. Promises to subscribe at the rate of £ 1.10s. sterling or 6 dollars will be received by Dr. G. F. Hill, British Museum, London, W. C. 1, or Messrs. Spink and Son, Ltd., 17 Piccadilly, London, W. 1. Payment should not be actually made until notice is received that the work is ready for distribution.

EDITORIAL

We have pleasure in announcing that we have now moved into our new premises in the rear of the old building which has been pulled down for street widening.

We have a very spacious suite for the Coin Dept. which will greatly add to the comfort of customers when visiting us. There is now plenty of room for us to arrange our very large Numismatic Library comprising over three thousand volumes and we shall be pleased for our subscribers to consult these on the premises.

YMBERT, GUILLAUME (French). Mint-master at Saint-Lô, 1539: head of unicorn.

YRIART, AUGER DE (French). Mint-master at Bayonne, from 1496: pointed star; the same (?) in 1499: a crescent.

Z

ZACCHI, GIOVANNI (B.D.M., VI, p. 712). Mr. Pio Santamaria, of Rome, has kindly brought to my notice the description of a medal by this artist, of Ersilia Cortesia de Monte. No specimen of this medal has yet turned up, but that one was issued is certain and proved by a letter of Pietro Aretino to Ersilia Cortesi, praising the work of Zacchi and suggesting a motto for the reverse.

The medal is thus described : ERSILIA CORTESIA DE MONTE. Bust to left. OPES NON ANIMUM. Castle in flames.

At the time of Aretino's letter, Zacchi had evidently only executed the obverse.

An interesting article on Ersilia Cortesi appeared in the "Nuova Antologia", Vol. LII, Series III, pp. 1-15, August 1894, in which full details are given and the medal (the obverse) is mentioned. The motto which was selected by Ersilia Cortesi for the reverse is given in Ruscelli, Imprese Illustri.

Prof. Cesare Cortesi, a friend of Mr. Santamaria, has an illustration of the obverse of the medal.

Ersilia Cortesi was the wife of Julius III's only nephew and was created Duchess of Nepi by this Pope.

ZADIKOW, A. (Germ.). Contemporary Medallist of Munich, by whom I have seen an oval medal of the Prince Regent Luitpold Regiment Bavarian Field Artillery, 1916; iron, 83 × 59 mill.

ZIEGLER (Germ.). Contemporary Medallist, by whom I have seen the following medals : Captain von Müller; iron, 105 mill.; — Prof. Dr. Rausenberger, inventor of the 42 cm. Howitzer; Æ. 34 mill.; — Vice-Admiral Count von Spee, 1914; Æ. 34 mill.; — Captain Otto Weddigen; Sinking of the cruisers Aboukir, Hogue and Cressy; Æ. 105 mill.; Æ. 34 mill.

ZEGGIN (ZECKHIN, SECKHEIN), GEORG. Identical with GEORG SECKHEIN. Goldsmith and Medallist to the Bavarian court at Munich, 1560. We find with him at the same time ISAAK MELBER.

ZITA, H. (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 731). Additional works : "The Heroes of the Adriatic", Von Lerch and Von Trapp; iron, 45 mill.; — Our Flying men, 1914-1917; iron, 90 mill.

ZUTT, R.A. (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 737). Additional works : The European War; Æ. 85 mill.; — Red Cross Badge of the Verebely Clinical Surgery in Budapest; oval medallion, 39 × 26 mill.; — Red Cross Badge of the Hospital of the Fine Arts Academy in Budapest; Æ. medallion; — Badge of the Archduke Joseph's Army, 1616-1917; Æ. 45 × 36 mill.; — Oval medallion of the 38th Honved Brigade; 41 × 26 mill.

HOPKINS (Brit.). This signature occurs on a medal, dated 1851 issued for presentation by H.E. Sir H.G. Smith Bart. G.C.B. for gallantry in the field, during the South African Campaign.

The specimen of this medal which I have seen is from flawed dies and it appears that the medal was not official.

Hopkins was probably a local Engraver, about whom I have not been able to obtain further information.

WILGOT (Num. Circ., Nov.-Dec. 1925, p. 481).

Mr. M.H. Spielmann has kindly brought to our notice a further work by Wilgot. It is a small portrait of Shakespeare, carved in black marble, and signed Wilgot on the back. The work is particularly good, and even better than that on the four plaques by this artist we have illustrated before.

From the carving in marble by WILGOT — obverse and reverse — size of the original. In the Collection of M.H. Spielmann Esq. owner of the copyright.

Portrait of William Shakespeare.

THE COINS OF THE DUTCH EAST INDIES.

An Introduction to the Study of the Series
(excluding those specially struck for India and Ceylon)

BY SIR JOHN BUCKNILL M.A. (OXON).

The above observations indicate the main difficulties to meet which so many expedients in the way of counterstamping coins were adopted by the Dutch authorities in Java, none of which, would seem, was particularly successful in result.

In 1686 it was ordered that silver Dutch European coins known as Ducatoons should be counter-struck with the representation of a man on horseback — a device known as the "Dutch Rider"; in 1687 the silver Stivers of Zeeland were directed to be overstruck with the crest of that Province; in 1693 Indian silver Rupees of Surat were counterstamped with the "Dutch Rider" mark and in 1753 (or thereabouts) Persian silver Rupees were counterstruck with the word "Java" in Arabic character.

here are thus no less than nine groups of currency to be here with, namely : —

- 1) 1645. First Regular Issue.
- 2) 1686. Dutch European Ducatoons overstamped with the "Dutch Rider".
- 3) 1687. Stivers of Zeeland overstamped with the crest of that province.
- 4) 1693. Indian Rupees of Surat overstamped with the "Dutch Rider".
- 5) 1747-1750. Second Regular Issue.

a) First Group 1645.

First Regular Issue.

By a Notification dated February 26th 1645, the Company selected one Jan Ferman (who was by trade a goldsmith) and a free man named Conjok to coin silver pieces which were to be designated "Crowns" or "Reals"; they were to weigh seven-tenths of the old Dutch (European) "Leeuwendaalder" (i.e. 1 Dollar) or "Real". They were of the currency value of eight Stivers.

Half Crowns and Quarter Crowns were also produced. The issue called for owing to the great local shortage of silver coinage. Being, however, to the appearance in a very short time of many counterfeit specimens, the whole issue was withdrawn from circulation on September 23rd 1647 (N. & C. pp. 23-25).

All the three pieces, which are of very handsome design, are of the highest rarity. They were described and figured both by Kade and Messrs. Netscher and Van der Chijs but were not dealt with by Moquette in any of his publications. The coins were made of a poor grade of silver, were cast in moulds and have a sharp edge.

1645. Batavian Crown (Forty-eight Stiver Piece). D. 36. W. 22.6 (H.).

Obv. Within a beaded circle, an upright sword the point of which passes through a laurel wreath : this device constituted the Crest of the City of Batavia. Legend around, "ANNO. 1645. BATAVIAE" (i.e. "In the year 1645 (coin) of Batavia). Scroll-work above and below.

Rev. Within a beaded circle, the monogram VOIC (representing the initial letters of the Vereenigde Oost Indische Compagnie) : above the monogram, "48 ST." (St. = Stivers). Four ornamental flower-work scrolls around the beaded circle (V. p. 200 and Pl. 200, f. 2; Bat. M. C. p. 78; N. & C. Pl. 3, f. 17; Steph. L. 6439. Pl. 14; G. pp. 35, 36 (L. 624. £ 22 10 s. 0 d.) and Pl. 5, f. 624).

1645. Batavian Half-Crown (or Twenty-four Stiver Piece). D. 33.

Similar, generally, to No. 39 but smaller; and the figures "24" replace the figures "48" on the Reverse.

(V. p. 200 and Pl. 200, f. 3; Bat. M. C. p. 78; N. & C. p. 102 and Pl. 3, f. 18; Steph. L. 6440.)

41. 1645. Batavian Quarter-Crown (or Twelve Stiver Piece). D. 25. W. 6.8 (H.).

Similar, generally, to No. 40 but smaller : but, on the obverse, the word "BATAVIAE" is placed on the right side of the coin; and, on the Reverse, the figures "12" replace the figures "24".

(V. p. 200 and Pl. 200, f. 4; Bat. M. C. p. 78; N. & C. p. 102 and Pl. 3, f. 19; Steph. L. 6441. Pl. 14.)

Fig. 27.

From a coin in the Royal Coin Cabinet at The Hague.

Owing, no doubt, to the short period (about two years) during which these three pieces were in circulation and to the fact that they were not produced in any considerable quantity, there are but few known. There is a set in the Batavian Museum one of which (the Half-Crown) at least was bought by Mr. Moquette for that Institution from the Stephanik Collection in 1904. There are a Crown and Quarter Crown in the Royal Coin Cabinet at the Hague and a Crown in the Royal Mint Collection at Utrecht. There are none in the British Museum. There was a Crown in the Grogan Cabinet.

It is curious that in the catalogue of the Batavian Museum (p. 78) a Crown dated 1646 is listed; but it is probably a forgery. Netscher and Van der Chijs state (p. 102) that the Half-Crown and Quarter-Crown are also said to be known dated 1646 and that the Die (or mould) of the Half-Crown of that year differs slightly from that dated 1645 : but the writer has not been able to obtain any information corroborating their belief and Mr. Schulman definitely states that no genuine pieces so dated have ever been discovered.

b) Second group 1686.

Dutch European Ducatoons overstamped with the "Dutch Rider".

By a Resolution dated September 3rd 1686 it was decided that all the silver Dutch European coins known as Ducatoons should, when received in the Company's Treasury at Batavia, be there before re-issue into circulation, with the representation of a man on horseback riding to the left; a device known as the "Dutch Rider" and familiar enough on European coins of the Netherlands.

These coins, thus counterstruck with what was in effect an official imprimatur of their genuineness, were to be valued in circulation at 60 Stivers; whilst those which were not so impressed were to pass as worth but 55 Stivers. The scheme, intended partly, no doubt, to try and keep these intrinsically valuable European silver coins in circulation, was soon abandoned; and the Ducatoons, thus impressed, were withdrawn from currency in the year 1692. (N. & C. p. 40).

It is curious that although the Resolution of 1686 speaks only of "Ducatoons" no specimen of a "Ducatoon" with the counter-stamp seems to have been yet discovered; but, though of extreme rarity, a few "Half-Ducatoons" are known thus overstruck; and it seems not unlikely that "Half-Ducatoons" were intended to fall within the scope of the operation of the Resolution.

The following examples may be mentioned:

42. A silver Half-Ducatoon of Philip IVth of Brabant dated 1638; struck at Brussels. This coin was Lot 6442 in the Stephanik Collection and was figured on Plate 13 of the catalogue: it was acquired at the sale in 1904 by Moquette for the Batavian Museum where it now is.

Fig. 28.

From the illustration in the Stephanik Collection Sale Catalogue.

43. A coin similar to No. 42 but dated 1640. It formed Lot 362 of the Fonrobert Collection.
44. A silver Half-Ducatoon of the Province of Zeeland dated 1662. Weight: 14 grammes. This coin is in the Royal Coin Cabinet at the Hague.

Fig. 29.

c) Third group 1687.

Stivers of Zeeland overstramped with the Crest of that Province.

By a Resolution dated May 16th 1687 it was decided, in order that the genuine specimens might be distinguished easily from the numerous counterfeit examples in circulation, that the little silver Stiver pieces emanating from the Province of Zeeland, should be counterstruck in Batavia with a small representation of the Crest of that Province; i.e. a demi-lion to left arising from waves: a good figure of this device may be seen on Fig 7. Reverse.

This impression was to be made at the side of the large Crest which appeared on the Obverse of these Stiver pieces.

45. Silver Stiver of Zeeland counterstamped with the Crest of the Province.

The Writer has not been able to trace any specimen of this coin thus treated: but the figure below illustrates the type of piece contemplated by the Resolution.

Fig. 30.

d) Fourth Group 1693.

Indian Rupees of Surat overstramped with the "Dutch Rider".

In July 1693 some of the then well known and intrinsically valuable silver Rupees struck at Surat in India were, somewhat as the Dutch European Half-Ducatoons treated were counterstruck in Batavia with a similar small "Dutch Rider".

They were to be, when thus countermarked, current as of the value of twenty-eight Stivers; but they seem, notwithstanding the procedure, to have disappeared from circulation before very long for, as a last effort to keep them in currency, their value was, in 1699, declared to be still further advanced to thirty Stivers.

Very few of these Rupees thus overstramped are known to exist but the following specimens may be mentioned:

46. Silver Rupee of Surat: dated A.H. 1102 = A.D. 1690-1691. Struck at Surat in the 34th regnal year of the Moghul Emperor Aurangzeb. This coin was Lot 363 of the Fonrobert Collection.
47. A similar coin of the same Emperor but struck in his 36th regnal year and dated A.H. 1104 = A.D. 1692-1693. Lot 364 of the Fonrobert Collection.
48. A similar coin of the same Emperor but struck in his 37th regnal year and dated A.H. 1104 = A.D. 1692-1693. In addition to the "Dutch Rider" counterstamp, this remarkable specimen was also overstruck, presumably in or about the year 1753, at Batavia with the word "DJAWA" in Arabic Script (See Sixth Group. 1753). Lot 365 of the Fonrobert Collection.

Fig. 31.

From a coin in the Writer's Cabinet.

(The above figure shows the type of Rupee upon which the "Dutch Rider" was overstruck. The coin is a Rupee struck at Surat in the 26th regnal year of the Emperor Aurangzeb and dated A.H. 1093 = A.D. 1681-1682).

e) Fifth group 1747-1750.

Second Regular Issue.

This group of coins, together with the succeeding last three Regular issues of silver, constitute a well-marked series of what are usually now referred to by Numismatists as "Java" or "Batavian" Rupees: but they were, originally, designated (sometimes officially) as "Derhams" or "Java Silver Money". As has been mentioned before, this silver series lies roughly parallel with the gold series which is formed by the Eighteenth Century issues of gold coinage by the Company from Batavia: but the silver was produced in larger quantity and in a greater number of actual years. The minting again as in the case of the gold coinage, continued, after the dissolution of the Company, to produce silver coins of somewhat the same type; even up to the year 1808.

(To be continued.)

REVIEWS.

NOTE ON SOME COINS STRUCK FOR USE IN TARIM, SOUTHERN ARABIA.
By Sir John A. S. Bucknill, K. C.

Reprint from Journal, vol. III. Part. I, April 1925. Malayan Branch of the Asiatic Society.

Sir John Bucknill describes in this paper a set of three silver coins, illustrated, and one copper coin, which were struck for use in Tarim, Southern Arabia. The silver coins were issued by "The Bank of Birmingham" (formerly Ralph Heaton and Sons) by order of Messrs Guthrie and Co, and Messrs Harndall and Son, two firms of London merchants trading in India. The copper coin, which as well as the silver coins, had been thought to emanate from one of the mints was undoubtedly struck in Birmingham also. The copper coin corresponds in size and style with the One Keeping Token of the Straits Settlements and Malayan Archipelago.

Sir John Bucknill states: "There has from time immemorial been a close connection between Arabia and the Malay Peninsula. I am inclined to think that these copper coins were struck to the order of some Arab merchant of the Straits Settlements for use in Arabia largely by the pilgrims of whom great numbers annually came to Mecca from the Malay Peninsula and Archipelago."

The silver coins, dated 1315, Arabic year, were minted from 18 to 1906 for use in the interior of Hadramut; the copper coins the date 1258 on both sides.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS

H. L.) 'A brass coin, farthing size obv. a harp over D^{G} , legend, STANDARD OF IRELAND. REV. ANNO REG. ANNAE with Arms of Anne for the Union' is a coin weight such as was in general use.

H. L.) How are the obv. and rev. of coins to be distinguished? In the case of ancient coins the obverse is the anvil side of the coin and the rev. the punch side of the coin; as the most important feature was usually a head and needed higher relief, this side was struck on the anvil; and so in modern numismatics the side with the ruler's head is the obverse. In cases where there is no portrait its equivalent, the side with value on it is usually the reverse.

NUMISMATIC SOCIETIES, MUSEUMS, &c

AUSTRALIAN NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

The Ordinary Meeting of the Society was held at the B.M.A. Building, 30 Elizabeth Street, Sydney, on Thursday, 22nd October, 1925, at 8 p.m., the President (Dr. G. H. Abbott), in the Chair.

The Correspondence included a Numismatic Supplement by Sir John Bucknill, received by the Society with the Author's compliments. Letters were received from collectors requesting information regarding coins in their collections.

The Reports of the Victorian Numismatic Society for the months of July, August and September were placed upon the table.

Moved by Mr. E. Wills and seconded by the Rev. D. J. Finn, that a letter of sympathy be sent to Mrs. Andrews expressing the sense of loss felt by the Society in the death of Dr. Andrews.

Dr. Arthur Andrews, whose death was recently announced, was an authority upon Australian tokens, and his monumental work "Australasian Tokens and Coins" adds to the sum of Numismatic literature a valuable text book for the student in Australian Numismatics.

Dr. Andrews was past President of the Australian Numismatic Society.

Mr. E. Wills read an interesting paper describing his splendid exhibit of Australian tokens.

The exhibit, which comprised some 340 specimens, included many pieces of great rarity. The outstanding rarity and gem of the collection, however, was the famous John Allen token of Kiama.

Mr. Wills, who was warmly congratulated on his acquisition of this historic token, gave an interesting description of the piece and the incidents of its acquisition by him.

There are only two known specimens of this token — one is in the Mitchell Library collection and the other in the cabinet of Mr. Wills. It is notable that Mr. Wills' specimen is in finer condition than the Mitchell Library piece.

An exhibit of early Australian coins was also shown by Mr. Wills, comprising Holey Dollar 1813 — Dump 1813 — 3d. (Thorntwaite) — 3d. (Hogarth and Ericksen) three varieties — 1/- and 6d. (Australian pattern, plain edge).

An interesting discussion on Mr. Wills' exhibits by the President and members ensued.

The Rev. D. J. Finn exhibited an interesting Medal in bronze. This was one of the Prize medals awarded at the Intercolonial Exhibition 1875 held in Melbourne to get together exhibits from the different Australian Colonies ready for the Exhibition at Philadelphia in 1876.

The medal was awarded to the Rev. Joseph O'Malley, S.J. of St. Patrick's College, No. of Award 2876 Music Board, intended to explain the elements of music and to teach singing and harmony. Special award by Commissioners; the medal was struck by Stokes and Martin who received £120 for cutting the dies. The Commissioners also spent on the medals £456.4.3.

Hogarth's name is on the medal. He worked for Stokes and his name or initials is found on many different medals struck by Stokes.

Dr. G. H. Abbott exhibited a tray of coins of Pergamum including some very rare specimens. The want of time prevented a full description which was deferred till a later date.

Dr. Abbott also exhibited a series of 26 Australian medals and gave a most interesting description of the part they played in commemorating the notable events in Australian life and history.

Included in the series were the following pieces:

Ricketty Dick — Sandy, Queensland — Sir Hercules Robinson, Governor of N.S.W. — Albert the Good — Albert the Good (2) — Albert the Good (Melbourne) — Melbourne Exhibition — Anniversary of Eight Hour League — Adelaide Industrial Exhibition 1881 — New Zealand Exhibition — Industrial Exhibition Tasmania — Soudan Medal same (General Gordon) — General Gordon (return of troops from Soudan), etc.

The ordinary Meeting of the Australian Numismatic Society was held at the B.M.A. Building, 30 Elizabeth Street, Sydney, on Thursday, 19th November, 1925, at 8 p.m., the Hon. John Lane Mullins in the Chair.

The Hon. John Lane Mullins in his "Notes on some interesting Medals" gave the members a most interesting description of some notable Australians, illustrated by handsome medals from his collection.

In describing the exhibits the Chairman drew attention to the difference of workmanship existing between the Amor medals and others of a like degree of excellence in contrast with the lesser work of Stokes.

The South Australian medals were generally of poor workmanship, with two exceptions, namely, a medal by Wyon, and the Tennyson Medal.

The first exhibit was the John Thomas Baptist medal.

This handsome bronze piece by W. Amor, of Sydney, commemorates the connection of John Thomas Baptist with the Horticultural Society of New South Wales. This gentleman who died only a few years ago was the son of John Thomas Baptist whose business activities originated a section of the suburbs known then as the Baptist Gardens.

His son (the subject of the medal) bequeathed to the Horticultural Society the sum of £1000 to found a fund to perpetuate his name. He was president of the Society. This piece constitutes a prize Medal and is fairly rare.

Another handsome exhibit was the Kieran Memorial Medal, a fine example of the excellent work of W. Amor.

This medal records the fame of one of the world's greatest swimmers. This young Australian, after a triumphant career in Europe returned to Australia and taking ill in Brisbane, died in 1905. The Kieran Memorial Fund was raised in Sydney by public subscription and from this fund a tombstone was erected over his grave in the Gore Hill Cemetery, a swimming shield was created, and the Kieran Memorial Medal was struck. It is a sad commentary that Kieran's magnificent collection of championship medals found their way to the pawnshop. They were rescued therefrom by Mr. Bethel, whose public-spirited interest placed them on the "Sobraon" — the training ship — from whence Kieran began his triumphs, and when that ship was sold, transferred them to the Technological Museum, where they now are.

A smaller Medal, by Amor, commemorates the visit to Sydney of Boris Kostich, a Servian champion chess-player. Four of these medals were struck, one in gold given to Kostich, and three in silver, distributed among three officials of the Chess Association of Sydney.

The final exhibit was the medal struck in 1924 to commemorate the swimming triumphs of Andrew "Boy" Charlton, at the Olympic Sports. This medal is also from the Amor Mint.

Description of the Hon. John Lane Mullins' Exhibits:

NUMISMATIC SOCIETY OF VICTORIA.

The ordinary monthly meeting of the Society was held at Detmold Buildings, on Monday evening, 18th. Feb., but owing to the exceedingly hot weather there was only a moderate attendance. P. C. Clements Esq. (President) presided.

After the usual formal business Mr. L. H. Walters was elected as Auditor; this being the 9th. occasion on which he has been chosen for this important office.

Mr. Schafer (Curator and Librarian) presented the Society's collection of coins and medals upon several of which he commented, drawing attention to vacancies in some series that it was desired to have filled. He also suggested that members having duplicates of these in their cabinets, if they wished, might present them to the society at the Annual Meeting on the 8th. March. The collection is growing in numbers, and in the medal section contains some very nice specimens mostly commemorative. He also presented on behalf of Mr. John Larard a fine specimen, a medal of the Queensland Exhibition of 1897.

The following exhibits were shown at the close of the meeting. Mr. E. S. Anthony: Waterloo Medal with original ribbon, awarded to John Shewbridge.

Mr. F. H. Schafer: Seven of the eleven types of copper Dalers of Sweden issued by Baron Von Görsst with a view of assisting the treasury depleted through the wars of their heroic Warrior-King Charles XII. Most of these were issued during the King's life time and the others during that of his sister and successor Ulrica Eleonora. They were struck with various mythological figures but the last brought about another tragedy of a tragic period for on that Baron Von Görsst placed his own effigy which "cost him his head".

KENT NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

At a meeting held on 12th March 1926 at the Maidstone Museum, G. C. Brooke, Esq. M. A., gave a lecture, illustrated by lantern slides, on the Coinage of the Archbishops of Canterbury. The earliest coin bearing the name of Canterbury was struck by Eusebius, a moneyer who probably came over with Queen Bertha, and may therefore be prior to the arrival of St. Augustine. The question whether any of the early uninscribed trientes and sceats were struck by the archbishop must be left unanswered; the earliest named coins are those of Jaenberht who acknowledged the overlordship of the Mercian kings, Offa and Coenwulf, on his coin Wulfred (805-832) was the first to show independence by omitting the king's name and by adopting a portrait coinage; to his time also belong the interesting so-called "sede vacante" coins, which omit the prelate's name and are placed to the period immediately following the battle of Ellandune (825). With Plegmund (890-914) the named series closes. In the later middle ages the coins of the Archbishops cannot be distinguished from the Kings' coins of Canterbury, except when documentary evidence identifies the Archbishops' moneyers.

From 1346 the mint of Canterbury closed until the reign of Edward IV when Archbishop Bourchier struck coins bearing the Bourchier knoll. The coins of his successors, Morton, Warham and Cranmer are familiar. With Cranmer the series ends under the curtailment of ecclesiastical temporalities by Henry VIII.

At the conclusion of the lecture a hearty vote of thanks was accorded by Walter H. Day Esq.

The following coins were exhibited: — By Mr. J. W. Bridge: a silver penny of Archbishop Ceolnoth (833-879 A.D.); a Durham penny of Henry VIII. with initials of Thomas Wolsey and cardinal's hat; an piece of a Spanish Dollar countermarked "Tortola". By Mr. Walter H. Day: 5 pewter Hop Tokens of T. H. Oyer of Hawkenbury near Hawkhurst. By Mr. Savage: a silver coin of Carthage of the 3rd century B.C. with head of Persephone, and horse on the reverse.

ACQUISITIONS.

The acquisitions in the Department of Coins include a silver medallion struck at Babylon, probably soon after the death of Alexander the Great. It commemorates the expedition to India and the battle on the Indus, at which Porus, an Indian king, was taken prisoner. On one side of the medallion Alexander is represented on horseback attacking Porus who is mounted on an elephant; and on the other side Alexander is shown as a god, holding a thunderbolt and crowned by a flying victor. He wears a peculiar headdress, which combines the Persian headdress worn by Persian rulers, with a crested Greek helmet, having on each side of the crest an upright plume. This recalls the statement of Plutarch that, at the battle of Granicus, Alexander was conspicuous by his helmet with a great crest and two long white plumes on either side of it. Only two specimens of this medallion are known. The other has been in the Museum since 1887, but owing to defective striking did not show interesting details of the headdress.

BOOKS ON NUMISMATICS. AUCTION SALE CATALOGUES.

ENGLISH.

The following are Sotheby catalogues, the usual small octavo size, in original wrappers, priced and named. Sometimes the wrapper is rather soiled from being on the outside of a bundle. Most of these catalogues are scarce, but they are here offered at prices considerably below the cost of pricing and naming.

The following abbreviations are used :

AB = Ancient British. AG = Anglo-Gallic. AS = Anglo-Saxon. Am = American. Bz = Byzantine. C = Colonial. E = English. Eu = European. F = Foreign. Fr = French. G = Greek. I = Irish. Mdv = Mediaeval. Misc = Miscellaneous. N = Norman. O = Oriental. OP = Other Properties in the Sale besides those named. PP = Patterns and Proofs. R = Roman. S = Scottish. WM = War Medals, c, m, t = coins, commemorative medals, tokens.

AES GRAVE

A Study of the Cast Coinages of Rome and Central Italy

BY

EDWARD A. SYDENHAM M.A.

Quarto, 145 pp., 28 plates, boards, linen back and corners.

The Aes Grave forms the first chapter of the long story of the Roman Coinage but hitherto no complete account of it has been set forth in English. The well known works of Garrucci and Haeblerlin are unwieldy in size and almost prohibitive in price. The present study surveys the whole field from a thoroughly scientific point of view, contains a corpus of over 350 pieces, and is illustrated with a series of plates from recent Sale Catalogues which should meet all practical requirements. The price has been put as low as possible, for a work of this class, in the hope that it may reach all who are interested in the fascinating problems of the origins of the famous coinage of ancient Rome.

Just published.

DIES FOR FALSE COINS

In the possession of the Museo Nazionale Romano are more than 1000 dies for making false coins, for the most part produced by the electrotyping process; about a hundred are however hand-engraved in steel. The various classes of coins and medals are represented in approximately the following numbers: Greek coins, 232; Roman 520; Medieval and Modern 294.

The Istituto Italiano di Numismatica, in agreement with the Direction of the Museum, has undertaken the publication of impressions from these dies, with descriptions, in a quarto volume with about 40 plates. An invitation issued some years ago for subscriptions to defray the cost of this work having met with inadequate response the publication has not proceeded. As, however, it is highly desirable, in the interest of museums and private collectors that the forgeries from these dies should be exposed, the invitation is now renewed. Promises to subscribe at the rate of £ 1.10s. sterling or 6 dollars will be received by Dr. G. F. Hill, British Museum, London. W. C. 1, or Messrs. Spink and Son, Ltd. 17 Piccadilly, London. W. 1. Payment should not be actually made until notice is received that the work is ready for distribution.

THE COINAGE OF SAINT-LÔ

CHARLES VII.

The history of the recovery of Normandy is well known. In the Cotentin, it was an army commanded by the constable of Richemont and chiefly composed of Bretons that engaged in the fighting. The campaign opened about mid-August 1449, and Saint-James de Beuvron, the first reconquered stronghold, was stormed between the 12th and 18th of that month. Coutances capitulated on the 12th September, and Saint-Lô on the 15th.

"The inhabitants of this town were in excellent dispositions," writes G. Dupont. Even before the entry of the Duke of Brittany into Normandy, they had declared that they would open their gates to him. More than this, the citizens of Saint-Lô and peasants of the neighbouring districts armed themselves to defend the suburbs of the city, which the English troops, sent from Bayeux, threatened to fire. These facts prove how unpopular the English rule had become, whilst at the beginning of his Regency, according to the testimony of the chronicler Thomas Basin, bishop of Lisieux, the Duke of Bedford had succeeded in ingratiating his government with the Normans, by insuring order and security.

This is not the place to recall the vicissitudes of this truly national war. Let us simply remember that the victory of Formigny took place on 15th April 1450, and that Cherbourg the last stronghold occupied by the enemy in the Cotentin, surrendered to Richemont on 12th August 1450. "That same day," writes Dupont, the Constable departed and went to dine at Valognes. The King was awaiting him at Château-du-Loir to reorganise the administration of Normandy.

Charles VII however had not deferred until then to place the Saint-Lô mint on the active list to his benefit. One of the registers preserved at the Bibliothèque de la Sorbonne informs us, that in 1449 a certain Jean le Jolivet¹ farmed out the mint for a year, in the name of Jean Basire, his nephew, "aux uz et costumes du bail des mon²".

The year commencing at Easter and Easter falling in 1450 on April 5, it follows that this document, dated simply 1449, should be placed some time between 15th September 1449 and 4th April 1450 (n. st.).

It is also probable that it was the Duke Francis of Brittany, acting in the name of Charles VII, who reorganized the Mint, as a document, dated 6th May 1453, informs us that he appointed two new wardens there after the recapture of the town. The two wardens in office under the English rule had therefore either withdrawn, or had been dismissed. In the latter case, it is possible that the Duke may have wished to reward the two new incumbents, named Henri du Corre and Yvonnet du Lauret; for, as far as we know, Charles VII showed liberality towards the coin officials of the English³; thus, Raymond Monfaoucq, one of the two Masters

General of the mints of Normandy under Henry VI was appointed General in extraordinary, or provincial, on 27th January 1452 (n. st.). This meant that he was reinstated in his office⁴. And as to the privy masters, the example of Richard Pillegrain proves that they were not ostracised.

According to the clauses of his lease, Jean Basire was to coin écus d'or of 70½ to the mark, and half écus of 141 to the mark "tels que le Roi fait à présent faire pour 10 sols tournois"; he was also to issue white and black currencies and "se faire apleiger de 2000 l."

The écu in question is the Écu à la couronne, so-called écu neu (Hoffmann, 2 and 6) of the third issue⁵. This issue, decreed on 20th January 1447 (n. st.), interrupted on the following 26th May by a temporary rise of the standard, and taken up again on 10th January 1448 (n. st.) was of 23½ carats and distinguished by pointed initial coronets.

But on 18th May 1450, by letters patent given at Argentan, Charles VII again reduced the standard of his écus, lowering them to 23⅓ carats without changing the weight. On this issue, the 5th of the initial coronets are marked with a lozenge instead of a dot.

Was Jean Basire able to begin his work early enough to coin the écu of the third issue? We think so, as half écus d'or of Charles VII are known with the secret dot under the 19th letter of both legends and initial crosslets⁷ (Pl. III, fig. 10).

These half écus evidently belong to the first issue struck at Saint-Lô. Regularly, they should have borne pointed coronets; the anomaly may perhaps be explained by the fact that the silver currency bore initial crosslets, and that there may have been confusion on the part of Jean Basire.

The white money of 1449 was the Blanc aux trois couronnelles (Hoffmann, 36), of the second issue, also ordered on 20th January 1447 (n. st.), on the foot 34, interrupted, like the écu d'or, on the following 26th May, through a temporary rise (3rd issue), and taken up again on 10th January 1448 (n. st.)⁸. This Blanc was 4 d. 21 gr. A.R. and of 82½ to the mark; the Petit Blanc equivalent. The one and the other had initial crosslets, and as a differentiating mark of issue, a small dot in the first O of both legends. So far, not a single specimen has come to light, which is surprising.

There is no lack in documents proving the working of the Saint-Lô mint between 1449 and 1456.

We know that in 1450, Richard Pillegrain, changer at Saint-Lô and former mint-Master under Henry VI, was appointed for one year, in the room of Jean Basire. The following year, 1451, a new master, Bertrand le Prevost, was appointed by the wardens, and for one year. He was to coin 150 marks of gold, in écus of 23⅓ carats "on paier au Roy pour chascun marc non ou 25 s. t." In 1452 and 1453 Bertrand le Prevost was again designated each time for one year, on the same terms, as in 1451.

After this there is a gap in the documents until 1456.

In that year, from 26th June, an order more than a year old dating from 16th June 1455, was put into force, prescribing a general lowering of the coins.

The new gold écu (6th issue) was altered from 70½ to 71 to the mark, making a small reduction of three centigrammes on the preceding écu, and as the one and the other have both the same lozenge-shaped initial coronets⁹, it is practically impossible to distinguish them from each other. The Gros de Roi was slightly reduced and passed from foot 35 to foot 36; the difference in the second issue of the gros consisted in mullets between the words of the legends¹⁰. The other white currency, that is the Grands

1. G. Dupont, loc. cit., vol. II, p. 612.

2. Ibid., p. 632.

3. J. le Jolivet was a rich burgher of Saint-Lô (cf. E. Lepingard's article on Gourfaucour in Notices, mémoires et documents de la Société... de la Manche, vol. XX, 1902); the Basires were also of Saint-Lô.

4. By letters given at Tours on 31st March 1451 (n. st.) and in virtue of the right which kings held to appoint on their accession at each Mint a workman and a moneyer, Charles VII "pour consideration de plusieurs services agréables que nous a fait nostre ami Jehan Caboulet, bourgeois demourant en nostre dicte ville de Saint-Lô, tant à la réduction d'icelle en nostre obéissance que autrement", appointed him "à la requête du connétable de Richemont, ouvrier in the Mint of Saint Lô". At that same date, and for the same reasons, another citizen of Saint-Lô, Jehan de Conteville, was appointed monnoyer at the Mint (AN. Trésor des Chartes, J.J. 181, fo 28 ro et vo).

5. He was still in office under Louis XI, and was entrusted in 1463 with the famous research on the titles of the nobility in Normandy.

6. The first issue (écu of fine gold, of 70 to the mark), dates from 28th Jan 1436 (n. st.), and the second (écu of 23⅓ carats, of 70½ to the mark), from 12th August 1445.

7. There are also similar half-écus d'or struck at Rouen.

8. We are not bringing into account the Gros of 2 s. 6 d., so called Gros de Saint-Lô (Hoffmann, 22), created on 26th May 1447, on the foot 35, because Saint-Lô never struck of that first issue, which was only minted in some special cases selected as "plus propices et convenables". Cf. Saulcy, vol. III, p. 180.

9. Both were of the same standard 23⅓ carats and only differed in the weight. The first Gros de Roi was of 11 d. 15 gr. A.R. and 68 to the mark; the second issue was cut to 69 to the mark and the standard went down to 12 gr. A.R.

Petits Blancs aux trois couronnelles were likewise placed on the foot 36 (4th issue), with mullets as distinctive mark¹.

Jean Basire took up the Mint again for one year, from 2nd September 1456, and he was certainly appointed in July or at the beginning of August, as on the date of 5th August 1456 we find in the Lecocq manuscript the following mention: "Le garde de Saint-Lô fera exercer son office par aultre, pour ce que son frere a prins la nonnoye". He was to coin yearly 200 marks of gold, 3000 marks d'œuvre de blanc à 4 à 12 gr. de loy, 100 marks d'œuvre de gros argent et faire encore ouvrer tel ouvrage que les gages des officiers et le louage de l'hostel de la mon^e soient paieez, et outre faire ouvrer 80 marcs d'or au brassage de 9 s. 6 d. ts."

In 1457, Jean Basire was continued in his office for another year, and again in 1458, but this time with a partner, Guillaume Auber, whose name we do not meet with in 1459. In that year, Jean Basire held the office alone and coined écus, gros de roi, grands and petits blancs, and black (billon) money.

All these coins are known, except the black money — doubles and deniers tournois — which, we believe, have not yet been found. The écu d'or with the lozenge-shaped initial coronets Pl. III, fig. 12) is very common²; two varieties are known; the one with an annulet under the R of REX, 23rd letter of the obv. legend, and the other without annulet. This annulet may represent the private mark of one of the masters who succeeded each other under Charles VII, but we could not say which of them. The Gros de Roi, of which we have had before us a specimen in mint state Pl. III, fig. 13), is a very rare coin, of elegant design and perfect engraving. The Grand Blanc, which is very common, is also of good style; as to the Petit Blanc which is not rare, it cannot be distinguished from that of Charles VIII, the type being identical, and the difference of weight only trifling.⁴

LOUIS XI.

Of the reign of Louis XI we possess but few monetary documents, and fewer still are connected specially with Saint-Lô. On the other hand, coins issued from this mint are frequently met with, so that bringing these coins to bear on the documents which have been preserved to us, we are enabled to reconstitute the numismatic history of that period fairly well.

Charles VII died at Melun-sur-Yèvre on 22nd July 1461. On the 1st of the same month, the new king ordered that his father's currency should continue to be issued until the following 1st October; but for an unknown reason, the delay was prolonged, and was not before 31st December, 1461, that by letters given at Paris, Louis XI prescribed that his name should be engraved on coins, without any other change.

The first coins of Louis XI are therefore similar to those ordered by Charles VII on 16 June 1455-26 — June 1456, and comprise: écus and half écus with the crown, gros du Roi, grands and petits blancs aux couronnelles, and black money. Were all these coins struck at Saint-Lô? In the absence of returns of delivery this question can only be answered by an examination of the coins.

The gold écu (Hoffmann, 4) is common, and two varieties are known: the one, which is evidently the first in date, has the initial coronets marked with a lozenge like the écus struck in the reign of Charles VII during the first five months of his reign; on the second variety, the coronets are without the lozenge. The half-écus has not been found, as far as we know, nor have the black money, gros doubles and deniers tournois. The grand blanc aux 3 couronnelles (Hoffmann, 15) and the petit blanc (Hoffmann, 17) are

The Grand Blanc is of 81 and the Petit Blanc of 162 to the mark, and both 4 d. 12 gr. de loy A.R.

We have never met with half écus.

M. Dieudonné has observed that on this Grand Blanc — and we have made the same observation on the Gros de Roi — the T's of KTROLVS and of PCORVM are not crossed, but surmounted by a long horizontal bar. In opinion, this peculiarity constitutes the Master's mark (cf. Ad. Dieudonné, l. p. 61).

The Petit Blanc of the 4th issue of Charles VII was cut to the rate of 162 to the mark (1 gr. 51) and that of Charles VIII 172 to the mark (1 gr. 42).

excessively common³. As to the gros du Roi (Hoffmann, 12) we shall consider it further on.

Saint-Lô also struck a large number of liards (Hoffmann, 36), a new currency — at least in France — the creation of which dates from 18. September 1467.

The coining of all these currencies lasted until the end of 1475⁶, when the type of the écus d'or and blancs was altered.

During this lapse of fourteen years, there were only two privy-masters at Saint-Lô. The first was no other than Jean Basire, whose lease seems to have been renewed from year to year from 1459, under Charles VII, until 1470. In that year, at an unknown date, he was appointed to the mastership at Tours, and one of his brothers, Guillaume, was nominated at Saint-Lô by letters patent on a three years lease, renewed in 1470.

It is during the course of this first period of the reign that the short revival of the Duchy of Normandy took place in favour of the king's brother, Charles, duke of Berry, the future Duke of Guyenne. Vanquished at Montlhéry (15 July 1465) by the revolted nobility, Louis XI had to accept this restoration, and on 10. December 1465, Charles received, in Rouen cathedral, the symbolic ducal ring, from the bishop's hands, Thomas Basin⁷.

But this only lasted a few days. In the month of January 1466 (n.st.), the new duke had to flee from Rouen and take refuge in Brittany; and, after a three years' war, he consented, in April 1469, to exchange Normandy for "le pais et dusché de Guyenne".

The nobility of the Cotentin, almost entirely, had pronounced in favour of the king's brother, but the people sided with Louis XI. As early as December 1465, Saint-Lô refused to open its gates to the Breton army, allied to Duke Charles, and this example was followed amongst others by Cherbourg and Falaise. Two years later, in October 1467, Saint-Lô repulsed a new attack by the Bretons; the latter having been able by ruse to penetrate into the city at night, the citizens joined the garrison and drove the invaders out the following morning⁸.

Louis XI had not conceded to his brother the right to coin money in his name in Normandy, as he did later in Guyenne, so that the issue of Royal currency was not interrupted at Saint-Lô. But the coinage certainly suffered from the war Louis XI had to sustain against Charles and his allies, the Bretons; for, a document of the Archives Nationales, dated 17. February 1467 (n.st.) informs us that the Mint of Saint-Lô had coined but very little for a long time (n'avait fait depuis longtemps qu'un "petit ouvrage"⁹).

THE COINS OF THE DUTCH EAST INDIES.

An Introduction to the Study of the Series (excluding those specially struck for India and Ceylon)

BY SIR JOHN BUCKNILL M.A. (OXON).

Speaking generally, the silver Rupees of this whole series are not nearly so rare as are the gold pieces of corresponding dates; they are of rather rough workmanship and, as they all have Arabic inscriptions on both faces which did not materially vary throughout the whole period of issue, they bear a very marked and easily recognizable resemblance to each other. The Dies, however, from which they were struck did not stand much wear and were frequently renewed; very probably more than one Die, each slightly different, was in use at the same time. At any rate the coins, particularly those with dates of years in which the largest numbers were produced, show much variation in appearance when closely examined and there is, in addition, much diversity in their Mint-Marks. Moquette deals with the whole of the series very fully and figures a very large number in his work, quoted earlier, "De Ropijen Munt van Batavia van 1744-1808" (1910).

6. On 4 January 1474 (n.st.) the écu d'or was reduced in weight and passed from 71 to 72 to the mark. Likewise the rate of the grand blanc à la couronne rose from 81 to 86 the mark (second issue).

All these silver Rupees bear an obliquely milled edge.

In the period under review, the weight of these coins was ordered to be identical with 20½ Stivers and their value to be equal to that of a Surat (Indian) Rupee. The Government order to the Mint to produce Silver "Derhams" (i.e. Rupees) was dated 17th February, 1747: but the resulting profit from the process was so small that the coining of these pieces was directed to be stopped by another Resolution dated 18th June 1751. The rupees of this period (1747-1750) are seldom met with.

f) Sixth group 1753.

Persian Rupees counterstamped "JAVA".

It would appear that, at about the same time as the gold Dutch European Ducats were being officially counterstamped in Batavia with the word "DJAWA" in Arabic script (i.e. between 1753 and 1761), some silver coins of non-Dutch origin were being similarly treated. A Resolution of October 2nd 1758 refers to "Persian" Rupees being counterstruck by the Company with a special die; but, at that date, the counterstriking was already in progress as in 1757 "Persian" rupees thus impressed were valued in circulation as equivalent to thirty Stivers (N. & C. p. 50).

A few of this class of coins are known still to exist; but they are extremely rare. The following specimens must be recorded:—

48. The Silver Indian Rupee of Surat dated 1692-3 from the Fonrobert Collection already mentioned as No. 48.

53. A Silver Persian Rupee of Shah Nadir (A.H. 1148-60 =

A.D. 1735-6-1747) struck at Tabriz in A.H. 1157 = A.D. 1744-5. This coin was Lot 366 of the Fonrobert Collection.

54. A Silver Persian Double-Rupee of Shah Adil (A.H. 1160-61 = A.D. 1747-48) struck in A.H. 1161 = A.D. 1747-48). This coin was in 1887 in the possession of the late Mr. J. Schulman and was eventually acquired by the Batavian Museum (Bat. M.C. p. 78).

55. A Silver Persian Rupee of Shah Rukh (first reign A.H. 1161-63 = A.D. 1747-50) struck at Mesjid in A.H. 1163 = A.D. 1749-50. This coin was Lot 6452 of the Stephanik Collection and was acquired in 1904 by Moquette for the Batavian Museum where it now is.

56. A Silver Persian Rupee without date but probably similar to No. 55. It was Lot 6453 of the Stephanik Collection and was figured on Pl. 13 of the Catalogue. It is now in the Batavian Museum (Bat. M.C. p. 78).

Fig. 33.

From the illustration in the Stephanik Collection Sale Catalogue.

57. In the Batavian Museum (Bat. M.C. p. 78) is a curiosity in the shape of a crude Mexican Dollar (known in Java as "Real Batou" i.e. "Stone Real") counterstruck with the word "DJAWA" as were the Persian Rupees. In note to Lots 6066a-h (which consisted of eight of the crude pieces representing 1, ½, ¼ and 1/10 of a Dollar) of the Stephanik Collection, it is observed that on the arrival of the first Dutch vessels in the Indian Archipelago, in the year 1596 under C. Houtman, the voyagers there found, in circulation as money, pieces of silver called "Reaux batou" they were of irregular form and came from the silver mines in America; on them were, carelessly, struck the Arms of Spain.

g) Seventh group 1764-1767.

Third Regular Issue.

By a Resolution dated November 6th 1764 it was ordered that Silver Java Rupees should again be minted at Batavia; by a similar Resolution dated January 15th 1768 it was resolved, being that at that time a sufficient supply of silver money in the Netherlands Indies, to cease the coinage of Rupees and to destroy the dies.

The rupees of this Group are very similar to those of the Fifth Group. Coins dated 1765 and 1766 are the least rare dates. The mint-marks show much diversity of minor character.

58. 1764. Java Rupee. D. 26.

Similar, generally, to No. 52 save for date. The mint-mark is still a rosette; which had, by this time, apparently become a conventional symbol. The coins with this mint-mark are of extreme rarity. Moquette figures an example from the Royal Coin Cabinet at the Hague (M. p. 428 and Pl. 33, f. 645). He also figures (Pl. 33, f. 644) a remarkable specimen (which is in the Batavian Museum) of the rupee of this date struck on a Spanish Dollar of Charles 2nd dated 1670.

59. 1765. Java Rupee. D. 25.5. W. 12.57 (G.).

Similar, generally, to No. 58 save for date. There are several well-marked varieties of Die figured by Moquette. In some of these the mint-mark is a rosette the shape of which differs considerably in different specimens; in others the mint-mark resembles the petals of a flower; and, again, in others it appears as a sort of rude cross into which, in later years, it developed as a conventional die.

(Marsd. p. 812; N. & C. p. 102; Steph. Lots. 6455 (rosette), 6456 (cross); M. Pl. 33, ff. 646 (Obv.) 647, (Rev.) 647a, (Rev.) 647b, 648, 649; Pl. 34, ff. 650, 651, 652, 653; G. p. 37. (Lots 636, 16s. 8d.; 637, 16s.-8d.) and Pl. 5, ff. 636, 637.

1766. Java Rupee. D. 26. W. 12.91 (G.).

Similar, generally, to No. 41 save for date. There are numerous varieties of Die showing a good deal of difference in the detail. The mint-mark assumed divergent forms of the rosette-cross type. (Marsd. p. 812; N. & C. p. 102 and Pl. 3, f. 20b; Steph. Lots. 6457, 6458, 6459; M. Pl. 34, ff. 654 to 661; Pl. 35, ff. 662 to 666; G. p. 37. L. 628. 13s. 4d.)

Fig. 34.

From a coin in the Writer's Cabinet.

1767. Java Rupee. D. 26. W. 12.82 (G.).

Similar, generally, to No. 60 save for date. (Fonr. L. 479. M. Pl. 35, ff. 667, 668; G. p. 37. L. 639. 16s. 8d.). Moquette refers to (p. 329) and figures (Pl. 35, f. 669) an extraordinary forgery made of copper which had been coated with silver; it was an excellent imitation but had been dated 1667!

h) Eighth group 1782-1789.

Fourth Regular Issue.

A Resolution dated September 13th and November 5th 1782 the Batavia was ordered to be opened again for the minting of Rupees and on the latter date Mons. Jacobus de Warem was appointed Mint-master and Assayer. This gentleman was to be Mint-master on June 20th 1783 although he retained his position as Assayer. On February 20th 1784 Mons. Fredrik van Halem became Master of the Mint and, after the death of Mons. de Warem in April 1785, was made Assayer. Apparently the Mint ceased to coin these Rupees after January 22nd 1789.

No specimens of Rupees belonging to this group bearing the dates 1782, 1787 or 1789 are known: Moquette (p. 430) does not believe that any Rupees were struck dated 1782 but thinks that specimens dated 1787 and 1789 may yet be found. Mr. Schulman considers that examples dated 1787 are more likely to be discovered than specimens bearing the dates 1782 or 1789.

The rupees of this period are similar, generally, to those of the previous period. The mint-marks are of the rosette-cross types and there are many variations of Die. All the dates, except 1783, are very rare.

1783. Java Rupee. D. 26. W. 12.82, 13.88 (G.).

Similar, generally, to No. 61 save for date. This date is the only one of this period which is at all often seen. There are several well-marked varieties.

63. 1784. Java Rupee.

No specimen of this date had been seen by Moquette at the date of his Article on this series; but Mr. Schulman records that an example was sold by his firm in the Collection of Dr. J.G. Hjalmar Kinberg of Stockholm in the year 1919; it formed Lot 2348 and was similar to the type of the coin dated 1785. It was purchased by Mr. Moquette.

64. 1785. Java Rupee. D. 27.

Similar, generally, to No. 62 save for date; but the figures of the date are much larger than in the coins of 1783.

(M. Pl. 36, f. 681.)

65. 1786. Java Rupee. D. 27. W. 11.6 (G.).

Similar, generally, to No. 64 save for date; but the figures of the date are larger still than in the coin of 1785.

(M. Pl. 36, ff. 682, 683; the latter being from a specimen in the Grogan Collection: G. p. 37 (L. 643 £1.13.4) and Pl. 5, f. 643).

i) Ninth group 1795-1798.

Fifth Regular Issue.

After much deliberation and discussion it was resolved by the Company on November 24th 1795 once more to coin Silver Rupees and to instruct the Mint-master Mons. Van Halem accordingly and all the necessary steps were completed early in the following month.

Mons. Van Halem, anticipating the decision, had already prepared dies dated 1795 but no Rupees bearing that date were issued or indeed struck prior to January 1796. Mons. Van Halem died on May 15th 1798.

The Rupees of this period are similar, generally, to those of 1785.

The mint-marks continue of the rosette-cross type. All the dates are rare.

67. 1795. Java Rupee. D. 26. Similar, generally, to No. 64 save for date. Moquette states that such specimens as bear this date were actually struck in the year 1796.

(Bat. M.C. p. 78; M. p. 431 and Pl. 36, f. 685; Pl. 37 (Obv.) f. 686.)

68. 1796. Java Rupee. D. 27. 26. W. 12.85 (G.). Similar, generally, to No. 67 save for date. There are numerous varieties of Die. This date is the only one of this period which is not altogether uncommon. In some specimens the date figures are very large.

(N & C. Pl. 3, f. 20 c.; M. Pl. 37 ff. (Obv.) 687, (Rev.) 687a, (Rev.) 687b, 688 to 692; G. p. 37 (L. 644. £1.13.4) and Pl. 5 f. 644.)

69. 1797. Java Rupee. Netscher and Van der Chijs mention this date (p. 102); and Moquette (p. 431), although he had not personally seen an example dated 1797, was of the opinion that specimens might, perhaps, be discovered.
70. 1798. Java Rupee. D. 25.3. Similar, generally, to No. 68 save for date. (Bat. M.C. p. 78; M. Pl. 37, f. 696). The writer has a specimen, rather abraded, in his own Cabinet.

Copper.

Struck at Batavia, Java.

The copper coinage minted in the East Indies by the Company all emanated from Batavia. Its production may be divided into three periods which correspond roughly with some of those during which there was local activity in the issue of both gold and silver coins. The three groups are:

- a). An issue of Half-Stiver and Quarter-Stiver pieces in 1644.
- b). An issue of the small coins known as "Doits" in 1764, 1765 and 1783.
- c). An issue of oblong, rectangular blocks of copper which are usually known as "Bonks": first produced in 1796 and continuing up to the dissolution of the Company and for some years afterwards.

It is interesting here to notice that in the year 1743, His Excellency the Governor-General of the Netherlands Indies exhibited to his Council some coins known locally as "PITIS" (Dutch "Pitjes") which he had ordered to be made as Patterns for possible use in currency; they were of red copper and sixteen were to be equivalent in value to one Stiver. On the Obverse was the value in the Dutch and on the Reverse in the Malay language. It was suggested that these pieces should be circulated in Java and its adjacent Island of Madura. These Patterns were not adopted for circulation and no specimen has ever been discovered (N. & C. pp. 62 & 63 and Schulman in lit.). The word "Piti" or "Pichi" is probably of Javanese origin and was and is used throughout the Malay Peninsula and Archipelago to designate coins (usually made of pewter) of very low denominations and often struck or cast by the Sultans of independent or semi-independent States; they are produced even at the present day in the State of Trengganu in the North-East of the Malay Peninsula.

a). First group 1644.

Half-Stivers and Quarter Stivers.

By a Notification dated August 19th 1644, the Chinaman named Conjok of Batavia (who has been already mentioned in connection with the production in 1645 of the Silver Batavian "Crowns") was directed to coin copper Half-Stiver and Quarter-Stiver pieces. He was granted the sole right to make this coinage. This was the first regular issue of coins made by the United Dutch East India Company. Conjok, however, did not produce these pieces in any great quantity and certainly not in numbers adequate for practical purposes; they soon disappeared from circulation. The coins were cast in moulds, are of handsome design but rough manufacture and bear a plain edge. Although the Half-Stiver is sometimes met with, the Quarter-Stiver is of the greatest rarity.

The issue is referred to and figured by Verkade and by Netscher and Van der Chijs but has not been dealt with by Moquette in any of his publications. (N. & C. pp. 56, 57; G. pp. 35, 36.)

71. 1644. Java Rupee. D. 28 to 30. W. 6.01 to 8.22 (B.).
- Obv.* Within a plain line circle, an upright sword; this device constituted part of the Crest of the City of Batavia.
- Legend around, "BATAVIA. ANNO. 1645". Mr. J. Allan, of the British Museum, is of the opinion that "BATAVIA" was a slip or mistake for "BATAVIAE"; as the latter appears upon the nearly contemporaneous silver pieces; if this is so, the legend would mean "(Coin of) Batavia: in the year 1645".
- Rev.* The monogram "A.C."; above the monogram, " $\frac{1}{2}$ ST". (ST. = Stiver).

There are certainly two varieties of Die; in one the workmanship is considerably coarser than in the other. The coin is not at all common and is hardly ever found in reasonably fine condition. Netscher and Van der Chijs (p. 104) state that the Half-Stiver occurs dated 1645; but the Writer has not been able to confirm their statement. (V. Pl. 200, f. 5; N. & C. Pl. 5, f. 27; G. p. 36.)

Fig. 38.

From a coin in the Writer's Cabinet.

72. 1644. Quarter-Stiver. D. 25 to 25.5. W. 4.34. (G.). Similar generally, to No. 71 but smaller; and, on the Reverse the figures " $\frac{1}{4}$ " replace the figures " $\frac{1}{2}$ ".

This is an extremely rare coin.

(V. Pl. 222, f. 1; Bat. M.C. p. 79; N. & C. Pl. 6, 28; Fonr. Lot. 374; Steph. Lot. 6438; G. p. 36 (L. 623. £ 1.15.0) and Pl. 5, f. 623.)

b) Second group 1763, 1765 and 1783.

Doits.

The European Mints of the five Dutch Provinces (Holland, Utrecht, Zeeland, Gelderland and Westfrisia), which were closely associated with the fortunes of the Company, had, for many years prior to this issue, produced for the Company, in considerable quantity, for special use in the Dutch East Indies, little copper coins known as "Doits". The first of these made their appearance in the year 1726 and it seems, at first sight, somewhat strange that the Company should have thought it necessary or desirable to manufacture in Java pieces of like denomination. It must, however, be observed that the local call for petty currency, in connection with the great trade carried on by the Dutch in their Eastern Possessions, was so great that the supply of imported Doits never satisfied the huge demand; and, according to the contemporaneous records, it is clear that by way of supplementing this scarcity, many kinds of strange coins (such as Chinese "Cash" and pieces — struck in the Archipelago and Peninsula — made of Pewter) appeared in circulation.

It was in order to meet this difficulty that it was decided by the Company in 1764 to produce "Doits" at the Batavia Mint; these were declared current by a Proclamation dated November 9th of that year and, not long afterwards, all the irregularly circulated and unauthorized coins were proscribed as contraband and liable to confiscation.

NOTES ON THE MYTHOLOGICAL TYPES ON ROMAN REPUBLICAN COINS.

THE SPHINX.

The meaning of this weird image, combining the human and feline forms, furnished with wings, differed in Egypt, Assyria, Greece and Rome, and also at different periods. The student of Roman coins will desire first to know what the Sphinx meant to the moneyers who placed this image on their coins. This we can guess at from passages in the works of Suetonius, Dion Cassius and Pliny, which shall be given; they apparently shew the idea which the Sphinx was intended to represent was that of a divinely given oracle or prophecy, and symbolized an entirely new idea to that associated with the Sphinx by the Greek Tradition and the earlier writers to whom this figure represented the idea of death or pestilence. The Sphinx is found on the Reverse of a coin issued by Titus Carisius a triumvir during the last year of Julius Cæsar, the obverse bears a head of the Sibyl. The same is found on aurei of Augustus, there is one in the Cabinet des médailles at Paris. Suetonius, in cap L, says in his life of Augustus, "The seal which he placed on Public acts, on his letters, and on his letters was a Sphinx, later it was the head of Alexander the Great, and later still his own portrait, that graven on the aëscorides".

Also Pliny (H.N., lib. XXXVII, c. 1. Translation of P. W. H. N. 1535) "Augustus, late emperor of worthy memory, used to begin to seal with the image Sphinx upon his signet and in the casket of his mother's jewels, two of these he found one to the other, that one could not be known and discerned from the other: As he was wont to wear one of them about his neck wheresoever he went, so in his absence (during the civil wars of M. Antonius) his friends who managed his affairs at Rome, used with the other Sphinx all those letters and edicts which he had in his name for the performance of some demands which at times did require. From hence it came that those who used any such letters or edicts, containing some matter of difficulty, would go about pleasantly and merrily to say, that the said Sphinx came with some hard riddle or other that could not be expounded".

Dion Cassius (LI, III, 6) "Augustus trusted Agrippa and trusted him so much, that they even read beforehand the letters which he wrote to the Senate and others, and copied as much as they wished. And on this account they also received a ring from Augustus that they might be able to seal them. For he had made a ring of the seal which he used most at that time, having on it a similar sphinx worked in relief; later he engraved his own portrait and sealed everything with that".

Atia the mother of Augustus, the daughter of Julia the sister of Julius Cæsar, seems to have been superstitious and ambitious; Suetonius in his life of Octavian relates a story (in c. 94) about her in the temple of Apollo that she should give birth to one who should ascend to the stars. However the inscription on coins of Augustus CAESAR DIVI F referred to his being the adopted son of Julius Cæsar rather than to his descent from Apollo. Her husband died in 44 B.C. when her son was four years old. On the death of Julius Cæsar she unsuccessfully urged her son not to accept the inheritance left him by Julius. Suetonius (CVIII) says Atia hesitated, but her husband Philippus dissuaded. She died in 43 B.C., and was buried by a public funeral.

The signet rings were found in possession of Atia, Julius Cæsar's sister, it is possible that Cæsar may have used them, hence the Sphinx on the coin of Cæsar's moneyer Carisius. There may have been in the mind of Augustus some faith in the prophecy of the sibyl's dream that he should be a great man and ruler, so the Sphinx which with the Sibyl, represented the idea of revelation and prophecy, was naturally chosen by him in the device for his signet ring especially as it came to him by inheritance from his uncle Julius Cæsar.

The discoveries of Archaeologists often corroborate the words of the ancients, and in regard to these rings of Augustus Signor Milani (Mater. Arch., Vol. 1902, p. 172 ssq.) has shewn that we find in the Archaeological Museum at Florence, one of those famous rings. The stone is a black agate in which the sphinx has been engraved facing the right hand with a female head and breast, a rather long body, the wings curled in the most archaic way at the tips. The fore legs are straight as in act to rise, the hind legs resting on the ground. We may notice that the wings of the Sphinx on the coins are pointed at the ends, without the archaic curl. The ring was found near the Mausoleum of Augustus at Rome.

It is worth while noting that Julius Cæsar was a dramatist at a precocious age and that the story of Oedipus and the Sphinx was the theme of his tragedy. Confer Suetonius, Julius Cæsar 56.

Probably the moneyer or an ancestor was one of the keepers of the Sibylline Books, to which the Obv. would naturally refer, the Rev. suggesting the obscurity of these prophecies.

Among the Greeks in the earliest times the Sphinx was a symbol of a destructive power like Erinyes, Gorgons and Harpies, for it was not in connection with Thebes or the story of Oedipus that the Sphinx was most generally familiar to Greek Art. Her form appeared most frequently in sepulchral monuments, as an emblem of the cause of death, as the Siren was similarly employed.

The form adopted by the Greeks appears to have been due to their intercourse with Asia Minor rather than with Egypt, for the Sphinx of that country was male and wingless; and the two attitudes of the reclining and rising figures represented the evening and morning of life i.e. death and resurrection, and the Sphinx of Ghizeh erected circa 2400 B.C. was the object of a cultus. The winged type first appeared in Mesopotamia, where also it was represented as female. The Phoenicians mingled the Asiatic and Egyptian types as we see in a stele from Aradus, on which occur the Egyptian headgear and the Assyrian wings. So in the sacred way at Miletus a sphinx was found, wingless but female. Even at Thebes a wingless Sphinx, four inches long, was found.

The adjective ῥοιζο-κτόνος, man slaying, was applied to the Sphinx (C.I., 4700) and Aeschylus used the word ὀμύστρος "eating raw flesh" to the monster (Theb., 541). The story of Oedipus and the Sphinx is told by Diodorus Siculus (IV, cap. 64). He puts the riddle thus, "What is it that is both two footed, three and four footed? Oedipus explained that man was meant, for as a babe he was four footed, when full grown two footed, and when old three footed; for he used a stick through weakness. Then the Sphinx, according to those who related the myth, cast herself down headlong".

In the Oedipus Tyrannus of Sophocles we are not told the story of the riddle, it is only hinted at, and the Sphinx is only referred to twice, once as winged, in line 1198 "He (Oedipus) slew the maiden with crooked talons who sang darkly" and in line 130 "the riddling Sphinx". There is a very brief fragment of Pindar (62) which refers to "the maiden who out of her savage jaws"..... Pindar briefly refers to the story in Olym. II, 70, but not to the sphinx in that ode.

The manner in which Sophocles and Euripides refer to the story shews they took it for granted that all their hearers were quite familiar with it.

The Sphinx is introduced into their plays without any explanation as in "Euripides Phoenissae" l. 46 we read "Now at that time the Sphinx preyed vulture like upon the city with rapacity", and he tells (48) of how Oedipus solved "the riddle of the crafty virgin", and speaks of her as "that winged virgin the Sphinx, that mountain monster, that grief to this land". And in another place as "O winged monster production of the earth, and viper of Hades, the ravager of the Cadmeans in form half virgin, a hostile prodigy with thy ravening wings, and thy talons that preyed upon raw flesh". "O unhappy Jocasta what an end of thy life and marriage hast thou endured through the riddle of the Sphinx", and he speaks of how Oedipus "unfolded the difficult song of the fierce monster".

The story of Oedipus is mentioned by Homer in (Iliad., XXIII, 375) but only to speak of the burial of Oedipus, and in the Odyssey (XI, 271) "And I saw the mother of Oedipodes, fair Epicaste, who wrought a dread deed unwittingly, being wedded to her own son, and he that had slain his own father wedded her, and straightway the gods made these things known to men. Yet he abode in pain in pleasant Thebes, ruling the Cadmeans by reason of the deadly counsels of the gods".

The story then is most ancient, but the Sphinx is not mentioned by Homer.

Hesiod however in his Theogony (326) mentions the Sphinx, "But she (Echidna) united to Orthros brought forth in sooth the destructive Sphinx, a destruction to the Cadmeans". The riddle of the Sphinx was the old question raised by the mystery of pain and death. It was pictured in the childhood of the race as the product of some mysterious power seen in the destructive powers of nature, the storms, the pestilences and death. It was a question unanswered by the wisdom of the Greeks and yet, as in the days of Augustus, hope for some revelation was always in men's hearts. Atia hoped her son might be that great man.

The associations of the Sphinx represented on coins of the East sometimes recall Dionysos as at Chios, sometimes Aphrodite as at Aphrodisias of Cilicia issued between 379-374 B.C. On staters we see Aphrodite seated between two sphinxes. As the towns of Asia Minor were well known in the days of Julius Caesar and Augustus it is probable that the claims of the Julia gens to be descended from the goddess Aphrodite may have made the symbol of the Sphinx more acceptable to the mint of those who claimed this mythical descent. The powers of both Dionysos and Aphrodite were of a Sphinx-like character, mysterious and inspiring, both wine and women were by the ancients regarded as mysterious powers.

The association of the Sibyl and the Sphinx on the coins of Gergis in the Northern part of the Troad should be noticed. It is near there that the Gergithian Sibyl is said to have been born. The coins bearing these types were issued between 350 and 300 B.C. How far these Greek coins influenced the moneyers of Julius Caesar and Augustus is a very difficult question.

AN UNPUBLISHED COMPLETE SHEET OF SIX NOTES FOR SMALL AMOUNTS, ISSUED IN CANADA IN 1772.

At a time when even "coppers" were scarce in Canada, paper substitutes were used to take their place. George King of Quebec issued a series of these (only one or two of which seem to be known to Numismatists in the Dominion as far as we can learn) the following sums,—3, 6, 12, 15, 20, and 24 COPPERS respectively.

All are worded alike, and are signed and dated by the issuer, each however has a different border to distinguish it as well as the numerals recorded above. The illustration is the actual size; when separated, each should measure, as nearly as possible 2.25" x 1.5". The sheet has evidently been printed from an engraved copper plate.

ATLAS MEDALS AND CUSTOMS.

MR. FALLOON'S REMARKABLE FIND IN CANADA. — HOW IT RECALLS ANCIENT WAYS AND ANCIENT DAYS.
THE BOAR'S HEAD IN EASTCHEAP. — THE HALF-CROWN.

Statues have generally been regarded as very permanent testimonials. But really there abides no material testimonial so enduring as an artistically-designed and well-executed medal. The vogue in statues changes, and the tall lumps of stone or metal get off the indestructible but also perennially rediscoverable. This applies particularly to bronze medals, where the risk of melting-down for bullion does not arise. Calling at the Atlas last week, I was privileged to have a talk with Mr. Falloon—one of the most delightful and serene personalities in the insurance world. He showed me an ancient silver medal struck by his company under authority of the court minute of July 13, 1809. The medal forms an interesting souvenir of Falloon's recent transatlantic experiences, and he retrieved it at Prince Edward Island when visiting an agent in that gallant little province of the Dominion.

Twenty Atlas medals are believed to be extant. Three alone are known to collectors, the one Mr. Falloon has being the only example he can exhibit. Every specimen, however, is unique, the words on the reverse being specially engraved for each recipient. On the obverse kneels the kingly giant upholding a celestial sphere, the title and foundation-date of the company completing the design. The reverse of Mr. Falloon's specimen displays a stately acknowledgment by the company of the exertions of Mr. John Partington in extinguishing a fire at Mr. Vyse's dwelling-house at Islington on October 4, 1825, more than a century ago. The medal is of silver, larger than an old crown-piece but with a collared edge, the work—though I could find no artist's initials—probably of Thomas Halliday or his pupil Peter Wyon.

map when the space they occupy is wanted. On the other hand, while a medal may often be forgotten, its relatively small size entices collectors and catalogues, and makes it not only practically

What led up to the court minute of July 13, 1809? On the previous May 23, a fire broke out at a stationer's shop in Great-Eastcheap in the city. Great-Eastcheap no longer exists. Yet is it the dying Eastcheap of Falstaff and his inn. Come with me and look the site. Great-Eastcheap ran westward from opposite the National Monument, and past the Guardian's towering front, to where you see the terracotta-like face of a jewellery emporium in Cannon-street. The Boar's Head, where the tithe of a hair was never lost until Bardolph was shaved, has faded and mounted into tons of limy stone atop of which stands not Sir John's rotund figure but that of the last of the Brunswick kings of England. Mistress Quickly's fern, on the north of the narrow street, perished in the conflagration of 1666 and was rebuilt on the south side. Next-door-but-one to the new Boar's Head, that May 23 aforesaid, glared the emises of John Rayment, stationer insured with the Atlas and tting well alight.

On the other side of the way to Rayment's blazing house, and in the ground of the original Boar's Head, Robert Harrild the inter was perfecting his composition roller which was later to triple the speed of newspaper-production and incidentally to make Robert a wealthy landowner at Sydenham. You remember pling's line about the Harrild and the Hoe? Westward of Harrild's Great-Eastcheap, Mr. Thomas Shelton or Skelton carried on as a ppersmith. He and other neighbours so exerted themselves to tinguish the fire that when the Atlas had paid Rayment's honest im—£55 7s. 6d., less 25s. for china and glass not insured by e policy—the company's secretary officially conveyed to each of e amateur firemen the thanks of the directors. In the case of omas Shelton, the court on further consideration thought his ired services deserved exceptional honour. Dies for a medal were dered, twenty silver medals were struck for use as occasion might quire, and one presented to Mr. Shelton.

Not until stray collectors report, or the dusty archives of the las be thoroughly searched, are we likely to know to whom dals were presented in the 16 years following the Sheltonian era. t the Islington village fire in 1825 caused the presentation of two dals, one to John Partington and one to an equally energetic p named Marcer. Whether the remaining seventeen of the twenty dals were ever issued, or what became of the dies, I cannot . A court minute of the Atlas records that the Islington claim s settled for £15 14s. 7d. and that, in addition to the medals, a ereign was given to a Miss Bradwell, ten shillings to the servant l, and five shillings each to six men who had assisted the extinc- a of the outbreak. The Partington medal passed to the recipient's ndson in Canada who handed it to Mr. Falloon. Among the r fire offices, it was not unusual to offer some courteous nowldgment of any fire-extinguishing aid rendered by persons o could not appropriately be recompensed with money. But did office except the Atlas issue medals? I think not.

another quaint custom of the Atlas, and a custom maintained he present day though initiated over eighty years ago, is the donation of half-a-crown to each proprietor who punctually attends the annual general court and remains to the close of the proceedings. On the day of the meeting, the chief accountant draws from the bank a supply of newly-minted half-crowns. He puts the money in a canvas bag, stands at the door as shareholders are leaving, and gravely hands a coin to each. I once heard of a peer of the realm who forgetfully omitted to take the proffered half-dollar, was promptly reminded of his neglect by a fellow-shareholder, came hurrying back for the coin, and laughingly swore that in such hard times he would not have missed it for anything. That story, however, was not mentioned by Falloon. But he did say that the customary payment originated from delay arising through the non-attendance of a quorum of proprietors at a certain meeting, and a late-comer arriving on foot instead of by coach. The court then resolved that, at future meetings, 2s. 6d. per head be allowed for coach-hire.

In years gone by, distant years, Atlas shares could be bought for £2 or £3 apiece. And thrifty members of the Cheapside staff, as the annual meeting approached, figured out that the modest dividend, plus an hour off from work, and plus the half-crown—well, a share or two seemed worth buying.

By favour of Mr. Falloon and our editor, pictures of the obverse and reverse of the Partington medal are reproduced with these jottings of mine. We also reproduce the two sides, respectively, of the Atlas currency-note and copper penny about which I wrote in "The Policy-Holder" of May 16 and June 27, 1923. You will observe, on comparing the medal with the penny and the note, that the globe on the medal is the more correct one; it is clearly intended for a celestial globe within an armillary sphere.

FIND OF SWEDISH COINS IN ESTHONIA.

By J. DIGBY FIRTH, F.L.S.

A small hoard of Swedish silver and billon coins was unearthed during the Summer of 1925 in the near neighbourhood of the town of Paide (otherwise Weissenstein), in the newly established Republic of Esthonia.

A peasant labourer, on uprooting a birch tree at the edge of a field found a small, much corroded iron box in which he discovered a number of coins. Sometime later the complete hoard was acquired by a correspondent of the writer to whom it has been sent for the identification of the various pieces.

Unfortunately the receptacle containing the coins was so much rusted that it completely collapsed when handled.

The hoard consists of 29 coins and five rulers are represented as follow:—

| Dated (1599-1602). | |
| Charles IX (Duke of Sudermania) 1604-11. | |
| The coins represented in the 'find' are in the name of Charles as Prince Regent and consist of a 4 öre piece (1603) and a 2 öre piece (1602). Each coin bears a portrait of the Prince as obverse while the reverse is similar to the obverse of the last named coins. | 2 coins |
| Both pieces are of fine silver. | |
| Charles XI (1660-97). | |
| 2 öre piece in billon dated 1667. | 1 coin |

With two exceptions (the first and last pieces enumerated on the above list) the coins are in more or less fine condition.

The piece of Charles XI however, shows much wear by circulation and is extremely unlikely to have been part of the original hoard. It has been suggested that this piece may have been picked out of the soil by the labourer and placed with the other coins. The coin judging from its very worn appearance has probably been in circulation for at least 20 years and this would date the hoard no earlier than 1687. The fine state of the majority of the remainder of the coins and the fact that there are no coins in the hoard dated between 1603 and 1667 supports the view that the last named coin on the list has no connection with the hoard. In this case judging by the extremely fine condition of the two regency coins of 1602-3 it would be reasonable to date the hoard not more than five years after the latter date — i.e. 1608.

Though small the 'find' is interesting as it recalls a most romantic period in Swedish history during the reigns of members of the Vasa dynasty and when her dominions were much more extensive than they are to-day.

In 1560 North Esthonia passed to Sweden and in 1629 all Esthonia practically as now constituted became a province of Sweden and remained so until 1721 when it was ceded to Russia. Esthonia claimed her independence in February 1918.

AN UNPUBLISHED COIN OF FERDINAND II OF VALENCIA.

1515-1516.

The Doble Ducado illustrated above is an unknown type of the rare gold coins of this monarch. Heiss gives an illustration of Plate 99, n° 4 of a Ducado with the bust to right, but the Doble Ducado of this type has so far never been known. The specimen in question is practically in mint condition, but slightly double struck on the face, as can be seen. An idea of the rarity of this piece can be gathered from the fact that Heiss had himself never seen the single Ducado illustrated by him but could only take it from a Placart issued in 1600! As Ferdinand the Catholic only reigned alone for a little over a year it is not surprising that his issues should be so scarce; it is a little surprising however that the bust on this coin should show him so youthful, in contrast to those coins with his bust to left.

The description of the piece is as follows:—

Obv. ✠ FERDINANDVS ✠ DEI GRACIA ✠ R. Bust, crowned, to r. Within double tressure of two curves.

Rev. ✠ VALLENCIE ✠ MAI (shield) ORICA ✠ SEROA. Crowned arms.

NUMISMATIC QUERIES

1) In a small volume entitled "English Coins and Tokens" by L. Jewitt & B. V. Head, 1886, Godalming is given as one of the mint towns of Aethelred II, and in a guide to the town of about the same date (1886) it is stated that two coins struck there are in the Royal Danish Collection. It is probably only a coincidence that in the old part of the town there is a street named Mint Street.

Is there any certain evidence that there was at any time a mint at Godalming?

2) Some pennies and halfpence of Charles I have four cusps on the edge. On a few they are well defined and regular, though on many they are very conspicuous, on many they are irregular and partially entirely worn away.

Is this intentional or is it due to some peculiar method of preparing the blanks?

A perfect specimen might appear thus: ◇.

NUMISMATIC SOCIETIES, MUSEUMS, &c

KENT NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

Mr. H. Risch presided over the last meeting of this Society, at the Maidstone Museum, when Mr. H. Munn read a paper on "British War Medals", which he illustrated with nearly 100 specimens from his own collection. In addition to much interesting information with reference to medals, Mr. Munn also gave the derivation of the "nick-names" of various regiments in the British Army, and the peculiarities of their uniforms. Mr. Munn was heartily thanked at the conclusion of his paper.

The following coins were exhibited:

By Mr. J. W. Bridge, a silver three-farthing piece of Elizabeth. Mr. E. R. A set of hop-tokens of the Duke of Cleveland, Battle Abbey, 1, 12, and 12, and 120, bearing the ducal coronet. Mr. E. T. Clark, a brass heraldic die, Spanish silver coin of Charles III, 2 reals. Mr. H. Risch, Tray of copper pennies, and 2 bronze medals by C. W. J. S. Wyon.

VARIA.

ALBANIA COINAGE.

Dear Sir,—It is very interesting to see the types which Albania has chosen for her brand-new coinage. On the half-lak Hercules and the mean lion appropriately symbolise the difficulties with which the young State grapples. Alexander the Great appears on the lak, because the Albanians believe he was an Albanian and spoke their language as his mother-tongue.

A pretty legend even claims Macedonia for Albania. Delighted with the exploits of one of his generals, whose name has not been preserved, Alexander made him rich presents and then asked, "Ma q'e doni?" "What more do you want?" In reply the general waved his hand towards the land lying between Mount Olympos and the Pindus. Alexander complaisantly bestowed it on him, and in memory of his strikingly original question the general named the province "Maqedoni," the present Albanian form.

"Ma q'e doni" is not very accurate Albanian, and in Alexander's time monarchs did not address a subject in the second person plural like this; but these drawbacks to the story are fit for pedants only, and do not concern weavers of legends or dreamers of power in the Balkans.—Yours faithfully,

MARGARET M. HASLUCK.

A COIN COINCIDENCE.

Mr. — Previous to 1891 the date of free education, I, as an old teacher, have possessed of two coins of the reign of William III. and Mary II. On Monday morning, I collected fees from my own class. One particular Monday, I was guided by the touch, as to the peculiar thickness of a coin on one side. I found it to be a William and Mary half-crown, dated 1689. A week or two later, I discovered a William and Mary halfpenny under exactly the same circumstances.

Somebody was evidently disposing of an old collection!

GREEK PORTRAIT COINS.

(Supplementary to the series appearing on cols. 135-142 of the March-April no.).

Egypt.

Ptolemy I (B.C. 323-285). Α. Head of Ptolemy r. diademed and wearing aegis. Ρ. ΠΤΟΛΕΜΑΙΟΥ ΒΑΣΙΛΕΩΣ. Alexander, as son of Ammon, in quadriga of elephants l. Beneath, monogram. RR. E.F. 35 " "

Α. Tetradrachm. Obv. Head of Ptolemy I r. diademed. Ρ. ΠΤΟΛΕΜΑΙΟΥ ΒΑΣΙΛΕΩΣ. Eagle standing l. on fulmen. To l. monogram. E.F. 2 " "

These early portraits of Ptolemy I are amongst the most remarkable works of portraiture to be found on the Greek coinage. Later monarchs still continuing to use this figure, it degenerated.

Ptolemy I ruled Egypt as the satrap of Philip Aridaeus and the young Alexander IV. In 311 he threw off his Macedonian allegiance and in 305 he assumed the title of βασιλεύς. The portrait of his son Ptolemy II is found on the scarce gold tetradrachms and octodrachms, conjoined with that of his wife Arsinoë II, with the busts of Ptolemy I and Berenice on the reverse.

Ptolemy II (B.C. 285-246). Α. Tetradrachm. Obv. ΑΔΕΛΦΩΝ. The busts of Ptolemy II and his wife diademed, to right. Behind, shield and Α. Ρ. ΘΕΩΝ. The diademed busts of Ptolemy I and his wife r. V.F. 12 10 "

The family of the Ptolemies continued to reign, on the whole peacefully, with brief periods of attempted conquest. It was the lot of Ptolemy VI Philometor to reign during one of these times. His minister conceiving the ambition of reconquering Syria, he found his kingdom invaded by Antiochus IV. Marathus in Phoenicia may have been one of the bases from which the Egyptians were hoping to operate. At all events in the ten years 180-169 we find coins of that town bearing a figure on the obverse which with great probability may be the portrait of Ptolemy VI.

Ptolemy VI (B.C. 181-146). Α. Obv. Head of Ptolemy VI r. laureate, with caduceus over his shoulder. Ρ. Marathus beardless standing l. on r. downwards name of mint, ΜΑΡΑΘΗ, on l. date (illegible). B.M.C. (Phoenicia), p. 123, 22. Rare. V.F. 1 5 "

A few portraits of QUEENS.

Syracuse.

Hiero II of Syracuse marked a new departure in the beautiful Sicilian coinage, not only by putting his own portrait on his money, but by striking a whole series bearing his wife's portrait. This seems to show a close connection in some way or another with Egypt where the practice began with Ptolemy II.

Philistis. Α. Tetradrachm. Obv. Head of the queen to l. veiled. Stalk of barley behind. Ρ. ΒΑΣΙΛΙΣΣΑΣ ΦΙΛΙΣΤΙΔΟΣ (ex.). Winged Nike conducting a galloping quadriga to r. Beneath the horse's hoofs a stalk of barley; to r. ΚΙΣ. Wt.: 207 grs. A really beautiful coin in almost perfect condition. Obv. as illustration above. F.D.C. 5 10 "

Syria.

Commagene the most northerly district of Syria struck coins bearing a number of different portraits of Seleucid rulers and in one instance we find the portrait of one of the queens, Jotape, wife of Antiochus IV.

Jotape. Circa 175 B.C. Α. Obv. ΒΑΣΙΛΙΣΣΑ ΙΩΤΑΠΗ ΦΙΛΑΔΕΛΦΟΣ. Bust of Jotape r. hair bound up with diadem. Ρ. ΚΟΜΜΑΓ ΗΝΩΝ. Scorpion; all in wreath of olive-leaves. Cf. B.M.C., 1. Very uncommon and an unusually fine portrait. V.F. 2 5 "

Egypt.

The very large number of Ptolemaic coins bearing the head of Arsinoë II wife of Ptolemy II, appears to be due to the deification of this queen and subsequently a very large revenue diverted into the royal treasury. This money was apparently coined with the portrait of Arsinoë.

54905 Arsinoë II. Α. Octodrachm. Obv. Veiled and diademed head of Arsinoë r. Behind head, Κ. Obv. ΑΡΣΙΝΟΗΣ ΦΙΛΑΔΕΛΦΟΥ. Double filleted cornucopiae. Brilliant. F.D.C. 21 " "

54906 — Α. Decadrachm. Obv. Similar head, behind, ΑΑ. Ρ. ΑΡΣΙΝΟΗΣ ΦΙΛΑΔΕΛΦΟΥ. Same type. Rare. V.F. 15 " "

Berenice II wife of Ptolemy III Euergetes has her portrait on some bronze coins of Marathus in Phoenicia.

TRÉSOR DE LA NUMISMATIQUE GRECQUE ANCIENNE.

LES MONNAIES D'ATHÈNES,

by

JEAN N. SVORONOS

Director of the Athens National Numismatic Museum.

Finished after the Author's death

by

BEHRENDT PICK

Director of the Medal Cabinet at Gotha.

Folio volume (30 by 40 cm.) of 114 phototype Plates and 20 pages of Tables. Text on each Plate.

This work presents 4671 coins of Athens arranged in their right order and each one excellently illustrated, thus exhibiting a series practically complete. So high a number of coins of this City has never been brought within the compass of one work before. Every important collection all over the world, whether public or private, has had to yield its treasures for this work. From plaster casts of all the various types of Athenian coins, with every one of the essential varieties, these Plates have been prepared with the utmost care, and in consequence all the necessary material for any kind of Numismatic study is ready to hand, whilst they will be found equally useful for an archaeological or historical study of the coins.

After the death of Jean N. Svoronos who had prepared everything, Mr. Behrendt Pick very kindly undertook to give the finishing touches to the work, which he has completed according to the intention of his former collaborator and friend. His most notable contribution has been seven detailed indices, which will materially lighten the task of all who wish to consult the work.

AES GRAVE

A Study of the Cast Coinages of Rome and Central Italy

BY

EDWARD A. SYDENHAM M.A.

Quarto, 145 pp., 28 plates, boards, linen back and corners.

The Aes Grave forms the first chapter of the long story of the Roman Coinage but hitherto no complete account of it has been set forth in English. The well known works of Garrucci and Haebler are unwieldy in size and almost prohibitive in price. The present study surveys the whole field from a thoroughly scientific point of view, contains a corpus of over 350 pieces, and is illustrated with a series of plates from recent Sale Catalogues which should meet all practical requirements. The price has been put as low as possible, for a work of this class, in the hope that it may reach all who are interested in the fascinating problems of the origins of the famous coinage of ancient Rome.

DIES FOR FALSE COINS

In the possession of the Museo Nazionale Romano are more than 1000 dies for making false coins, for the most part produced by the electrotyping process; about a hundred are however hand-engraved in steel. The various classes of coins and medals are represented in approximately the following numbers: Greek coins, 232; Roman 520; Medieval and Modern 294.

The Istituto Italiano di Numismatica, in agreement with the Direction of the Museum, has undertaken the publication of impressions from these dies, with descriptions, in a quarto volume with about 40 plates. An invitation issued some years ago for subscriptions to defray the cost of this work having met with inadequate response the publication has not proceeded. As, however, it is highly desirable, in the interest of museums and private collectors that the forgeries from these dies should be exposed, the invitation is now renewed. Promises to subscribe at the rate of £ 1.10 sterling or 6 dollars will be received by Dr. G. F. Hill, British Museum, London, W. C. 1, or Messrs. Spink and Son, Ltd., 17 Piccadilly, London, W. 1. Payment should not be actually made until notice is received that the work is ready for distribution.

NOTES ON THE MYTHOLOGICAL TYPES
ON ROMAN REPUBLICAN COINS.

THE MYTH OF SCYLLA.

weird forms of Scylla and Charybdis appear on the Reverse of the denarii of Sextus Pompeius Magnus which were struck in the mint about the year 43 B.C. to commemorate his naval victory over Q Salvidienus Rufus, who had been sent by Octavius to him.

Salis dated the issue of these coins 37 to 35 B.C. as Pompey won a naval victory at Scyllaeum in 38.

historical detail confer "Historical Roman Coins" by Hill. The first of these three types bears on the Obverse a figure of Neptune, to right, a trident over his shoulder, and on the Reverse the inscription PRAEF. CLAS. ET ORAE MARIT. EX S.C.; for type a trophy adorned with a trident, a prow and anchor, above which are the two monsters Scylla and Charybdis. The second type bears on the Obv. MAG. PIVS IMP. ITER. The light-house of Messina surmounted by a statue of Neptune; below in the foreground a galley, on the left of which is an eagle, standard, and in the poop an acrostolium.

On the Rev. The same legend as on the first denarius, and the monster Scylla with arms raised about to strike with a rudder. Her body is joined to two fish tails and three dogs' heads appear below, joined to the body near the junction of the fishes' tails.

The third denarius is only a variety of the second, the legend is in different order of words PRAEF. ORAE MARIT. ET CLAS. EX S.C. It was formerly said that in the collection of John Doubleday there was a variety of the well known bronze coin of M.V. Agrippa bearing on the Reverse a figure of Neptune standing and holding a dolphin in one hand and his trident in the other, which varied in that a figure of Scylla was added — perhaps the writer thought the dolphin looked like Scylla, for no such variety is now known to exist.

The Homeric idea of Scylla as described in the Odyssey is depicted on Contorniates bearing the head of Alexander Severus on the Obverse and Scylla and the sailors of Ulysses on the Reverse (Vienna Cabinet, Haverkamp no. 64). Between 302-281 B.C. Scylla appeared on coins of Tarentum as in the act of hurling a rock.

Between 440-420 B.C. Scylla appeared on coins of Thurii. Some notes on these types and of the myth are given on pp. 120-121 of the writer's work on "Coins of Magna Graecia". The Thurian coins depict the attitude of the victim of Circe's jealousy just as it is described by Ovid.

On some of the later coins of Cumæ we find the form of Scylla probably copied from the types of Thurii and on bronze coins of Cumæ Scylla bears a curved rod, perhaps meant for an oar.

In the East Scylla appears as a coin type only on coins of Cyzicus, a city on the shores of the Propontis, and even there only as one of the many imaginary creatures such as the Sphinx, Chimaera, Griffin, Pegasus and the Centaur. Its presence on these electrum staters, issued circa 450-400 B.C., probably points to some trade with Sicily and Italy. It is more to be expected that Scylla should be seen on the coins of Alliba or Allifae on the borders of Samnium and Campania, but the type differs in form from the normal figures of Scylla in that the dogs are omitted, and the long fish tail is more pronounced; the silver litrae are small, so not much room was available to the artist designer.

The Homeric account of Scylla is found in Odyssey XII, 222 seq. Odysseus speaking to his crew on their approach to the dangerous straits begged the rowers to continue their toil "if peradventure Zeus may grant us to escape this death". "But of Scylla I told them nothing more, a bane irresistible, lest my company in terror should cease from rowing". He tried to see her from the prow of his ship but failed; then follows the description of Charybdis: "Toward her, then, we looked fearing destruction, but Scylla meanwhile caught from out my hollow ship six of my company the hardest with their hands and the chief in might." Then follows an account of his men caught up like fishes and devoured before his eyes.

The sight of a large octopus drawing the sailors with its long limbs to the rock may have been the origin of this idea of Scylla and of the fishlike nature of the terrible foe. Ulysses' prayer for escape from "death" and his fear of "destruction" suggest that the name of the danger, Scylla, may have been derived from Phoenician sailors whose word for death שָׁוָה sounded like Σκυλ. Among the Hebrews also Sheol was personified as we see in Isaiah XXVIII, 15-18, V 14. Hab. II, 5. Prov. I, 12.

The fact that some writers regarded Scylla as the daughter of Tyrrhenos, said to have been a Pelasgian who led a colony into Umbria from Lydia, suggests that the Greek Scylla was confused with a similar Etruscan monster differing chiefly in being winged; such figures are seen in ancient Etruscan carvings.

The later Greeks imagined various origins for the mythical Scylla which are hardly worth study; they suggested that she was either the daughter of Hecate or Echidna or Lamia, and her father Phorcys or Triton or Typhon.

The straits of Messina have always been regarded as dangerous, but the rock and the whirlpool were not the only sources of danger in ancient times for Strabo says (Bn. I, ii) "Scylla and Charybdis were infested by robbers (ληστῶν)".

The horror expressed by the myth is seen in a passage in the Agamemnon of Aeschylus (1240 seq) "What hateful monster may I rightly call her? an Amphisbaena, or a Scylla that dwells among rocks, the pest of mariners, a raving dam of hades".

In the most popular ancient account of the myth Scylla is imagined as a maiden beloved by the sea god Glaucus; thus Ovid in the XIVth B^k of his Metamorphoses represents the love-sick Glaucus as asking Circe for a charm with which to cause the beauteous Scylla to return his love.

That goddess, having pleaded for herself in vain, gave him a promise to administer a charm to Scylla. But that which she mingled for her rival was potent for evil; and going to the pool in which Scylla bathed her body below the waist and rested from the heat, she so poisoned the pool that when the maiden sat therein her body was deformed by the addition of barking beasts. Scylla to revenge herself on Circe seized the sailors of Circe's friend Ulysses but was at length turned into a rock. Juvenal in his XIVth Satire l. 19 laughs at the story as one of the lies of Ulysses; and Lucretius (IV, 733) mentions Scylla as one among other composite imaginary creatures. "The centaurs also and the limbs of Scylla we see", as in B^k V, 888, Scylla is described as girt with semimarine dogs. Tibullus also (III, IV, 88) wrote of the virgin form of Scylla girt with dogs. In the Poem Ciris, once attributed to Virgil, Scylla is described very much in the same way as in Ovid but no important fresh ideas are added.

Virgil's description in the Aeneid (B^k III, 420) is as follows: Scylla besets the right side, pitiless Charybdis the left, and with the lowest whirlpool of her chasm thrice swallows vast waves down the steep, and again rears them one after the other up to the sky and lashes the stars with the surge. But a cave confines Scylla with its dark recesses reaching forth her jaws and sucking in vessels in the rocks. Above she presents a human form, a lovely virgin with fair breast down to the middle: her lower parts are those of a hideous sea monster, with the tails of dolphins joined to wolf heads about her waist". The introduction of the dogs into the weird composite figure is probably due to the Greek word σκυλακή, derived from σκύλλω to rend, and used in a secondary sense for to trouble, as in Eurip. Medea 1343 and in St. Mark V, 35 and St. Matt. IX, 36. The story of Scylla suggests first the idea of octopus, then that of death and Hades, then the later wild imaginations of the later Greek-speaking peoples who connected the name with dogs, but who not having the old Hellenic ideas of art and beauty, imagined after the Semitic manner of thought a figure whose attributes were described by emblems inartistic and unnatural, however forceful and intense.

It is not only on coins that the figure of Scylla is seen; for there are mirrors, vases, helmets and breast-plates decorated with images.

There was another Scylla mentioned by Apollodorus (III, 15), a daughter of King Nisus of Megara who caused the death of her father. It is to her Virgil refers in Georgics, I, 405. After betraying Megara to Minos she was thrown by him into the sea and her body was found washed up under a promontory at the east end of the Peloponnesus which was henceforth called after her name Scyllaeum, perhaps cliff of disaster.

This is not to be confused with the Scyllaeum which was a promontory about fifteen miles north of Rhegium described by Strabo (p. 257).

St Ambrose refers to those myths concerning the destructive powers of the elements in his work "de Cain et Abel (II, 10).

THE COINS OF THE DUTCH EAST INDIES.

An Introduction to the Study of the Series (excluding those specially struck for India and Ceylon)

By SIR JOHN BUCKNILL M.A. (OXON).

The first batch of Doits is met with dated 1764 and 1765; they are not very uncommon but are seldom found in very fine condition. It is very doubtful if their issue at all fully effected its purpose; four Doits equalled in value One Stiver. A second, somewhat similar, piece made its appearance in 1783, its production being authorized by a Resolution dated February 18th of that year. Mons. de Warem, the Assayer, was instructed to manufacture these pieces but failed to do so and the Company itself over the undertaking on June 20th 1783; the Doits were even declared to be current by a Resolution dated December 1st of the same year. This coin is not rare but is not often met with in a state of preservation.

These locally produced Doits had one advantage over those imported from Europe in the fact that they bore on the Reverse in Arabic (Malay style) script, an indication of their value; while those produced in the Netherlands displayed nothing but the

They are sometimes referred to as "Dumps". As a rule the value in Stivers was stamped on one side of the length and the date on the other; but being often very roughly hacked off from the already stamped Pewter.

Struck at Batavia, Java.

Amongst the Islands of the Malay Archipelago, and, of course, in the Peninsula, much Tin ore is found ; it has been worked and smelted there by the Chinese from time immemorial ; and, more or less mixed with lead, has been much utilized, particularly by indigenous Rulers, in the production of coins of low value ; some of these Pewter pieces are still current in various localities such, for example, as the State of Trengganu which is under British protection.

The Dutch in the eighteenth and the British in the nineteenth centuries both struck pewter coins ; and even during the great War, when there was a temporary shortage of petty currency in the Netherlands Indies, an issue of pewter Five and Ten Cent pieces was actively contemplated there.

The Dutch, when they first reached Java, found, being familiarly used as currency there, "U" shaped pieces of metal known as "Tangs". This kind of money was from its appearance often designated as "Fish-hook" or "Lari" currency and is a very primitive form of coinage, being found used on the coasts of southern India and of Ceylon and elsewhere. These pieces were generally fashioned from thin circular copper rods or very thick wire, and in Java also probably from tin or pewter. The Half and Quarter Stiver coins produced in 1644 by the Dutch in Java were not struck in numbers adequate to meet the requirements of the local demand for copper currency of low denomination ; and, owing to this shortage, the Company, by a Resolution dated November, 9th 1658 decided in order to accommodate the indigenous population, to make at Batavia "Tangs" from thin copper rods and to declare them current at the rate of four to the Stiver ; they were to be stamped on the edges with a small device so as to prevent them from being clipped and thus lessened in intrinsic value. The rods, which were of Japanese copper, were found so hard that their bending and stamping was discovered to be impracticable ; and by a Resolution dated May 28th 1660 directions were given that these "Tangs" were to be made of pewter instead of copper. Although none of these Tangs made of Copper (if indeed any were actually issued) have come to light, one, at any rate, of the Pewter pieces is in existence. It is impressed with the Crest of the City of Batavia.

(N. & C. p. 57 ; Rouffaer and Ijzerman, p. 228.)

In 1796 and in the following year, a small issue of little Doits, composed of Pewter, was produced at Batavia. The origin and circumstances attendant upon the appearance of these very rare pieces was not satisfactorily understood until elucidated by Moquette in his Article "De tinnen Duiten in 1796-7, en de metalen Stuivers, in 1799-1800 te Batavia geslagen" (1908).

These Doits were, almost immediately after being put into currency, extensively forged by a Chinaman named Tjam Sam Ko ; and, in consequence of the advent of these counterfeit coins, the genuine issue was declared to be withdrawn from circulation by Resolution dated May 17th 1797 ; and, as a result, these pieces are now of the utmost rarity.

The two groups to be here described are, therefore :

- a). 1660 "Tangs" impressed with the Crest of Batavia.
- b). 1796-1797. Doits.

a) First group 1660.

A roughly circular rod of pewter bent in the shape of the letter "U". On the upper portion of each arm is stamped on one side an upright sword the point of which passes through a laurel wreath ; this device constituted the Crest of the City of Batavia. The other side of the "Tang" is not stamped. The "Tang" is 31 millimetres long and 1 millimetre across. The only specimen which appears to be known is in the Royal Coin Cabinet at the Hague.

Fig. 44.

From the specimen in the Royal Coin Cabinet at the Hague.

b) Second group 1796-1797.

Doits.

The decision to produce these Pewter Doits was originally made by a Resolution dated May 27th 1796. It was intended in the first instance that they should have a round hole in the centre ; a device known for many centuries past to the Chinese and copied from them in many instances in the coins of low denomination produced in the Malay Archipelago and Peninsula by the Native Princes and Sultans ; the idea of the hole being for convenience in stringing them on wire or cord when conveying a quantity.

They were also to be inscribed with the letter "B" (i.e. Batavia) above the monogram "V". Each Doit was to be of the weight of two copper Doits but to equal in value only one.

The manufacture of these pieces and their dies (which were of iron) was entrusted under contract to certain Chinese men ; but forgeries, even before these coins were declared current, were on the market.

The original Order of May 27th 1796 was, almost immediately cancelled by an Order dated June 28th 1796.

A new type was approved and directed to be made by an Instruction dated July 1st 1796 ; these had no central hole and the letter "N" (not "B") above the monogram "V" : they were declared current by a Resolution dated September 20th 1796.

No genuine specimen of the first type has yet been found, and it is indeed an uncertain question if any were made ; and, as a later issue was, as has been previously mentioned, again owing to the appearance of forgeries, withdrawn from circulation in May 1797, specimens are of the very highest rarity and of great numismatic value.

83. 1796. Doit. D. 18. W. 5. 58. (G.).

Obv. The monogram "V" ; above the monogram, the letter "N" ; (i.e. Nederlandsche = Netherlands).

Rev. In three lines "I-DUIT-1796". Extremely rare : Moquette was only aware of one specimen, which was in the Batavian Museum ; but there was another in the Groen Collection.

(M. Pl. 24, f. 515; G. p. 38. (Lot. 647. £ 5.8.4) and Pl. 5, 647.)

1797. Doit. D. 18 to 18.5. W. 7.03. (G.).

Similar, generally, to No. 83 save for date and of equal rarity. There was a specimen in the Grogan Collection which is now in the Writer's Cabinet.

(M. Pl. 24, f. 516; G. p. 38 (Lot. 648. £ 5.8.4) and Pl. 5, f. 648.)

BRITISH IMPERIAL COPPER AND BRONZE COINAGE, 1838-1925.

FIFTH SUPPLEMENTARY ARTICLE.

Since the fourth supplementary article was printed in the "Numismatic Circular", for January-February, 1925, the following descriptions unrecorded varieties of British Imperial copper and bronze coins have been kindly sent to me by numismatic friends:—

BRITISH IMPERIAL COPPER COINAGE. VICTORIA I. 1837-1901.

A. HALF FARTHING, 1847.

Similar to 1, but dated 1847, the numeral 7 not in alignment being higher than the others.

I am indebted to my esteemed friend Mr. L.G.P. Messenger for kindly showing me this variety which is in his collection.

BRITISH IMPERIAL BRONZE COINAGE. VICTORIA I. 1837-1901.

2A. PENNY, 1861.

1. — Similar to the obverse of 11.

2. — Similar to the reverse of 19, but dated 1861, with less space between the numerals.

This coin was in the collection of the late Dr. Arthur Andrews of Llanelli, New South Wales, Australia.

GEORGE V. 1910.

The following British Imperial bronze coin of this reign has been added since the publication of the Supplement to my monograph in 1915:—

6. HALFPENNY, 1925.

1. — Similar to the obverse of 1, but the ornamentation of the rim of different design and more pronounced.

2. — Similar to the reverse of 1, but more space between the letters of the legend and the ornamentation of the rim, the figure of Britannia taller, her thumb touches the cross of Saint Patrick in the first quarter of the shield, the sea is more distinctly shown, the date, 1924, in larger numerals, and the ornamentation of the rim of a different design and more pronounced.

HENRY GARSIDE.

COINS OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

AUSTRALIA. GEORGE V. 1910.

SHILLING, 1925.

Similar to the Shilling described in the "Numismatic Circular", Volume 23, Column 664, but dated 1925.

BRITISH HONDURAS. GEORGE V. 1910.

CENT, 1924.

Similar to the Cent described in the "Numismatic Circular", Volume 24, Column 520, but dated 1924.

CANADA. GEORGE V. 1910.

FIVE CENTS, 1925.

Similar to the Five Cents described in the "Numismatic Circular", Volume 31, Column 207, but dated 1925.

CENT, 1925.

Similar to the Cent described in the "Numismatic Circular", Volume 31, Column 208, but dated 1925.

EAST AFRICA. GEORGE V. 1910.

TWENTY FIVE CENTS, 1920.

O. — Legend: GEORGIVS V REX ET IND:IMP: The continuity of the legend is interrupted by the mound of the monarch's crown. Truncated bust of the King and Emperor in profile and looking to the left. On the truncation of the bust: — B.M. (Sir Bertram Mackennal, K.C.V.O.). His Majesty is wearing the Imperial Crown and the ermine Robe of State, The Collar of the Most Noble Order of the Garter, and the Badge of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath. The whole within an ornamented rim.

R. — Legend: — EAST AFRICA. An ornament on the left, and another on the right, below the first and last letters of the legend. Inside a plain curve with embellished ends, a lion passant looking to the right, and walking on ground partly covered with herbage. Mountains in the background. On the ground beneath the lion the mint-mark H (Heaton). Below the ground, the inscription, in three lines: — 25 | CENTS—1920. The whole within an ornamented rim.

E. — Milled with straight lines.

Similar coins are dated 1921.

MAURITIUS. GEORGE V. 1910.

TWO CENTS, 1911.

O. — Legend: — GEORGE V KING AND EMPEROR OF INDIA. The continuity of the legend is interrupted by the mound of the monarch's crown. A bead between the beginning and end of the legend. Truncated bust of the King and Emperor in profile, and looking to the left. On the truncation of the bust: — B.M. (Sir Bertram Mackennal, K.C.V.O.). His Majesty is wearing the Imperial Crown, and the ermine Robe of State, The Collar of the Most Noble Order of The Garter, and The Badge of the Most Honourable Order of The Bath. The whole within an ornamented rim.

R. — Upper legend: — MAURITIUS. Lower legend: — TWO CENTS 1911. An ornament on the left, and another on the right, between the legends. The numeral 2 decorated with horizontal lines and encompassed by a beaded circle. The whole within an ornamented rim.

NEW ISSUES.

THE NEW SPANISH NICKEL 25 CENTIMOS.

The new Spanish 25 Centimos illustrated above came out at the end of 1925 and is extraordinarily pleasing in its obverse design. The spirit of Columbus is apparently still very real, and of the many nickel issues since the War this one can certainly rank with the best, and take its place by the side of the various Italian issues. It might be pertinent to raise the question as to when we shall realise the value of expressing history in concrete form. There are surely deeds of equal courage and lasting historical merit in our own history to vie with that of any other nation, and were such deeds commemorated on our coinage, there might be less forgetfulness on the part of the many of the history bred in our very bone. Are we as artists incapable of producing an adequate design?

MEDAL OF HUGO DE CORT
by
ARMAND BONNETAIN.

We have just been favoured with a specimen of a very finely executed Portrait Medal of Hugo de Cort, by the well-known Belgian artist Armand Bonnetain. Of these only ten specimens were struck in silver, and ninety in bronze at the Brussels Mint. It is interesting to note that the shells depicted on the Medal bear Mr. de Cort's name, the one on the obverse being the Turbonilla Corti dredged by Prince Albert of Monaco near the Azores, and the one on the reverse being the Buliminoptis Corti of Tonkin. The Medal was struck in commemoration of Mr. de Cort's 25 years in the management of A. J. White's continental business as qualified chemist.

OBITUARY.

MR. R. W. MC LACHLAN.

Mr. Robert Wallace Mc Lachlan died on Monday, May 10th, 1926, at his residence 440, Mount Stephen Avenue, Westmount, Montreal, Canada. He was the son of William and Anne Mc Lachlan and was born in Montreal in 1845. He was educated at Huntingdon Academy, Mc Gill Model School, and Mc Gill University. For approximately twenty years he was an official in the Archives Department of the Court House in Montreal from which position he retired about two years ago. He was a Life Governor of the Numismatic and Antiquarian Society of Montreal and once possessed what was probably the largest collection of coins, tokens, checks and medals in Canada as they numbered about twenty thousand specimens. He had also five hundred volumes of books and five thousand pamphlets in his numismatic library. A few years ago he presented his entire collection to the Chateau de Ramezay Museum, Montreal, of which institution he was one of the founders and joint curator. It is known as "The Mc Lachlan Numismatic Collection".

Mr. Mc Lachlan was elected a Member of the Numismatic Society of Montreal in 1865, and was Editor of "The Canadian Antiquarian" since 1872. He contributed many papers on Canadian coins, currency, and medals to antiquarian and numismatic publications in Canada and the United States of North America and also to magazines in this country.

Mr. Mc Lachlan was a Fellow of the Royal Society of Canada, a Member of the American Numismatic Society and a foreign member of the Belgian Numismatic Society. He was also a Member of the British Numismatic Society and the American Numismatic Association. Among his published works are "Canadian Numismatics", "Canadian Communion Tokens", "The Currency of the Canadian Bank", "Canadian Card Money", and "Canadian Temperance Medals". He also wrote numerous monographs bearing on Colonial history one of them on the Medal of the War of 1812 and another on the Louisburg Medals.

Mr. Mc Lachlan married in 1876 Miss Elizabeth Weir, sister of Mr. Justice Weir and The Honourable R. Stanley Weir. He survives him as well as one daughter, Mrs. Shirley Dixon, Montreal. His remains were interred in Mount Royal Cemetery, Montreal on Wednesday, May 12th, 1926.

Mr. Mc Lachlan was elected a Fellow of the Royal Numismatic Society in 1868, and at a meeting of the Council on Thursday, May 20th, 1926, he was awarded the Society's medal not only for many contributions to numismatics but because he had been more than sixty years a constant stimulus to the study of numismatics in North America. At the Annual General Meeting of the Royal Numismatic Society on June 17th, 1926, Charles Oman the President made a very feeling reference to the death of Mr. Mc Lachlan and expressed the deep regret of the Fellows that he had not lived to receive the medal, and a vote of condolence with his widow and family was passed on the motion of Mr. Frederick A. Harrison seconded by Mr. Percy H. Webb, the Honorary Secretary, Mr. John Allan, was instructed to convey it to Mrs. Mc Lachlan and also to forward the medal to her.

The writer has been a correspondent of the late Mr. Mc Lachlan for many years and deeply regrets the passing of an old and valued numismatic friend.

He lived for those who loved him —
For those who knew him true;
For the Heaven that smiled above him,
And awaited his spirit, too;
For the cause that lacked assistance;
For the wrong that needed resistance;
For the future in the distance;
And the good that he could do.

VARIA.

SIR CHARLES OMAN, M. P., ON THE POOR SILVER CURRENCY.

Sir Charles Oman, M.P., presiding yesterday at the annual meeting of the Royal Numismatic Society, protested that the British silver coin remained as unsatisfactory as ever, both in artistic production and purity of metal.

The "Austen Chamberlain" coinage of 1921-2 was, he said, now showing large patches of yellow alloy, while the later copper-alloyed coin of 1924 was already showing the red metal through the silver coating.

"I wish," Sir Charles continued, "that I could find any signs of a willingness to revert to pure silver—even if it be only to copy the proportions of the metals in the new coinage of the Irish Free State, which is silver to 25 alloy, or that of the Soviet's rouble, of 90 silver to 10 of metal."

The delays in improving the types of coinage grow tedious; I cannot believe that the cause of them is the present zeal of economy professed by all governmental orators. For the designing and cutting of a die costs a matter of a few pounds only. It is curious to reflect that though we never see them, full-weight gold sovereigns are being struck out at Pretoria, Sydney, Perth, and Melbourne though not, alas, London."

Morning Post, 18 June.

UNLUCKY CROWNS.

A friend of mine tells me of a curious superstition, which may be new to our readers as it is to me. He tendered a five-shilling piece to a waiter, eyed it doubtfully.

"I'd rather not take that, sir," he said. "Couldn't you give me something else?"

"What is the matter with it?" asked my friend.

"Well, sir," was the reply, "to take one of those means getting the I know two men who have taken them and each of them got the the next day."

"It would be interesting to know whether the dread of these now rare coins is general among waiters, or is confined to one particular house where their baleful influence has been 'proved.' Perhaps if the coin were tendered as a tip its power for evil would be held to have been tided."

The superstition concerning the taking of five-shilling pieces in payment is more wide-spread than I had imagined. A correspondent living in West Hampstead writes to me:

"I had a 5s. piece in a bag of silver from the Bank, and last Friday I took it, with other cash, to my daughter to meet the household bills."

Later she asked me to give her no more such coins, as she had had the greatest difficulty getting rid of this one. The baker's man and the man refused to take it in payment of their books, and in both cases told that to take such coins back meant getting them the sack. The baker's boy took it as part payment, insisting that my daughter should go to the shop and explain she had made him take it. Everyone dislikes those coins, but surely not enough to live in terror of them."

THE PENNY WITH GOLD IN IT.

BY THE LONDONER.

Have you any pennies in your pocket? If you have, then bring them and look carefully at the dates upon them.

It may be that one of them bears the date of 1922. If you should find upon one of that year, be happy. It is a rare piece. No more than twelve millions of pennies were struck in the year 1922. "There," says an officer of the Royal Mint, "a great surplus of pennies at the time. We were asked not to mint any more for a while; none have been minted since."

It comes that your penny of 1922 is a rare piece. You may put it in a drawer: you may take it out now and then to look upon it proudly. You may behave with it as people behave with rare coins. Find a man who has a penny of 1922 can be called a lucky man.

For the worth of it—well, it is worth a penny: you can buy a penny worth with it in any shop that has a penny worth for sale. For it is good a penny as any other penny.

One thing is certain, that you will not get three halfpence for it, or even five farthings, at the shop of the dealer in old coins. Nor is the Royal Mint eager to buy it back, paying more than a penny for your 1922 penny. But if you ask me what simple folk are ready to give for it, I cannot say.

I hear the oddest tales about this penny of 1922. They say that there is gold in it. How much gold, or how the gold came there, I do not know. All I know is that somebody has set a story running about, a fantastic story concerning this penny. The simple folk, hearing the story, are buying this penny for more than it would be worth to me.

They are giving much more than a penny for it. You have the evidence of the omnibus conductor who says that people come to his garage, asking for 1922 pennies. He sells them now at eightpence each: the last that he had he sold for eightpence. But he says that, if he can find any more among his pence, he shall ask tenpence apiece for them. He says that they are "very rare." So they are: have I not told you that there are but some twelve millions of them.

Tenpence, indeed: there is talk of their going higher than that. "A letter came from a lady," says the Royal Mint officer, "asking us if it be true that the 1922 penny is worth eighteen pence." The Royal Mint answered her that it was worth a penny.

A worthy, a respectable office is the Royal Mint. But not an office that can come gaily into the humour of this thing. It knows, the Royal Mint knows, that the bronze of the 1922 penny was not mingled with any gold. To the Royal Mint this is but a penny and like other pennies. To those who buy it of omnibus conductors, who give eightpence a piece for it, who will give tenpence to-morrow, this is a rare thing and mysteriously precious.

Soon it may be as the Queen Anne farthing. Now there was a coin for you. Rare indeed: I have heard that all the Queen Anne farthings were but pattern pieces, never sent out by the Mint. And precious: collectors have given as much as a pound for a Queen Anne farthing. I remember how a Queen Anne farthing of a specially rare sort brought several pounds when it was sold at auction.

But legend had a better tale to tell. It was said that only three of those farthings had been struck. That two of them were in the British Museum or some such place, carefully locked up. That the third was wandering about the world. That anybody who should find it would have at least a thousand pounds for the lost Queen Anne farthing.

It is not yet dead, that famous story of the Queen Anne farthing. I have been told that, within our own time, a simple man trudged the length of England and came to London, bearing one of those farthings, asking where he might have the thousand pounds for it. Somewhere I have read the history of a man whom a wretch murdered, because he was believed to have a Queen Anne farthing in his house.

I do not suppose that we shall fall to murdering one another over the 1922 penny: it were better to buy it of an omnibus conductor, even though we may have to pay as much as tenpence for it or even eightpence. But the appetite for it may grow. It is no good telling people that it is but a penny, like other pennies and worth a penny. They will answer that it is a penny of 1922. If they say that, what can one say? For so many things earnestly sought by collectors seem to me no more than pennyworths very like other pennyworths. If there were but three of these pennies, the great collector would pay much money for one of them, telling me that he did so because it was one of the 1922 pennies. Yet I could not understand why he should want it.

THIRD BRASS.

Although common and cheap the later Roman third brass provide a truly extraordinary gallery of interesting portraits. The obscurity of the origin, the amazing rapidity of advance to power, and the suddenness of their plunge down again to banishment or to death of the majority of the third-century emperors lends a charm and interest to the history and coinage of this period such as cannot be paralleled in the annals of any other time or empire.

∴ The garrison consisted of the Shah's army and three companies of the 12th Bengal Native Infantry, forty European Artillery and sixty Sappers and Miners. The whole being under the command of Captain John Craigie. On the 19th May a number of troops was sent to relieve the garrison and on the 26th, the force arrived at their destination only to find that five days before a most determined attack had been made on the place by four thousand Ghilzais. The gallant defenders, however, had held their own, beaten back the assailants, and still remained in proud possession. Notwithstanding this, they were delighted to see the force from Kandahar; for their position owing to exhausted supplies, etc., was daily becoming more precarious. On 27th May, with colours flying, they marched out of the scene of their triumph. The fort was then destroyed, and, on the 7th June the whole force arrived at Kandahar.

BOOKS ON NUMISMATICS.

A little Selection in Series.

GENERAL.

- 1 RAWLINGS, G.B. Coins and how to know them. XIX + 374 pages. 35 plates. Cloth 8vo. 3rd ed. 1910. New, post free. » 8 »

This is perhaps the best book at a popular price covering the whole field of ancient, mediaeval and modern coinages.

Some collectors of experience, however, still recommend the following which was the standard work a generation ago :

- 2 HUMPHREYS, H.N. The Coin Collector's Manual. A Guide to the Numismatic student in the formation of a Cabinet of Coins : comprising an historical and critical account of the origin and progress of coinage from the earliest period to the fall of the Roman Empire ; with some account of the coinages of modern Europe and more especially of Great Britain, with above 150 illustrations on wood and steel. 726 pages. 2 vols. Cloth 8vo. 1853. Binding worn. » 7 »
 3 — 1876. Binding better preserved. » 8 »

To the above should certainly be added :—

- 4 MACDONALD, G. The Evolution of Coinage. VIII + 148 pages, 7 plates and frontispiece. Small 4to, cloth 1916. New, post free. » 3 »

Dr. Macdonald surveys the whole history of coinage and one wonders how so much material can have been gathered into one slender volume.

For a fascinating account of the meaning of the types to be found on coins Dr. Macdonald's Rhind Lectures must be read. It discusses also Prof. Sir William Ridgeway's theory in The Origin of Metallic Currency (now out of print and almost unobtainable) :

- 5 MACDONALD, G. Coin Types, their origin and development. 275 pages. 10 plates. Cloth 8vo. 1905. New, post free. » 10 6

A valuable little book containing ten papers by the Authors of the British Museum Official Catalogues on : The Study of Coins ; Greek Coins ; Roman Coins ; The Coinage of Western Europe ; Early Oriental Coins ; Mohammadan Coins ; Coins of India ; Coins of China and Japan ; Medals :

- 86 LANE-POOLE, S. Coins and Medals. Cloth 8vo. 2nd ed. 1892. » 6 »
 86a — The Antiquaries' Library edition. 1885. Hf. leather. » 6 »

BRITISH, ANGLO-SAXON AND ENGLISH.

The best book on Ancient British coins is :

- 87 EVANS, J. Coins of the Ancient Britons. 424 pages, 26 plates. Cloth 8vo. 1864. I 5 »
 88 — With SUPPLEMENT, paged 417-599, 10 plates. Cl. 8vo. 1890. Two vols, in very fine condition (The Supplement is very scarce indeed). 4 10 »

For the general collector and student the following is far and away the best work in a single volume on English Coins (including Anglo-Saxon, Scottish and Irish) :—

- 789 GRUEBER, H.A. Handbook of the Coins of Gr. Britain and Ireland in the British Museum. 272 pages. 64 plates. Half leather 8vo. 1899. The book is unfortunately out of print but we have a few copies which we can offer, post free, each I 11 »

- 789a THORBURN, W.S. Coins of Great Britain and Ireland, including British Colonies and Dependencies. Third ed., revised and enlarged by H.A. GRUEBER. 268 pages. 40 plates 8vo. Cloth. Out of print.

THORBURN is often enquired for because it gives some guide to prices and also because it includes Colonial Coins.

- 789b — Second edition, (1888) 164 pages. 29 pl. Cl. » 10 »
 789c Earlier ed., 1884. 159 pp. 16 pl. Cl. » 7 »

For collectors of English Gold, Silver or Copper Coins, the following are the standard works :

- 790 KENYON, R.L. History of the Gold Coinage of England. 227 pages 14 plates. Hf. mor. 8vo. 1883. New, post free. I 11 »

- 791 — A second-hand copy, binding rubbed and a little loose in covers. I 1 »

- 792 HAWKINS, E. The Silver Coins of England. 3rd ed. 508 pages. 54 plates. Cr. 8vo. Hf. mor. 1887. 3 3 »

- 793 — 2nd ed. 504 pp. 54 plates. 1876. Hf. mor. Binding rubbed. I 5 »

- 794 — 1st ed. 308 pp. 47 plates. 1841. Binding broken at top. » 10 »

- 795 MONTAGU, H. Copper, Tin and Bronze Coinage of England. 150 pages. Ill. Hf. mor. 8vo. 1893.

- B1796 — 1st ed. 1895. 91 pages. Ill. A copy on fine large paper with deckled edge, bound in hf. mor (Two copies only left). » 11 »
 B1797 — 1st ed. Usual size, newly bound in hf. linen. » 8 6 » 6 »

Collectors of Copper Coins often ask for the following work ; very few copies remain .

- B1798 BATTY, D.T. Descriptive Catalogue of the Copper Coinage of Great Britain and the Colonies. 4 vols, small 4to with 4 plates. Cloth (published £4.13.6). 2 10 »

The Anglo-Saxon and Norman Coins in the British Museum have been catalogued :—

- B1799 Anglo Saxon Series. Vol. I. xciv + 282 pages. 30 plates. 1887. Out of print. Vol. II. cxxvi + 544 pages. 32 plates. Cloth 8vo. 1894. Two vols. 4 4 »

- B1800 The Norman Kings. 2 vols. Crown 8vo. Cloth. 62 plates. 1916. New. 2 2 »

- B1801 RUDING, REV. R. Annals of the Coinage of Great Britain and its Dependencies. 3rd (best) ed. 1840. 4to. 2 vols text and one vol. with 150 plates. Cloth. I 15 »

- B1802 — A copy in half calf, binding slightly worn at top, but otherwise well preserved and plates clean. 3 10 »

Apart from the information which is the special feature of RUDING, the plates illustrate gold and silver coins which are not to be found in either KENYON or HAWKINS and render the work a necessity to the serious collector. Copies were formerly catalogued at very much higher prices.

A useful little book we have just published speaks for itself :

- B1803 The Milled Silver Coinage of England from 1662 to 1925 (Detailed Catalogue with illustrations and prices). To which is added a General Price List of Coins struck in Gr. Britain and Ireland. 136 pp. Cl. 8vo. » 7 »
 Sewed. » 4 6

An exhaustive treatment of the coins of the period will be found in :

- B1804 GARSIDE, HENRY. British Imperial Copper and Bronze Coinage 1838 to 1920. 80 pp. 8vo. Sewed. » 5 »
 B1805 — Supplement 1838-1925. 24 pp. 8vo. Sewed. » 3 »

GREEK COINS.

- B1806 HEAD, BARCLAY V. Historia Numorum. A Manual of Greek Numismatics. Royal 8vo. 906 pages, 5 tables of alphabets, numerous illustrations in the text. New and enlarged edition. 1911. Buckram. New. 2 10 »

This is the only work on Greek Coins which surveys the whole field in one volume ; and whatever other books may be added for particular provinces it is the one indispensable work of reference.

Some portions of the first edition of very great interest were omitted from the second, and this fact added to the usefulness of the work in itself makes a copy of that edition well worth acquiring especially by the young collector.

- B1807 — Historia Numorum. 1st ed. 1887. Hf. mor. I » »
 B1808 — A copy with binding rubbed. » 16 »

- B1809 GARDNER, PERCY. A History of Ancient Coinage 700-300 B.C. 463 pages. 11 plates. Cloth. 8vo. 1918. New, post free. » 18 »

- B1810 — A second-hand copy. » 14 »

A treatment of Greek Coinage on the basis of the political and commercial relations of the various minting authorities, ... A most important and stimulating contribution to Greek history. The Introduction in particular contains an excellent account of the economic problems connected with Greek numismatics.

The three books named below are marvels of cheapness and highly useful and interesting as an Introduction to Greek Coins :

- B1811 HANDS, REV. A.W. Common Greek Coins. 170 pp. 1907. Sewed. » 3 6

- B1812 — Coins of Magna Graecia. 337 pp. 1909. Sewed. » 5 »

AES GRAVE

A Study of the Cast Coinages of Rome and Central Italy

BY

EDWARD A. SYDENHAM M.A.

Quarto, 145 pp., 28 plates, boards, linen back and corners.

The Aes Grave forms the first chapter of the long story of the Roman Coinage but hitherto no complete account of it has been set forth in English. The well known works of Garrucci and Haeberlin are unwieldy in size and almost prohibitive in price. The present study surveys the whole field from a thoroughly scientific point of view, contains a corpus of over 350 pieces, and is illustrated with a series of plates from recent Sale Catalogues which should meet all practical requirements. The price has been put as low as possible, for a work of this class, in the hope that it may reach all who are interested in the fascinating problems of the origins of the famous coinage of ancient Rome.

DIES FOR FALSE COINS

In the possession of the Museo Nazionale Romano are more than 1000 dies for making false coins, for the most part produced by the electrotyping process; about a hundred are however hand-engraved in steel. The various classes of coins and medals are represented in approximately the following numbers: Greek coins, 232; Roman 520; Medieval and Modern 294.

The Istituto Italiano di Numismatica, in agreement with the Direction of the Museum, has undertaken the publication of impressions from these dies, with descriptions, in a quarto volume with about 40 plates. An invitation issued some years ago for subscriptions to defray the cost of this work having met with inadequate response the publication has not proceeded. As, however, it is highly desirable, in the interest of museums and private collectors, that the forgeries from these dies should be exposed, the invitation is now renewed. Promises to subscribe at the rate of £ 1.10s. sterling or 6 dollars will be received by Dr. G. F. Hill, British Museum, London, W. C. 1, or Messrs. Spink and Son, Ltd., 17 Piccadilly, London, W. 1. Payment should not be actually made until notice is received that the work is ready for distribution.

NOTES ON THE MYTHOLOGICAL TYPES ON ROMAN REPUBLICAN COINS.

MYTH OF THE SIRENS.

The interest found in the myth of the Sirens consists not merely in the attempt to understand what it meant to the moneyer who used a Siren as his type, nor in the way in which those who used the coins in Rome regarded it; a greater interest may follow these thoughts and we may be led on to trace the origin and literary story of this myth from the days of Homer to our own time. A myth which has attracted such men as Clement of Alexandria, Dante, Shakespeare and Milton can hardly be passed by as uninteresting.

Homer is thought to be the earliest writer who preserved a reference to the product of the imagination of men who lived in the often called the childhood of the race. The myth is similar to the imaginations of children in all ages, and is the expression of the effect on the child-mind of the terrible powers of natural phenomena, especially of the storms of thunder and lightning. The Sirens are in this way akin to the Gorgons, Harpies, Chimaeras, Lamiae and Erinnyes, but differ from these in that the sounds of natural powers are thought of as pleasing music although mysteriously connected with danger. The sailors heard not only the notes of the sea birds but also the noise of the winds and waves.

On a denarius of Publius Petronius Turpilianus numbered Petronia 15 among the types described by Babelon, we see on the Obverse the head of Augustus, to right, with the legend CAESAR AVGVS TVS, and on the Reverse a Siren standing to left, holding a double flute, with the legend P. PETRON. TVRPILIAN. III VIR. The figure is winged, the feet appear like the talons of a bird, and behind the lower part of the body appear the tail-feathers of a bird. The Petronia gens belonged to the Sabine country, more likely to be influenced by Southern myths than northern. The flutes are symbols of the sweet music associated with the myth. It has been suggested that there may have been some reference to the siren voice of the dramatist Turpilius who perhaps belonged to the moneyer's family; he is said to have died in 101 B.C. This coin was struck the year after the death of Virgil, the great singer of the Romans who was associated in a similar way with a Siren and in the inscription on his tomb in Naples, we read

"Mantua me genuit; Calabri rapuere; tenet nunc Parthenope: cecini pascua, rura, duces".

The tomb of the Siren Parthenope at Naples is mentioned by Strabo (Bk. V, p. 246).

There is another denarius which Lenormant and Babelon have associated with this myth, that numbered 18 in Babelon's list of the coins of L. Valerius and N° 4105 B.M.C. The obv. bears a diademed head of Apollo, to right, a star above, and over all a crown of laurel, behind the head a small hammer or asisculus, and the legend ASISCVLVS. The Rev. type is composed of a bird like an eagle in form with a human head wearing a helmet and two straight rods which on some specimens are spear tipped. Both Lenormant and Babelon regard the bird as a Siren, the former writer suggests that the eagle form was chosen because there is an eagle which bore the name of the moneyer's family "Valeria", and refers to the words of Pliny (H.N., X, 13). "This the black eagle, or Valeria, alone of eagles rears its young, the rest drive them out; it alone is without a cry or screaming, it dwells on the mountains" Lenormant suggests that both the words Roma and Valeria mean strength as does the Greek ἰσχυρ. On page 535, Vol. I of the B.M.C. the Reverse is described as "Owl with helmeted human head (Minerva) walking to right and carrying spear and shield, all within laurel wreath".

The birds on the types, however, are very unlike owls and very like eagles but that may be owing to the lack of skill in the engraver; similar designs are seen on gems B.M.C., p. 209, nos. 2087-8.

The two spears, or javelins, and the helmets were regarded by Lenormant as symbols of the hardy active military spirit of these eagles. Can it be that they were regarded as emblematic of J. Caesar's character? Another connection with the name Valeria is suggested by Lenormant who regards the eagle as that which snatched the sword from the hand of Valeria Luperca and threw it onto the heifer. Confer the Rev. Num., t. V, 1840.

Babelon strangely regarded the spears as flutes, perhaps considering such musical creatures would have used such instruments. If the Obverse type has any reference to that on the Reverse we should expect that the god of music who presided over the feast of the gods at the end of Iliad Bk I and was the inventor of the flute according to Callimachus, would be a suitable subject for a coin bearing the Siren.

That the Siren was in very early times represented in bird form we see on the hydria found at Cære, now in the Louvre at Paris, on which under the bird is the inscription EIMI ZIPEN, written retrograde.

Homer however does not mention wings in the Odyssey.

This bird form was in ancient times and in many lands associated with appearances of the souls of the departed and with funereal laments; it can be traced in Brittany, Alsace, Finland and America. Confer the plaintive cry of the sea gull in the play of Euripides, Helen 168 seq. "Woe, woe! ye Sirens, winged youthful virgins" and "the warmth of the sun shone on the shore and the plaintive cry". As an emblem of the departed soul it is seen on the Lycian monument in the British Museum if that is rightly called a Siren. On a Greek vase in the Ashmolean Museum in Oxford such figures of birds with human heads are seen dating from about 650 B.C.

In a similar way Harpies were represented in funereal carving, as on the monument of Xanthos in the British Museum.

The representations of Harpies also are very like those of the Sirens, each having the body of a bird with a woman's head.

But sometimes the Harpies are represented with four wings as on a coin of Crete, or perhaps of Harpagia, in Mysia, as on a vase of Vulci where the Harpy holds in each hand a sailor by the wrist. However, on a vase of Aegina Harpies are represented as women running swiftly. They differ from the Sirens in that they represent the sudden and violent gusts of wind which snatch away men to destruction, instead of the guileful pleasure with which Sirens draw others to their death.

Like the Sirens the harpies had names attributed to them as the "quickly flying ones", the "feet of the tempest", those with "white feet" or the "sombre ones".

In each case the forms with wings may have been derived from the East.

For references to the Harpies confer Virgil Aen., III, 216, 269 Tzet. ad Lycophron 653.

The earliest and most famous description of these enchanters of men is that given in Homer's Odyssey (Book XII, 36 seq.).

"The lady Circe spake to me saying: even so, now all these things have an end, do thou then hearken even as I tell thee, and the god himself shall bring it back to thy mind. To the Sirens first shalt thou come, who bewitch all men, whosoever shall come to them. Whoso draws nigh them unwittingly and hears the sound of the Siren's voice, never doth he see wife or babes stand by him on his return, nor have they joy at his coming; but the Sirens enchant him with their clear song sitting in the meadow, and about is a great heap of bones of men, corrupt in death, and round the bones the skin is wasting. But do thou drive thy ship past, and knead honey-sweet wax, and anoint therewith the ears of thy company, lest any of the rest hear the song: but if thou thyself art minded to hear, let them bind thee in the swift ship hand and foot upright in the mast-stead, and from the mast let rope ends be tied that with delight thou mayst hear the voice of the Sirens and thou shalt beseech thy company and bid them to loose thee, the let them bind thee with yet more bonds."

The Song of the Sirens is given by Homer in line 184. "Hither come hither, renowned Odysseus, great glory of the Achaeans, her stay thy barque, that thou mayst listen to the voice of us twain for none hath ever driven by this way till he has heard from our lips the voice sweet as the honey comb and hath had joy thereof and gone away the wiser (πλεῖονα εἰδώς). "The same old story of "the tree to be desired to make one wise".

Lycophron in lines 712-730 relates their names and their fates

"from lofty watch rock they shall leap to death
And with their wings dive deep in Tuscan waves
One cast up by the sea Phaleru'burg
And Glanis' stream which bathe the land shall take
The dwellers there shall build the maidens' tomb
And with libations and slain kine each year
Honour the goddess, winged Parthenope
Upon Poseidon's foreland jutting out
Leucosia is thrown and long shall rest on Reef that bears her name where raging Is
And neighbouring Laris belch their waters forth Unto Tereina shall Ligeia drift.
Spewing the sea surge. Her some sailing folk Shall bury in the shingle on the beach
Close to the eddies of Ocinarus,
The mighty bull horned stream shall wash her grave
His waters cleansing where the bird-child rests (ἑρμιόπαιδες).

These Sirens names signify Virgin taced, clear shrill voiced, and the bright or fair one.

But three other names are given to the Sirens.

Viz., Peisinoe, Aglaope and Thelxiepeia.

The second name is also spelt Aglaopheme.

These names also are descriptive of the characters of the Sirens viz., the persuader, the one of splendid fame, and the charmer.

The name Σαίρη itself refers to the σεραι or cords with which they entangle their hearers.

Apollonius of Rhodes introduced the Sirens into his poem of the Argonauts (IV, 889). "And soon they saw the fair flower island where the clear voiced Sirens, daughters of Achelous, wreathe havoc, bewitching with sweet songs, whoever cast his mooring near by. These (Sirens) fair Terpsichore, united to Achelous, bore one of the Muses she: and once they attended the famed daughter of Demeter, while still unwed, singing all together. Then in one part they were like birds to look at, in another like maidens as ever lying in wait in their vantage point with fair anchorage the en deprived many of a sweet return home, making them pine th wasting; and for these too (the Argonauts) they sent forth ceaselessly a delicate voice from their mouths. And they were even w about to cast the moorings from the ship on the Thracian ore, Orpheus stringing his Thracian harp in his hands, had not anded the rapid melody of quick moving song that their ears ght ring with the twanging of his hurried movement, and his e overcame the maidens' voice. The Zephyr, together with the nding wave pressing on from the stern carried on the ship, and ey uttered a confused shout. But even so the goodly sion of Telon, one of his companions starting forth, leaped into the sea from the lished bench even Butes, kindled in heart by the shrill voice of e Sirens. And he swam through the purple waves that he might in the shore : unhappy one, and they quickly there took away s return. But pitying him Cypris, the goddess that rules over yx, snatched him up while still in the surge, and meeting him in r graciousness, saved him to dwell in the steep Lilybaeum."

Ovid (Met. V, 552) thus refers to the Sirens :

"Whence have ye, O ye daughters of Achelous, feathers and the et of birds, seeing ye have the faces of virgins? Whether because en Proserpine was gathering spring flowers, you Sirens were ict with the number of her attendants? Whom, after, you ight for in vain all the world over, immediately, that the waters ight perceive your concern for her, you wished to be able to rest on the support of wings over the waves; and you found the gods opitious, and saw your limbs grow yellow with sudden feathers. However, that the singing faculty you had for soothing the rs, and the fine quality of your mouth should not destroy the e of a tongue, virgins faces, and the human voice still remained ith you." Ovid drew his ideas from the Argonautica of Apollonius odius (IV, 889 seq.). From Strabo, VI, the Sirens received wings order to be able to search for Persephone, but later were deprived them on being defeated in a musical contest by the Muses. There first an imitation of the story in the Odyssey, then unreasonably ild imagination.

Virgil refers to the Sirens in the fifth Book of his Aeneid (864) lling how Aeneas drew near the rocks of the Sirens white with e bones of many men; and Servius in his commentary quoting yginus, p. 141, called the Sirens daughters of the Muse Melpo ene and of the river Achelous. Wandering after the stolen Prop rine they came to the land of Apollo where by the will of irce, because they did not bear aid to Proserpine, they were ade winged creatures. For them the decree was made that as long they lived, and as long as they kept singing no one hearing ould pass by.

For by her subtilty they should live as rocks, into which they ere changed, and cast themselves into the sea; from which the ace was known as that of the Sirens, which is between Sicily and aly, see Apoll., I, 1 a 4, Silius Italicus refers to this in I, 12.

"Quanti procul moles scopulis ad sidera tendit."

Other references to the Sirens are found in the following : — l. XIV, 473. Ovid R. Am. 789. Claud. Rapt. Pros. III, 204. etr. Sat. 5. Plin. 3, 5, 9. Hor. Sat. II, 3, 14. Suet. Gr. 11. ven. XIV, 18. Pliny XI, 16, 16.

The Sirens were made symbols of the harmony of nature by lato in his Republic (X, 617). "The spindle (of the planets' otions) turns on the knees of necessity, and on the upper surface each circle is a Siren, who goes round with them hymning a ngle sound or note. The eight together form one harmony."

The word "Siren" was used in a similar symbolic way by those ho called Menander "the Siren of the theatre" (c. I, 6083)."

Plato was the first to use the word Siren metaphorically; but later e was followed by Philo and the Greek Fathers of the Church and ore modern writers.

The Alexandrian translators of the Hebrew Scriptures translated ebrew words meaning "monsters" by the word "Siren", as in ob. XXX, 29, "I am become a brother of Sirens. Isaiah (XIII, 22) ys of Babylon "Sirens shall dwell there, and of Idumaea he ys the same thing (XXXIV, 13).

Philo after writing of the harmony of Nature as "the music of e Spheres", wrote "and if the song of the Sirens as Homer tells s draws the hearers so forcibly that they forget all else, how much ore should the divine harmony draw us."

In Clement of Alexandria's "Exhortation to the heathen" (cap. XII), there is a fine passage in which he quotes several lines of the Odyssey, and treats the Siren's song as an emblem of earthly pleasure, and the resolution of Odysseus as an example to Christian men.

Methodius, bishop of Patera in Lycia who was martyred in 312 A.D., began his treatise concerning Freewill in a very similar manner with the story of Odysseus and the Sirens, and contrasting the charm of their singing with that of the Hebrew Prophets.

Suidas bears witness that in the early part of the middle ages the myth was not forgotten. Under the word Σειρήνες he says "that is the faculty of the mind for harmony and music", and he quotes an epigram: "His song was sweeter than that of the Syrens".

Dante in Paradiso XII, 8, referred to Plato's idea of the Siren's song as the music of the spheres, in Purgatorio (XIX, 19) he describes the Siren who tempted Ulysses, and in Purg. XXXI Dante refers to the Sirens as signifying the temptations of this world.

Shakespeare in the Comedy of Errors makes Antipholus address his love thus: "Sing Siren, and I will dote"... and adds "he gains by death that hath such means to die".

In the Merchant of Venice (V, 1) he refers to the music of the spheres, substituting "Angel" for Siren. Milton in his poem "Arcades" refers to the same idea: "then listen I to the Celestial Siren's harmony". Again in his Miscellaneous Poems "Blest pair of Sirens pledges of Heaven's joy, sphere-born harmonies".

In the poem entitled "the Mermaid" by John Leyden, a friend and compatriot of Sir Walter Scott, we find the Mermaid described in words which picture to our minds a Siren. It is an illustration of the wide influence of the myth that our sailors still sing of the maids of the sea.

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTICES OF MEDALLISTS

Coin, Gem, and Seal Engravers, Ancient and Modern, with References to their Works.

Most of the previous articles have been revised and republished in the "Biographical Dictionary of Medallists". The references to that work in these supplementary articles will be indicated by the letters "B.D.M.", together with the number of the volume and its page.

ACHLEITNER (Germ.). This signature occurs on a medal of the "Befreiungshalle bei Kehlheim", Bavaria, 1863.

ADAMS, HERBERT (Amer.). Contemporary Sculptor; exhibited at the American Numismatic Society, New York, 1923, several medallic productions: Joseph H. Choate, 1832-1917, struck medal; — Mr. D. W. K., cast plaque, bronze; — Mrs. Billings, galvano bronzed plaque; — In memoriam, cast bronze, plaque; — New York Chapter American Institute of Architects, galvano bronzed, model for medal; — Peggy Gantt, galvano bronzed plaque; — Evan, Arnold, and William Fraser Campbell, cast bronze plaque.

AHLBORN, LEA (B.D.M., Vol. I, p. 30; VII, p. 8). The date of this artist's death is 13. November 1897.

AITKEN, ROBERT I. (B.D.M., Vol. VII, p. 9). Exhibited at the American Numismatic Society, New York, 1923, the following productions: Elizabeth N. Watrous Award, N. A. D., struck medal, bronze; — Design for Verdun Medal; — Design for Marksman Medal; — Missouri Centennial Half-Dollar 1821-1891 Design; — Visit of Marshal Foch to the United States, 1921, struck medal; — Same, large Model, plaster; — U. S. Silver Dollar design — SEE NO EVIL; SPEAK NO EVIL; HEAR NO EVIL; Cast medallion, lead.

ALAJOS, RIGLE (Hung.). Engraver of a Badge of the 13th Royal Hungarian Honved Infantry Regiment Pozsony (Pressburg); 54 × 30 mill.

ALLEN, CHARLES J. (B.D.M., Vol. I, 1904, p. 41; VII, p. 12). Exhibited at the Royal Academy, 1918: Sir William Mitchell

Banks, Junior Anatomy Medal for Liverpool University; — Gathering Flowers, Relief.

ALLMAN (Brit.). A London Publisher of medals for prizes for school children.

ALLOY, LEONCE (B.D.M., VII, p. 13). Salon 1920 : Plaque aux Morts pour la Patrie.

ALONZO, DOMINIQUE (Span.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, residing in Paris (1920). Exhibited at the Salon des Artistes français, 1920 : Gloire et Patrie; — Virgin; — Plaque and Medallion.

APELL, FRANZ (B.D.M., Vol. I, p. 63; VII, p. 23). Signed also a medal on the Erection of a statue to Luther at Erfurt, 1889.

ARNAUD, ALOYSIO (B.D.M., Vol. I, p. 78; VII, p. 26). Has signed a medal, Piazza del Plebiscito, 1849, in conjunction with T. Arnaud (inv.), A. Cariello and Domenico Ciccarelli; and another, dated Caserta, 1846, with T. Arnaud (dir.) and Ciccarelli.

ARNAUD, T. (Ital.). Engraver of Naples; has signed two medals (invenit and direxit), in conjunction with Aloysio Arnaud.

ARKANZAS (Austr.). Engraver's signature on Badges of the Papp Dandar Brigade; 49×31 mill.; — 10th Honved Infantry Regiment; $45 \times 21,5$ mill.; — 62nd Honved Infantry Regiment, 1914-1917, etc.

ARMOUR, Miss HAZEL RUTHVEN (Brit.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist; residing in Edinburgh (1920). Has exhibited at the Paris Salon, 1920 : Property of the Scottish Women's Hospitals; medal.

ASTESANO, ORAZIO (B.D.M., Vol. I, p. 84). This Engraver is not the author of the medals of Urban VIII, but ALESSANDRO ASTESANO, who signed a medal of this Pope, of Civita Vecchia, 1632.

ATKINS, ALBERT H. (Amer.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist; exhibited at the American Numismatic Society, New York, 1923, a struck medal, bronze, Milwaukee Art Institute Award, and a cast plaque, Portrait Relief, 1910, mounted on wood.

AUMONT-STRENG, M^{me} JEANNE (French). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, residing in Paris (1920). Exhibited at the Paris Salon, 1920 : A frame containing Medals and Plaquettes : La Croix de guerre (belongs to the Mint); — Paix et Victoire : Portraits of Lieut. M. Michau, L. Strenz, D. and J. Ullren.

B

BACHMANN, R. (B.D.M., Vol. VII, p. 37). Further works : General von Boroëvic; iron, 50 mill.; — Grand Admiral Anton Haus; iron, 50 mill.; — General v. Pflanzer-Baltin, 1915; iron, 49 mill.; — Enver Pacha; iron, 49 mill., etc.

BALZAR, PIETRO (B.D.M., Vol. I, p. 120). Die-sinker in Rome. A medal of the "Real Albergo dei Poveri" of Palermo, dated 1772 and signed PETRUS BALZAR ROMANUS was designed by Melchior di Bella of Palermo and engraved by Giuseppe Garofalo of Rome (Mortellaro, 23 med. Borbon., 1899).

BARGAS ARMAND (B.D.M., I, p. 124; VII, p. 47). Additional medals. Portrait-pendant of King Albert I; — Another of Queen Elizabeth; — Journée du Poilu, 25-26 Décembre 1915 (two varieties).

BARTLETT, MADELEINE A. (B.D.M., Vol. VII, p. 52). Exhibited at the American Numismatic Society, New York, 1923, a cast medallion, bronze, uniface : Mary Loder, 1921.

BATES, A. E. (Brit.). Engraver of Counters, Leeds. By him is a brass counter of Petty and Hudson, Keighley, in Mr. Lionel L. Fletcher's Collection.

BAUDICHON, RENÉ (B.D.M., Vol. VII, p. 55). Salon 1920 : Idylle bretonne, medal; — Pochades et Croquis, medals.

BAZOR, LUCIEN GEORGES (B.D.M., Vol. VII, p. 58). Salon 1920 : Portrait du sculpteur D, plaque.

BEACH, CHESTER (B.D.M., Vol. VII, p. 58). Exhibited at the American Numismatic Society, New York, 1923, the following medallic works : — Children's year (Children's Bureau, U.S. Department of Labour), struck medal, bronze; — Large model of same, galvano bronzed; — School Art League, St. Gaudens Medal for Draughtsmanship, 1917; struck medal, bronze, uniface; — Same, large model, galvano bronzed; — Peace of Versailles, struck medal; etc.

BELLAGAMBA Y ROSSI (B.D.M., Vol. VII, p. 65). By him are also Medals of the Agricultural Show at Las Rosas (Argentina), 1900 and 1901; — Sociedad Rural Santa Fe; — Others, of Rosario de Santa Fé, 1905, 1907 and 1908.

BERAN, H. (Austr.). Contemporary Engraver, whose signature occurs on a Badge of the 11th Army of Tyrol; 37×34 mill.

BÉRAN, LADOS (B.D.M., Vol. VII, p. 71). Additional medals : — Oval medallion of the 1st Hungarian Honved Regiment, with bust of Queen Zita; 47×34 mill.; — 313th Honved Infantry Regiment, 1917; 47×37 mill.

BERGAMASCHI, J. (Ital.). Has signed a medal, Los edificios escolares, La Plata, 1890, which he engraved for the Die-sinkers Podesta y Co, Buenos Ayres (q.v., B.D.M., Vol. IV, p. 627).

BERGE, EDWARD (Amer.). Contemporary Sculptor. Exhibited at the American Numismatic Society, 1923, the following medallic productions : Jack Lambdin, plaque, galvano gilt; — William B. Graves, cast medallion, bronze gilt, mounted on wood; — Helene, plaque; — Hochschild, Kohn & Co., Silver Anniversary, 1922, struck medal, bronze; — Carolyn Daniels, plaque, galvano gilt, mounted on wood.

BERTAULT, CHARLES (B.D.M., Vol. VII, p. 76). Salon 1920 : Plaque Sainte Famille, after Botticelli; — Medal of Georges Clemenceau, Président du Conseil, Ministre de la Guerre; — Jeton G. Clemenceau.

BERTLÉ, H. (Austr.). Contemporary Medallist, whose signature occurs on a Military Badge of rectangular form of the Rayon "Süd-Tirol" (Valsugana, Adamello, etc.); 35×24 mill.

BEYRER, ERNEST (B.D.M., Vol. VII, p. 81). I have also seen by him a fine octagonal plaque commemorating the Defence of the Uzsok Pass by General Szurmayer; 83×53 mill.

BIJA (Belg.). Die-sinker and Engraver, whose signature occurs on numerous medalets and insignia, struck during the War, 1914-1918. Cf. Lefebure, La frappe en Belgique occupée.

BINCK, JAKOB (B.D.M., Vol. I, 1904, p. 188; VII, p. 82). Vide Dr Habich, Die deutschen Medailleure des XVI. Jahrhunderts. München, 1916. Domanig mentions among the works of Hans Reinhart a large medal of Christian III. of Denmark. This medal is not to be separated from two others of Frederick I (Danske M., Pl. XI, 1) and Christian III. (Pl. XIII, 4), the first of which Bolzenthal already brought into connection with Binck. From line-engravings, executed by Binck of these two rulers, in the Netherlands, the authorship of the medal can certainly be given to the same artist. Dr Habich, in Deutsche Medailleure, p. 177 reproduces Binck's copper plate portrait of Christian IV., and mentions the title portrait of the Copenhagen Bible of 1550, which corresponds entirely with the medal of 1559.

Erman only notices a few struck pieces, and two medallions, portraits of Albrecht of Prussia and his consort on the covers of the Königsberg silver bindings, which originate from Binck although they have suffered under the tools of the silversmiths.

The medals (Schaupfennige) of Frederick I. of Denmark and Duke Albrecht, mentioned in the correspondence (1544) of Duchess Dorothea of Prussia, sister of King Christian I. are both extant (illustrated), as also a struck medal of Dorothea, 1547 (illustrated).

all three uniform in style with the struck piece of Christian III., 1541 (illustrated); R. VNICA SPES etc.

Duke Albrecht of Prussia.

King Frederick I. of Denmark.

Duchess Dorothea of Prussia.

Christian III. of Denmark.

Amongst Binck's struck medals are the four illustrated above. Of Christian III., besides that of 1541 there are two others, dated 1545 and 1550. A struck medal of Albert II. Frederick, 1571 (Menadier 567) is a close imitation of the above.

The cast medals of Jakob Binck comprise: 1530. Frederick I. of Denmark; — 1532. Sigismund of Poland; — 1541. Christian III.; — 1559. The same; — Undated. Albrecht of Prussia; two varieties; — (1555?). Albrecht and his second wife, Anna Maria; on a book cover.

Dated 1544 is a wood model of Georg Schewecke, in the Danzig Museum. There is also a silver reproduction of this medal, with later reverse, in the same collection.

Binck's influence on later artists is very remarkable.

Erman suggests with reason a certain similarity with the medals of Duke Albrecht in a medal of Joachim II. of Brandenburg (illustrated) and that of his consort, Hedwig. By the same hand are no doubt also:

Joachim II. of Brandenburg.

1537. Joachim II. of Brandenburg. Dresden.
1537. John IV. of Anhalt. Dessau.
1537. Duke Henry of Mecklenburg. Dresden. (Illustrated.)

Duke Henry of Mecklenburg.

(1528). Albrecht Dürer. ALBERTVS DVRER OBDOR 1528. Dresden. (Illustrated.)

Albrecht Dürer.

With the medal of Albrecht Dürer are connected the following: 1537. Henry VIII. of England. Dresden. (Illustrated.)

Henry VIII. of England.

1548. George III. of Anhalt. Vienna. Berlin.
1532. Henry the Elder, of Brunswick, † 1514. Dresden. (Illustrated.)

Henry the Elder of Brunswick.

1537. Johann Heiler and Margarethe Heiler (Löbbecke 366). A Nuremberg artist of 1525 is the author of a number of medals, which remind one very much of Jakob Binck and may belong to his youthful works:

Nuremberg productions of the same style are:
(1524). Georg Römer. Berlin. (Illustrated.) This small medal enables one to attribute with more certainty the following medal of the same personage:

Georg Römer.

1524. George Reumer (Römer). Berlin. (Illustrated.)

Of Römer's wife Magdalena there is a Portrait-medal of 1525 on her marriage, which Val. Maler reedited at a later date with a new inscription and different Reverse type.

One might connect Binck also with the medals of Stabius and Georg Römer, 1524.

THE COINAGE OF SAINT-LÔ

(1351-1693).

By Dr BAILHACHE

President of the Société française de Numismatique.

A second period of the numismatic history of Louis XI commences on 2. November 1475. On that day, an Ordinance, dated from the Abbey of Notre-Dame de la Victoire-les-Senlis, suppressed the écu d'or à la couronne and the blanc aux couronnelles, and substituted for them the écu d'or au soleil (Hoffmann, 1) and the blanc au soleil (Hoffmann, 19) with their respective subdivisions. The standard of the new gold and silver species was the same as of those they took the place of, but the weight and rate were different, as well as the types. As to the liard and black money, no alteration was made in the type, but the standard was depreciated (doubles and deniers tournois) or the rate to the mark increased (liards)¹. All these currencies were struck until the end of the reign.

Guillaume Basire continued to direct the Saint-Lô mint during the whole of this second period; the mint-mastership was renewed to him from year to year. According to his lease of 1478 he was to coin écus and demi-écus, gros de Roi, grands and petits blancs au soleil, and deniers tournois².

The écu au soleil of Louis XI minted at Saint-Lô is even more common than his écu à la couronne, but his demi-écu has not yet been found. The blanc au soleil is every day met with, whereas the demi-blanc au soleil is uncommon. The denier tournois is unknown, we believe, and should a specimen turn up it would be difficult to tell whether it belongs to the second period or the previous one. These deniers differ only in the standard which is 1 d. 8 gr. A.R. for the former and 1 d. A.R. for the later; an inappreciable difference to the naked eye, and even under analysis, as the standard of the black money was never strictly kept; otherwise, both are of the same type, and the same rate of 20 sols, that is 240 pieces to the Mark, and same reverse legend: TVRONVS CIVIS FRANCORVM.

In the lease of Guillaume Basire of 1478, there is no question of liards nor doubles tournois, but there is no reason why he should not have minted some in the course of the following years. In any case, for similar reasons as those just given in connection with the denier tournois, the liard struck after 1476 cannot be distinguished from the preceding. The standard of both coins is 3d. A.R. the type and legends are similar, and the only difference is in the rate which was raised after 1476 from 16 to 18 sols, that is from 192 to 216 pieces to the Mark. But as neither standard nor rate were strictly observed, one cannot classify these small currencies by the weight.

On the contrary, if Guillaume Basire has struck a double tournois after 15. May 1476, this double could be easily recognized. Comte de Castellane has proved that from that date the reverse legend was changed on the double tournois; instead of the former indication of value, DVPLEX TVRONVS FRANCIE, the pious invocation, SIT NOMEN DNI BENEDICTUM³ was used, as on the white money and liards. Such being the case a simple reading of the coin fixes its classification.

We now turn to the gros d'argent, usually called gros de roi (Hoffmann, 12), which Saint-Lô issued also, and which cannot be called rare. We have two specimens before us, differing very much in style. The first is, except for the name, the exact copy of the gros de roi of Charles VII; the larger crown on the obverse, the five point mullets between the words, the form of the letters, all are similar. It is therefore logical, if not certain, to give this piece to the beginning of the reign and to ascribe it to Jean Basire.

On the other gros, the large crown is of a new design, the mullets resemble six pointed stars, and the epigraphy is more modern in appearance; the I's especially have the central swelling which we find on the blanc au soleil. These are our reasons for giving this second gros to Guillaume Basire, whose lease of 1478 enjoined him to mint this denomination.

Finally, another coin is known for Saint-Lô, and for that mint alone, a coin of great rarity which is not mentioned in any document: the demi-gros de Roi (Hoffmann, 14). The French cabinet possesses a superb specimen of this. With the exception of the dimension and weight, this demi-gros is absolutely similar to our second gros; the identity in style is striking. We therefore ascribe it also to Guillaume Basire, but we are unable to add any further information.

The difference in style, so notable on our two gros de Roi, may be observed also on the blancs à la couronne of Saint-Lô. M. Dieudonné has noted that there are two very distinct varieties; on the one, the obverse legend reads FRANCOR REX, and on the other, FRANCOV REX; the first would be struck from dies engraved at Saint-Lô the second from dies sent from Paris².

It is indeed well established that Saint-Lô minted from dies of diverse provenance. A document, dated 6 July 1467, informs us that the die-cutter of Saint-Lô being ill and unable to fill his office, Guillaume le May, die-cutter at the Rouen Mint, was ordered to engrave dies for écus d'or with the Saint-Lô mint-mark; and under the mastership of Guillaume Basire, mention is made, on 12. June 1478, of the sending to the wardens of Saint-Lô, of dies for the écus au soleil, and these dies were evidently sent from Paris. But to discriminate from which dies the coins we possess were struck would not seem to be easy. However, if we examine the two blancs mentioned by M. Dieudonné it strikes one that the coin with the legend FRANCOV REX is of a better style than the other. For this reason, we may ascribe the dies to an experienced engraver and consequently to an engraver of the Paris Mint³; this opinion although probable, is however not certain.

One should note also that the blanc with the legend FRANCHOR REX comes near, in style and epigraphy, to the blanc of the issue of 1455-56 of Charles VII. The π of FRANCHOR is not barred and the H has the same archaic form. It is probable that this blanc dates from the early years of the reign, and it may have been struck from dies engraved by the die-cutter of Saint-Lô.

VIII

CHARLES VIII.

Louis XI died on 30 August 1483 in the castle of Plessis-lès-Tours. On 11. September, Royal letters, given at Amboise, gave instructions to continue the coining with the alteration only of the name.

1. The depreciation of the double and denier tournois (second issue) date from 15 September 1476.

2. The text states: " Marc d'œuvre de tout noir de 1d. de loy argent le Roy et de 20s. de poids au marc de Paris... They are the characteristics of the deniers tournois of the second issue (Saulcy, Documents, t. III, p. 287).

1. Comte de Castellane, P.-V. de la Société française de Numismatique, 1901, p. xxxviii and xxxix.

2. Ad. Dieudonné, Manuel de Numismatique française, p. 67.

3. Before 4 May 1469 the Paris die-cutter was Pierre de Bruyères; at that date he was succeeded by Nicolas de Russanges.

Saulcy reports that on 17 October 1483 "fut baillé à Thomas, archand, demeurant à Saint-Lô, deux pilles à escuz au soleil et pilles à grans blancs, pour porter on le monn^e dud lieu de Saint-Lô, pour le fait du monnoyage de lad. monnoye".

Here are therefore two denominations, the écu au soleil (Hoffmann, 17) and the grand blanc au soleil (Hoffmann, 17) which were certainly issued by the privy master, Guillaume Basire, whose lease had been renewed for a year in 1483, as it was again in the following year, and certainly also in 1485; although we have no written mention of it. Consequently, it is possible that he may have minted the grand blanc au soleil, with the secret dot under the 19th letter, as noted in Hoffmann; but though possible it is by no means certain, as the first coins of Charles VIII struck at Saint-Lô do not bear any master's differential mark. It is therefore permissible to ascribe them indifferently to Guillaume Basire or his successor, besides the two above denominations, must have also coined liards (Hoffmann, 40) and deniers tournois (Hoffmann, 30). On the other hand, we do not think that any demi-écus or petits blancs au soleil of Charles VIII with dot on 19th letters have been noted.

Towards the end of 1486, Guillaume Basire left the mint of Saint-Lô to replace his brother Jean Basire as Mint-master at Tours¹, and it would appear as if the Cotentin mint remained some months without an incumbent. It is in fact not before 1487, at an unknown date², that a new master was appointed, who however, is none other than Jean Basire again³. After an interval of seventeen years he returned to his county to fill the post with which he had started his career in 1449, some forty years earlier. Hélie Karuel, burgher of Karenten⁴, his brother (?), stood bail for him in 2,000 livres.

Jean Basire had been appointed for one year but we are without any information about this first year of his mastership.

In the course of the year 1488 the coinage underwent notable changes. The écu d'or au soleil was preserved, but on 24 April 1488 the blanc au soleil was superseded by the blanc à la couronne, which had been abandoned since 1475. This new blanc (Hoffmann, 14), identical with that of the second issue of Louis XI, was of 12 gr. A.R. and 86 to the Mark; the petit blanc (Hoffmann, 14) is equipollent⁵.

In the following July, the coining of doubles tournois was prohibited in all the Mints "because too many had been minted", and the rate of the denier tournois was depreciated from 240 to 2 to the Mark.

In October the liard was in its turn depreciated⁶, and further, on 11 November 1488, two new denominations were created, by royal letters, given at Étampes: the grand and petit blanc with the crowned K, so-called Karolus, legally exchangeable for 10 and 5 deniers tournois respectively. (The grand blanc Karolus, or dizain, was of 4d. A.R. and 92½ to the Mark, and the petit Karolus equipollent.)

It may appear strange that Jean Basire did not coin grands nor petits blancs à la couronne. These coins are not mentioned amongst those which his lease of 1489 enjoined him to mint, and neither in the lists of coining-irons which were sent to him from Paris.

¹ Jean Basire was still in office at Tours on 24 October 1486. On the following 19 December Guillaume Basire, qualified by documents as privy-master of the Mint of Tours, was choosing a differential mark for the species he was to mint there.

² In 1487 Easter fell on 15 April.

⁴ In an unpublished document, where it is stated that Guillaume Basire had a son named Jehan, comes to support the last hypothesis (A.N. 21^b 551—4 May 1486).

⁵ On the other hand, if we give the age of 25 to Jean Basire in 1449 — and the Mint-masters were sometimes appointed very young — he would only only be 14 in 1487.

⁶ The place in question is Carentan, chief-town of a canton in the district of Saint-Lô.

⁷ The blanc à la couronne of Charles VIII was issued for 12d. whereas that of Louis XI had only an exchange value of 11.

The lease of 1489, agreed on for a year, indicates five denominations to be minted at Saint-Lô: écus and demi-écus d'or, grands and petits blancs au K couronné (Hoffmann, 19 and 21), and liards. The mintage of Karolus and liards, says Saulcy, was an extremely important one at Saint-Lô; the Paris die-cutter, Nicolas de Rusesanges, supplied on several occasions and in great numbers coining-irons for these two denominations¹.

Jean Basire's lease was renewed in his favour in 1491 first for a year; then letters patent of that same year extended the duration of the lease to six years, whilst his bail was raised to 4,000 livres.

But he remained in office barely three years, as on the date of 29 April 1494 we find a new Master in his place.

A document dated 14 February 1494 (n. st.) supplies us with a precious piece of information. On that day coining irons for écus were sent from Paris to the wardens of the Saint-Lô mint "esquelz fers a pour contre-seing du maistre une barre à la fin des lettres". This is the first time, since the reconquest of Saint-Lô from the English, or perhaps since Charles VII, that a privy master of Saint-Lô is in possession of a personal mark, whereas the fact is noted, from the time of Louis XI, in numerous other mints, such as Angers, Limoges, Toulouse, etc.

It is probable that Jean Basire used his personal mark from 1493, as coins bearing it are in no way rare. Besides the écu au soleil, we know, with a bar at the end of the legends, grands and petits blancs au K couronné and liards, and the denier tournois is engraved in Hoffmann (pl. XXXIX, no 30).

On 29 April 1494 "Richard Basire m^e p^{er} de la monn^e de SaintLô, a prins pour nouvelle différence es deniers d'or une petite fleur à 5 pampes à la fin des lettres de la couronne". This text informs us at the same time of the name of Jean Basire's successor and of the special mark which he adopted.

Richard Basire was a son of the former Mint-master of Saint-Lô, Guillaume Basire, who at this date was still in charge of the Tours Mint. He was probably appointed for one year at first; then, in 1495, letters patent entrusted him with the office for a term of five years.

A statement of the contents of his trial boxes during the first four years of Charles VIII's reign is preserved, and we know from this that he coined but four denominations: écus au soleil, grands blancs à la couronne (Hoffmann, 11), liards and deniers tournois. It is probable that, according to custom, the principal coin and its divisions are reckoned together, if the divisions have been struck; but as Richard Basire placed his special mark on the gold coins only, we cannot tell whether among the petits blancs à la couronne in the name of KAROLVS there are some of Charles VIII or whether they all belong to Charles VII². As to the demi-écu au soleil, it is unknown.

In the above quotation the text ascribes to Richard Basire a five petalled flower as special mark, but no écu of Saint-Lô with it has yet come to our notice, and we think that Richard Basire used from the first, or nearly so, a flower with four petals, indicated by a document of 29 April 1496. We know, as a fact, that from 8 July 1494 the écus d'or received initial fleurs-de-lys instead of the coronets which had been used before; and we have met with écus of Saint-Lô with initial coronets and four petalled flower. These écus place themselves necessarily between 29 April and 8 July 1494, which leaves very little time for the making use of the primitive special mark.

IX

LOUIS XII.

Two important facts, which we note from the first, characterize the numismatic history of Saint-Lô under the reign of Louis XII. The first is that during the whole of this period, the Mint was under one and the same Mint-master, Richard Basire, who, as we have seen, filled the post under Charles VIII, and who was to remain in charge during the first years of the reign of Francis I. The second is that on possess, apparently, a record of all the trial boxes of the Mint, from 1498 to 1515, which brings to our knowledge at the same time the amount of production and the denominations minted. Unfortunately, if we are not lacking in documents, not all the different species mentioned as having been struck at Saint-Lô have been found, as far as we know.

Charles VIII died on 8 April 1498 (n. st.). On the 25th of the same month, by letters given at Orléans, the new king prescribed that the coining of his predecessor's species should be continued "réserve les grans blancs de Karolus... en faisant mettre esd. monnes nostre nom de Ludovicus au lieu de Karolus et au commencement des lettres d'une chacune especes desd. monnes une fleur de lys couronnée".

The denominations which were struck at that time — leaving on one side those of provincial types — were four in number: the écu and demi-écu d'or au soleil (Hoffmann, 1 and 2), the grand and petit blanc aux trois couronnelles (Hoffmann, 26 and 27), the liard, double and denier tournois (Hoffmann, 41 and 45). Now from the record of the trial boxes brought to the Chambre des Monnaies until December 1507, Richard Basire only coined three of these denominations; the liard is missing, given the rarity of the liards of Louis XII¹, the existence of which Hoffmann does not appear to have known, it is not surprising to find that Saint-Lô did not coin any, which was the case of many other mints.

On the other hand, R. Basire issued a considerable quantity of écus au soleil. We have reckoned the total of deniers d'or contained in these boxes until December 1507, and we find 219, which represents 43,800 écus struck. And if we remember that defrauding the trial boxes was a customary thing, this figure is perhaps too low.

Has Saint-Lô minted demi-écus? It is possible, since, on 10 December 1507, when the Mint was closed, Richard Basire and the warden André Larcher brought to the Chambre des monnaies coining irons for écus, demi-écus, and grands blancs, but we do not think any have ever been noted. The same observation applies to the petits blancs²; we only know some for Bordeaux, and they are not common. (The documents state that some were also minted at Bayonne and Villeneuve-lès-Avignon, as well as in Dauphiny.) With regard to the black money, the fact that only the denier tournois is mentioned proves that Saint-Lô did not coin Doubles; and we know besides that, except in Dauphiny, hardly any were struck anywhere else.

All these coins should bear the special mark of Richard Basire, a flower with 4 petals at the end of the legends; and this mark occurs on the écus au soleil, which are common, and on the grands blancs of which Basire struck over a million³. A document dated 20 June 1503 informs us that on that day, the Paris die-cutter, Nicolas de Russanges, brought to the Chambre des monnaies coining irons for écus and grands blancs intended for the Mint of Saint-Lô, and that the four petalled flower was engraved on all these dies. Does the special mark occur also on the deniers tournois? We confess ignorance, having never seen small deniers of Louis XII for Saint-Lô, although Richard Basire struck some 145,000⁴.

A second numismatic period opens up on 19 November 1507, when the Ordinance of Blois changed the type of the coins and replaced the écu au soleil and blanc à la couronne by the écu and blanc au porc-épic. Neither the standard nor the rate of the two denominations were modified, only the type; moreover the new species was not to include divisions.

2. However Delombardy pretends to have met with a petit blanc of Saint-Lô (Catalogue de la collection Rignault, no 229).

3. The total of grands blancs accounted for in the trial boxes from 1498 to the end of 1507 amounts to 1301.

4. During the period of 1498-1507, Saint-Lô minted petits deniers tournois in 1498, 1499 and 1504.

AN UNPUBLISHED ORANGE MEDAL.

Our old friend W. J. Davis C. H. has supplied us with the following description and has also sent us the medal from which the above illustration is made.

Obv. Bust of William III to the left, laureated, wearing armor and draped; on the truncation I. C. PARKES-F. Leg.: THE GLORIOUS PIUS & IMMORTAL MEMORY 1690. and under the bust NO SURRENDER.

Rev. The Irish Harp, crowned upon a trophy of flags, and swords, in front of which is an open bible surrounded by a ribbon inscribed FORWARD AND PUT YOUR TRUST IN GOD AND FEAR NO EVIL. Leg.: FOR THE LAWS & CONSTITUTION AS ESTABLISHED UNDER WILLIAM IN 1688.

The medal is of copper-gilt and has a hinged loop for suspension; the work is bold but good as may be judged from the picture.

KENT NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

Mr. W. L. Savage, F. R. N. S. gave a very interesting paper on "British Coinage" at the Maidstone Museum on Friday evening, June 11, 1926, illustrated with lantern slides made from his original drawings of the coins. On the proposition of Dr. Spencer Edwards, who presided, a very hearty vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Savage at the conclusion of his paper. The Hon. Sec. reported that the Society was now affiliated to the Royal Numismatic Society, and would receive their publication of the Numismatic Chronicle from time to time. The following coins were exhibited; — By Mr. J. W. Bridge, a coin in lead of Antonin Pius, struck at Alexandria in 145, with the Zodiacal signs on the reverse. By Mr. E. H. Clark, halves and quarters of Spanish dollars countermarked Tortola, etc. By Mr. E. T. Clark, a silver Brazilian coin of 100 reis.

The Annual Excursion of this Society took place on Wednesday July 14th, when a party of members and their friends visited Hastings. Proceeding by a private motor char-a-banc at 9 a.m. Battle Abbey was reached at 10.30. and a pleasant hour was spent in the interesting ruins and gardens. After a short visit to the Church, the party proceeded to Hastings, where luncheon was provided. Mr. Isles, the custodian, then conducted the visitors round Hastings Castle, and described the points of interest. A visit was next made to the St. Clement's Church which extend for some three acres in the sandstone of the East Cliff. After tea, the Museum was visited, and the Curator, W. Ruskin-Burton Esq. pointed out the chief objects of interest, including a very fine collection of Anglo-Saxon and Norman silver pennies from the various Sussex mints. The return journey was made at 7 o'clock via Sedlescombe, Northiam, and Tenterden.

NUMISMATIC SOCIETY OF VICTORIA.

There was a good attendance at the usual monthly meeting on 10th. ay, at which A.S. Kenyon Esq., M.I.E. (President) presided, keen interest being taken in the business of the evening, the papers submitted and the exhibits.

Two papers and a note on an interesting Danish specimen, by Mr. J. Deacon, F.R.N.S., were read by the acting Hon. Secretary, and Mr. E.S. Anthony, A.I.C.A., which proved very interesting. In a paper on "Georg Heinrich von Goertz (Gortz) the issuer of the 'Necessity' Dalers of Sweden, Mr. Hunt gave a short history of this Statesman and his various intrigues with the rulers of the declining European nations of that day, his objects and particulars concerning the dalers (the intrinsic value of which was a halfpenny, though they passed for 40 pence), their decline in value, the subsequent arrest of Gortz for heresy and later, on political charges, and his death by decapitation. Mr. Deacon concluded by saying "Härlitts name of Gortz is apparently incorrect. Also the assumption that it was the action of passing his head on the 1719 issue that caused his being beheaded is, I think, a stretch of imagination."

The paper on "The 'Sous Constitutionnels' of France was equally interesting and resulted in a general discussion on French Numismatics connected with that and succeeding periods.

Exhibits: By the President in connection with the notes by Mr. Deacon: 5 Franc-piece Napoleon Empereur, (Brenet) below bust on obverse; 5 Franc Republic Français, I, 1807. 5 Francs Obv. Louis Philippe Roi de Français, Domard, F.; Rev. 5 Francs etc.; 1833. 5 Francs Obv. Napoleon III Empereur, (Barre) A., Rev. Empire Français 5 Francs 1870: also Holeys Dollar and Dump of New South Wales.

Mr. E. S. Anthony also in connection with Mr. Deacon's notes: Danish Dollar, Charles III, 1792; Spanish Dollar, Ferdinand VII, 17 (found in an old building); Spanish Dollar Alphonso XIII, 1888; Daler of Nuremberg, Ferdinand II, 1627; French, 5 Franc-pieces as follows: — Napoleon 1812, (Brenet) m.m. Cock; Louis XVIII, 1824 (Michaut) m.m. Anchor; Louis Philippe I, 1833, (Domard) Charles X, 1828 (Michaut); and two sous French.

Mr. P.C. Clement — Several handsome medals.

Mr. L. H. Walters — 7 Swedish Dalers issued by Görtz to illustrate Mr. Deacon's paper.

Mr. F. Aes Grave: a study of the cast coinages of Rome and Central Italy. By EDWARD A. SYDENHAM, M.A., pp. 145, pl. 28. Spink & Son, Piccadilly, 1926. £1. 1s. od.

That curious chapter in numismatic history which is filled by the Roman and Italian coinage of heavy cast bronze lends itself very well to special treatment, and we may at once congratulate Mr. Sydenham on his choice of subject. For the advanced student Haeberlin's Corpus is of course indispensable, but it has some of the defects of its great merits and is not always easy to handle. There is ample room for a shorter and more summary treatment of the whole subject, and Mr. Sydenham, with his long experience of the practical as well as of the theoretical side, is just the right man for the task.

It must not be thought, however, that because this book is short it is not thorough. The author begins with an outline of his subject and a glance over its literature; he then defines the relation of the "Aes Grave" to the ingot bronze or "Aes Rude" of earlier times, and to the coins, commonly known as "Aes Signatum": then, reaching the heart of his subject, he discusses the date when "Aes Grave" was introduced into Rome, its standards of weight and their reductions, its place in the monetary system. Passing on to the "Aes Grave" of Central Italy, Campania, Apulia, Etruria, &c., he notes their relations to the Roman and discusses the chief problems to which they give rise. In a closing section he gives us a sober and sensible treatment of the question of fakes. Then come a synopsis of issues and a concise, but thoroughly reliable, Corpus of "Aes Grave": index and plates—the latter well selected and of excellent quality—close the book.

The merits of this work are great and obvious—it is lucid and well arranged, sensible and moderate in argument, sober and reliable in judgment. The general view taken of the "Aes Grave" will certainly be hailed by some critics, who follow closely in the steps of Haeberlin; in the opinion of the reviewer it is essentially sound. The balance of evidence is in favour of a date near 300 B.C. for its introduction: an earlier date solves no difficulties, but does create some. The interpretation of the "Aes Grave" by Haeberlin is extremely able, attractive, and ingenious: the fact that even so it fails to satisfy our sense of historical fitness can only be due to a fundamental error in his dates.

The few detailed criticisms which follow must not for a moment be supposed to affect the reviewer's very favourable opinion of the book as a whole.

The stamped "bricks" can hardly have been ingots prepared for conversion into coin (p. 18): the elaborate types alone make that unlikely. The statement of the value of the 'semi-libral' As and its relation to the denarius (pp. 33ff.) is at best confused; there is really no evidence that the denarius originally equalled two pounds of bronze. A happier attempt at explanation is given in Note A (pp. 134 ff.). Haeberlin's theory of the decimal division of the semilibral As is very rightly rejected (p. 33 f.). On p. 35 we read, "It may be suggested, however, that it (the reduction of weight) was not occasioned by state bankruptcy or by any financial crisis". This seems to betray an imperfect understanding of the whole question of reductions of bronze at Rome; all took place in times of exceptional stress. The arguments for placing the heavier "Romano-Campanian" series before the lighter are not convincing: It is not a question of heavy and reduced standards so much as of two alternative units, a heavier and a lighter, which probably existed at the same time but in different districts. It is noteworthy that the heavy didrachm with obv. head of Apollo, rev. free horse, is by its great likeness to the dated copper of Beneventum (after 268 B.C.) almost fixed to the Pyrrhic War. The reference of the Pegasus type to the "flying horse" figure-heads of Punic warships (p. 48) is very attractive. The estimate of the value of the As of the "Romano-Campanian" series as one third of the didrachm is unconvincing. Mr. Sydenham attributes the small coins, which Haeberlin has termed half- and quarter-ounces of Rome, to the Campanian district and makes them "Sextantes" and "Unciae" of a later date (p. 53). The great objection to this ingenious view is the presence on the reverse of the standard type of the capital, the prow. Whether the quincunx was "evidently reckoned as half an As" (p. 107) may be doubted: this was certainly not the case at Luce-ria, where we find semis and quincunx side by side. When we come to the types Mr. Sydenham very wisely, will not allow us to give imagination rein and find strange meanings in sun, moon, pentagram, or swastika. That there were suggestions and allusions present in many matter-of-fact types, which do not readily occur to us, he himself would probably be ready to admit.

We trust that many students will not rest until they have learnt to know this admirable book for themselves.

THE CROWN PIECE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES.

Sir,—As it is reported that preparations are being made at the Mint for a new issue of silver coins, may I plead for the inclusion of a Crown-piece in the series? Hitherto every British Sovereign for more than three centuries has issued such a coin, although George III, reigned for 56 years before doing so, and William IV. only had Crown-pieces struck, without putting them officially into circulation. The Crown is a piece highly prized by collectors, and the demand for George V. five-shilling pieces would assuredly justify Mr. Churchill, as Master of the Mint, in perpetuating the issue of a coin which affords the artist so much scope for artistic treatment.

Yours faithfully,

H. PIRIE-GORDON.

- COHEN is still the work to which reference is made in catalogues. The BRITISH MUSEUM CATALOGUE has not yet got further than the first volume. Of the work which we are publishing by Messrs. MATTINGLY and SYDENHAM vol. I has been on sale some time and vol. II is on the point of appearing. For the English collector and student this will, we believe, be indispensable. BERNHART's new volumes are in German. STEVENSON's Dictionary is still the only attempt to cover the whole field of the Roman coinage in a single volume. For the young collector AKERMAN's two volumes are almost the only available aid to identifying his coins, and HOBLER is very useful within his own limits.

THE ROMAN IMPERIAL COINAGE.

VOL. II (VESPASIAN TO HADRIAN).

BY

Harold MATTINGLY, M.A. and Edward A. SYDENHAM, M.A.

XVI and 568 pages, 16 plates, crown 8vo, sewed.

The Publishers have pleasure in announcing that the second volume is now in which the Editors have had the valuable help of L.A. Lawrence Esq. M.A. for the coins of Hadrian. It has proved to be of very much greater bulk than Vol. I; and as it had already appeared that the former volume was under an increase cannot be avoided.

Vol. II, is therefore priced at 26s net. and from 1st January, 1927. Vol. I will be priced at 20s net. Until then it is on sale at 16s net.

With the completion of the second volume it becomes possible to offer a forecast of the future progress of the work.

Vol. III, will comprise the period from Antoninus to Commodus and will probably make one large volume. Vol. IV will carry on the story from Pertinax to the reign of Aemilian and will probably be issued in two parts. Vol. V will complete the period from Valerian to Diocletian.

Vol. V, in which the editors are fortunate to have the assistance of Mr. Percy H. Webb, will be the next to appear. Owing to its length it will be necessary to publish it in two parts with a continuous pagination: the first describing the issues of the empire, the second those of the rebels in Gaul, Britain, etc.

It is hoped that Vol. V, Part 1, will be ready in the Spring of 1927. Part 2 about the end of the same year. Vol. III should follow in 1928-9. Vol. IV in 1930-31.

The Publishers still hope to be able to issue the volumes at an average price of one guinea each, but it is impossible to fix the price beforehand of any particular volume.

AES GRAVE

A Study of the Cast Coinages of Rome and Central Italy

BY

EDWARD A. SYDENHAM M.A.

Quarto, 145 pp., 28 plates, boards, linen back and corners.

The Aes Grave forms the first chapter of the long story of the Roman Coinage but hitherto no complete account of it has been set forth in English. The well known works of Garrucci and Haeblerlin are unwieldy in size and almost prohibitive in price. The present study surveys the whole field from a thoroughly scientific point of view, contains a corpus of over 350 pieces, and is illustrated with a series of plates from recent Sale Catalogues which should meet all practical requirements. The price has been put as low as possible, for a work of this class, in the hope that it may reach all who are interested in the fascinating problems of the origins of the famous coinage of ancient Rome.

DIES FOR FALSE COINS

In the possession of the Museo Nazionale Romano are more than 1000 dies for making false coins, for the most part produced by the electrotyping process; about a hundred are however hand-engraved in steel. The various classes of coins and medals are represented in approximately the following numbers: Greek coins, 232; Roman 520; Medieval and Modern 294.

The Istituto Italiano di Numismatica, in agreement with the Direction of the Museum, has undertaken the publication of impressions from these dies, with descriptions, in a quarto volume with about 40 plates. An invitation issued some years ago for subscriptions to defray the cost of this work having met with inadequate response the publication has not proceeded. As, however, it is highly desirable, in the interest of museums and private collectors, that the forgeries from these dies should be exposed, the invitation is now renewed. Promises to subscribe at the rate of £ 1.10s. sterling or 6 dollars will be received by Dr. G. F. Hill, British Museum, London, W. C. 1, or Messrs. Spink and Son, Ltd., 17 Piccadilly, London, W. 1. Payment should not be actually made until notice is received that the work is ready for distribution.

NOTES ON THE MYTHOLOGICAL TYPES ON ROMAN REPUBLICAN COINS.

THE MYTHS OF SILENUS AND SILVANUS.

Only two denarii and one triens bear a head which has been regarded as representing Silenus; both of the denarii belong to the period about 90 B.C. and were issued by moneyers belonging to the party of Sulla. The moneyers of Marius issued many of the rated coins and their issues differ from those struck before 90 B.C. when Marius entered Rome. The head on the denarius of D. Junius Silanus is evidently a head of Silvanus, for the marks of Silenus are absent; there is no sign of a pointed ear, or of a horn upon the head on these coins.

On the denarii of C. Vibius Pansa, however, all the marks of Silenus are clearly present; and the same is true of the head on the triens of Q. Titius, a fellow-moneyer with Vibius Pansa, who copied the design of Pansa's denarii on his bronze Triens.

It is evident from the poets that Silenus, the Greek attendant on Dionysus, was confused in the minds of the Romans with the Latin Silvanus, the woodland spirit of the Italians.

The choice of Silenus as a type was in each case associated with a pun on the names of the moneyers Silanus and Silenus, Pan and Pansa.

The denarii of Pansa are described in Mr. Grueber's work p. 295, plate XXXVI, 16-17, and in Babelon's work Vol. II, p. 542; those of D. Junius Silanus, Vol. II, p. 109; the triens of Q. Titius in Vol. II, p. 492.

On the Reverse of the coins of Pansa and Titius there is a head of Pan; but on that of Junius Silanus a biga driven by Victory, possibly a reference to a success of one of his ancestors.

The figure of Silenus is found on the coins of several Greek cities; even before the year 500 B.C. it is seen on those of Lete, on which he is represented as seizing a woman, a token of the theurgic rites connected with Dionysos. On coins of Coela, or Coelus, a port near Sistus, we see Silenus with his wine-skin. Between 465 and 411 B.C., Silenus is represented on coins of Thasos, carrying off a nymph. At Bargaesus, in Thrace, between 400 and 350 B.C., Silenus appeared on the coins kneeling, and holding a nymph. On coins of Sardes, Silenus was represented standing with the infant Dionysos on his arm. A head of that god, facing, is found on coins of Lycia, struck between 450 and 400 B.C.

These Greek coins illustrate the great difference between the early Latin idea of Silvanus, and the eastern follower of Dionysos.

Silenus does not appear on coins of the Imperial Period; but Silvanus, clothed in a chlamys and dragging a ram by its fore-legs toward an altar, is represented on a medallion of Hadrian, n° 11, p. 9, of Mr. Grueber's medallions. Silenus also is found on colonial coins, as Bostic under Alexander Severus; Coilla in Numidia under Caracalla, Elagabalus and Gordianus Pius; Damascus under Philip Senior; and Deultum in Thrace under Macrinus.

There is however another Republican denarius which has by some been regarded as bearing a figure of Silenus standing with one hand raised, and bearing a wine-skin, viz., that of L. Marcius Censorinus, issued about the same period as those of Pansa and Titius.

The figure has been by others regarded as that of Marsyas, and placed on the coin as a pun on the name Marcius. Marsyas was regarded as a symbol of liberty an idea associated with the revels of Silenus. As such a figure bearing a wine-skin is found on some of the Colonial Latin coins and on Greek coins of Coela it is not surprising some have thought the coin of Marcius may have been meant to represent Silenus.

In considering the pun in the name Silenus we must remember that the moneyer's name was probably given to some ancestor who was snub-nosed, from the adj. Silus, and the termination "anus" is found in names of those adopted and in names of freedmen. There is therefore perhaps a double reason for adopting the type of Silenus or Silvanus, both of which mythical beings are represented as snub-nosed, and in the minds of the common people they were confused because each represented freedom from restraint and love of wine and laughter.

The upper classes, or those educated in regard to Greek art and literature, would distinguish them, but the Roman and Latin masses of the people would be familiar only with their Latin Silvanus. That name is an adjectival noun meaning the woodland, silvan deity or daemon.

The successor of Ascanius was one Silvius, and that name and Silvanus were akin to the Greek Ὠλῆς; the Greek aspirate was often turned by the Italians into the letter "s". The idea of Ὠλῆς was in the minds of the Romans akin to their "materia", and the gods Pan, Silvanus and Silenus were all thought of as presiding over the natural world and primæval forests. These three were, however, in the writings of Virgil clearly distinguished; in his Bucolics, Eclog. X, we read "Silvanus too came up with rural honours on his head, waving the flowery fennels and large lilies, and Pan the god of Arcadia came".

In Aen. VIII, 600, Virgil refers to the Pelasgian origin of Silvanus; "There is a tradition that to Silvanus, god of the fields and flocks, the ancient Pelasgi, who were once the first possessors of the Latin lands, consecrated this grove and testal day".

Horace, in Epode II, 22, calls him "father Silvanus, guardian of his boundaries, delighting to lie under the trees on the grass, by the running waters, hearing the birds sing". Hyginus tells us he was the first to set up stones to mark the boundaries of fields. He was worshipped by both shepherds and woodmen, and especially as guardian of flocks from wolves. Tibullus tells us the syrinx was sacred to him (II, 5, 30). Virgil, in Georgics I, mentions him and Pan with gods and goddesses all whose province is to guard the fields, nourish the fruits and send down abundant showers from heaven. Later on Plutarch identified him with Pan (Parall. Mm. 22). The sacrifices offered to him consisted of grapes, corn-ears, milk, meat, wine and pigs (Hor. Epis. II, 1, 143. Juvenal, VI, 447). Perhaps the mask on the denarii of Silanus would call to the mind of the masses this old Latin rural god rather than the Greek Silenus, especially as the ears and horns of Silenus are wanting in the type.

The Greek god, or daemon, Silenus, was evidently in the minds of those who placed the symbolic additions to the types, found on some specimens of the coins of Vibius Pansa; for instance the thyrsos and ivy leaves, are common Dionysiac emblems. The ardent energetic character of Silenus is expressed in the name, which is derived originally from the root SEIP meaning hot, hence the name of the dog star, Sirius. The P has been changed to λ, a common change and hence Silenus. The Satyrs were sometimes called Sileni, and their chief, Silenus, was the attendant on Dionysos. Their appearance is described as that of strong, hairy beings with snub-noses, and with ears pointed at the tip. On the triens of Q. Titius the ear is covered by the hair and the wing-like lock above cannot be an ear as it is far too high up and too forward for an ear; it may be a little horn; if that is a horn on the coin of Titius it was then probably meant for a Silenus and not Silvanus. Silani were symbols of wanton sensualism associated with drunkenness, and with objects of fear. For a description of Silenus see Virgil's Eclog. VI, and the fear is expressed in Ovid's Heroid. IV, 47 seq.

In the days of Horace and Ovid the Italian Faunus and Pan were confused with the Satyrs and Silenus, so we find them attributing horns and goats' feet to all alike. Confer Horace Carm. II, XIX for "goat footed", and Propertius Eleg. III, III. They are all confused in Ovid, Metam. I, 193, in the line "Et Nymphæ, Satyrique, et monticolæ Sylvani"; and in VI, 392, we have Fauns, Satyrs and Nymphs all classed as the gods of the woods.

The coins and their types above described are interesting as illustrations of various passages in Latin literature, and also of the mentality of the moneyers who made puns on their names, and as evidences of the confusion of thought which arose from the introduction of Greek mythology to the Latin races.

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTICES OF MEDALLISTS

Coin, Gem, and Seal Engravers, Ancient and Modern, with References to their Works.

Most of the previous articles have been revised and republished in the "Biographical Dictionary of Medallists". The references to that work in these supplementary articles will be indicated by the letters "B.D.M", together with the number of the volume and its page.

BOLSTERER (POLSTERER, POLSTER), HANS (Germ.). Vide H.B. (B.D.M., Vol. I, 1904, p. 103; Vol. II, pp. 356, 443; Vol. VII, p. 426). The identity of this Medallist with the monogrammist HJB or HAB has only recently been discovered. Th. Hampe in Thieme-Becker's Lexikon der bildenden Künstler, IV, p. 254, gives an excellent account of the famous Renaissance Portrait carver and Medallist, who died on 26. December 1573. A model in pear-wood of the signed medal of Maximilian Egmont Count Buren, of the year 1547, is described in the Inventory of the Art Collections of Archduke Leopold William, 1659, as an "original by Bølsterer". Of the years 1540 and 1541 we have medals with his monogram portraying Nuremberg personalities; of 1546 are the medals of the sisters Ursula and Amalie, Countesses of Solms-Lich; and in 1547 he pictured several notabilities of Frankfurt-on-Main. About that date, Neudörfer in his "Nachrichten von Nürnberger Künstlern und Werkleuten", states: "In dieser Zeit ist auch ein künstlicher Bildhauer hie gewesen, den hat man den bösen Bolz genennt". It is probable that Bolsterer is meant here. A document of 1551 names him "Hans Polsterer bildschneider"; another, recording his decease in 1573, "Hanns Pollster, pildtschnitzer in der Kothgass Nürnberg".

Bolsterer, who is undoubtedly one of the foremost masters of German Renaissance medallist art, did not execute his models only in stone, as is proved by many extant models, but also in wood. By him is the large tombstone of Bishop Weigand von Rednitz in Bamberg, and a carved wooden frame by his hand is preserved in Vienna.

His best known medallist productions are:

1540. Christoph Tetzl; signed. Munich. Model in stone of the obv. in Brit. Museum.

Carl was apprenticed in Augsburg; he may have been employed at the works of Drentwett. In 1584 we find him in Nuremberg, of which city he became in the next year a Burgher and a Master. In 1587 he obtained a permit to work for Prince Elector Christian I of Saxony. In 1597 he is coining goldgulden for Bishop Julius of Würzburg. He worked also for Prince Elector Frederick IV of the Palatinate and at Amberg for the Governor of the Upper Palatinate Christian zu Anhalt, 1599-1606. The artist died probably in 1608 or 1609.

His medallic productions, as given by Dr Habich, are the following:

THE COINAGE OF SAINT-LO

(1351-1693).

By Dr BAILHACHE

President of the Société française de Numismatique.

(Translated from the French, Revue Numismatique, 1925.)

This change was accompanied by a reduction in the number of mints which the Ordinance brought back to eighteen by closing down eight Mints including Saint-Lô¹. As early as May 1504, the mints of Provence had been closed; and from 17. June 1506 Grenoble was the only one subsisting legally in Dauphiny, after the closing of the three other mints. This measure was easily accounted for by the abuses and malversations of mint-masters and officials, but in 1507 Mints situated in the four corners of the Kingdom were closed at random, so it seems, without any pretext of fraud having been perpetrated in any of them.

The Ordinance of Blois was read and published at the Chambre des monnaies on 24. January 1508 (n. st.), but the order for closing down had already been sent to Saint-Lô, as we have seen above that Richard Basire and the warden André Larcher brought on 10. December 1507 to the Chambre their coining-irons and trial boxes. It is probable therefore that the Mint stopped working the first days of the said month of December.

The cities and provinces whose mints were thus suppressed naturally protested against a measure which was injuring them.
 Poitiers was the first to obtain satisfaction, on 3. February 1508
 (n. st.). On the following 15. March, it was Saint-Lô's turn;
 Royal letters given at Bourges on that date decided that the Mint should be reopened "après la feste de Saint-Jehan-Baptiste prouchaine venant (24. June)".

These letters which were read and registered by the Exchequer

1. These eight Mints were Saint-Lô, Poitiers, Bayonne, Villefranche de Rouergue, Villeneuve d'Avignon, Saint-Pourçain, Châlons-sur-Marne and of Normandy on 3. April 1508 (n.st.) and the Chambre des monnaies on the following 27. May, expressly state that at Saint-Lô "par cy devant se sont forgées monnoies tant dor que d'argent de très bon aloi et mise sans ce que aucuns abbys y aient esté faits ou commis". On this account no change was made in the staff on the reopening of the Mint.

On 27. July the Chambre des monnaies handed to the Mint warden, André Larcher, the vidimus of the ordinance of Blois with the patterns (patrons) of the new currencies, and on the same day the Paris die-cutter, Nicolas de Russanges, was commissioned to make an obverse die (pille) and two sets of reverse dies (trousseaux) for the écu au porc-épic and one obverse die and three sets of reverse dies for the blanc au porc-épic, which were likewise handed on to André Larcher. The period of inactivity of the Mint lasted thus most likely from the first days of December 1507 to the first days of August 1508, that is about eight months.

The second numismatic period of the reign of Louis XII extends to the 3rd February 1512 (n.st.). During the whole of this time Richard Basire minted but three denominations: écus and grands blancs au porc-épic (Hoffmann, 6 and 33), and deniers tournois. The two first are relatively common, about 19,000 écus and more than 87,000 blancs of this type² having been minted. A strange fact to notice is that the difference (the Master's special mark) is omitted; the four petaled flower has disappeared, and only the dot under 19th letter indicates the provenance.

A third numismatic period commences on 3. February 1512 (n.st.), which is the date of an Ordinance, also given at Blois, prescribing that Douzains au porc-épic should no longer be minted but replaced by three new denominations: gros of 2 sols 6 deniers, gros of 15 deniers, and blancs of 10 deniers. The gros of 2 sols 6 deniers is generally known under the name of gros de Roi (Hoffmann, 24), and the gros of 15 deniers under that of Demi-gros de Roi (Hoffmann, 25). The blanc of 10 deniers (Hoffmann, 39) is termed in the texts Ludovicus, as in the same way the dizain of Charles VIII is called Karolus and that of Francis I later on Franciscus. The coinage of gold was to be continued in écus au porc-épic.

The statement of the trial-boxes shows that Richard Basire did not mint any gros de Roi, only a small quantity of demi-gros and a considerable number of Ludovicus and petit tournois. The Ludovicus is known, but we have never met with the demi-gros de Roi of which under 8000 pieces were coined³.

As to the deniers tournois struck from 1508 to 1515 — that is during the second and third numismatic periods — we do not know them. If the initial crowned lys was replaced on them by a crosslet, as is probable, then it is impossible to distinguish them from those of Louis XI from which they differ only by an imperceptible difference in weight⁴.

X.

FRANCIS I.

Of the reign of Francis I but few documents relating to Saint-Lô have come down to us, and the coins of this King are all rare, with the exception of the douzains. The mint displayed little activity and stopped entirely for long periods, though we are ignorant of the reasons. Moreover, it was twice closed down officially, once at the beginning, and again at the end of the reign, and the latter period extended for over nine years. Contrary to what we observe at most other mints, Francis I's numismatic history of Saint-Lô is rather obscure and poor.

1. The text of the Bourges letters is found in the Archives Nationales, Reg. Z1^{er} 62, fo 111^{er} et vo.

2. From 1508 to 1515, 94 écus au porc-épic were placed in the trial-box. On the other hand, the last trial-boxes containing blancs au porc-épic were brought to the Chambre on 15. April 1512 (n. st.); in adding those of the previous trial-boxes, we obtain a total of 126. At the rate of 86 pieces to the Mark and one piece placed in the trial-box for 9 marks struck, the total is easily reckoned out.

3. The Demi-gros de Roi was cut at the rate of 68 $\frac{2}{3}$ to the Mark, and there were 11 of them in the trial-box brought to the Chambre des monnaies on 17. September 1512.

4. The deniers tournois of Louis XI ordered on 15. September 1476 (second issue) were at the rate of 240 to the Mark, these of Louis XII at 252 to the Mark.

Francis I ascended the throne on 1. January 1515. As early as 23. January, in the same Order given to Mint officials to substitute the name of Louis XII for that of the new king, the type of the coinage was changed. An écu au soleil, of the same rate and standard⁵, replaced the écu aux porcs-épics, and the three billion coins, created in 1512, were suppressed. A return was made to the old grand blanc, of the 'trois couronnelles' type, inaugurated by Charles VII, and which had continued to be minted at the beginning of the reign of Louis XI, then at the end of the reign of Charles VIII, and during the first six years of Louis XII. As to the black money, the only change made was in the name of the king.

On 6. March 1515 (n. st.) the order to coin écus d'or (Hoffmann, 1, 2, 3 and 4) and grands blancs (Hoffmann, 92) was sent to Saint-Lô, where Richard Basire was still in charge of the Mint, but the striking was delayed, and from the contents of the trial-boxes it would appear that the Mint was not working from the month of September 1514 and only started again in the middle of May 1515. Richard Basire had difficulty in procuring gold and silver bullion as is proved by the unimportance of his issues during the last years of the reign of Louis XII, and this is no doubt the reason why, in 1515, at an uncertain date, he was not reappointed as Mint-master, but entrusted with the Mastership for one year "sous la main du roi", that is under the king's pleasure.

On 19. June 1515, by Royal letters given at Amboise, the General Masters were ordered to close down all the Mints of the realm, with the exception of four: Paris, Rouen, Lyons and Bayonne. This was an excessive measure of centralization; in the following October, the Regent, the King's mother⁶, consulted the Chambre des monnaies as to which of the Mints it was opportune to reopen, and the Chambre indicated nine among which Saint-Lô was not mentioned.

The Mint of the Cotentin was thus closed on 8. August 1515 after less than three months of working, it having been reopened as we have seen above, on 15. May. Richard Basire's trial-boxes brought on 30th October to the Chambre by Jehan Brumoy "ser viteur de R. Basire", only contained 6 écus au soleil, representing 1200 pieces coined, and no grands blancs. On the other hand, they contained no currency of Louis XII, which proves the stoppage of the Mint, the preceding trial-boxes having been opened on 11. September 1514.

The Mint reopened in virtue of letters patent dated 21 March 1517 (n. st.). These letters offer nothing of particular interest except that the same masters and officials were reinstated⁷.

Richard Basire remained in office until the beginning of 1521 possibly until April; but as we only know the contents of his last trial-boxes brought to the Chambre on 29. April 1521 and containing only écus and grands blancs we are without a knowledge of the importance of his mintage. We know however that he struck testons, as the teston of Saint-Lô, described by Saulcy⁸, must be of R. Basire, seeing that it bears two initial crosslets. This coin, of which we saw a specimen some time ago at Messrs. Feuardent's, was certainly struck from dies sent from Paris, as the king's portrait is identical with those of the majority of the beardless testons of François I (type of Hoffmann, 59), but the four-petaled flower, the distinguishing mark of Richard Basire, does not occur on the teston, whereas it is found on an écu d'or of this Mint-master offering as another peculiarity the large cross on the reverse without anything in the angles.

This Master was still in office at the time of the promulgation of the Ordinance of Saint-Germain, of 21 July 1519, prescribing the first depreciation of currency of the reign: écu of 23 carats; the rate of 71 $\frac{1}{16}$ to the mark, instead of 23 carats $\frac{1}{8}$ at 70 to the mark; douzain of 4 d. 6 gr. at 92 to the mark, instead of 4 d. 12 gr. and 86 to the mark. He must therefore have coined these depreciated denominations, but as we do not know the sign indicating the depreciation — nor whether any were prescribed — we cannot distinguish them from the former.

5. The écu aux porcs-épics was of 23 carats $\frac{1}{8}$ and at the rate of 70 to the Mark.

6. Francis I was in Italy.

7. Saulcy has not noted the assayer's name: Nicolas des Jardins, and we do not know the name of the Counterwarden, which is not given in the document of case Z1^{er} 981-982.

8. Histoire numismatique de François I^{er}, no 252.

A fact that would show that at this time the working of the Mint of Saint-Lô presented difficulties, is that no Master could be found to take the place of Richard Basire. On 2. May 1521, the Masters General appointed Jean Brumoy, whom we have noticed above as Richard Basire's servant, as warden "for and in the name of Pierre de Bonlieu until Saint-Remy's day (1. October)", and "entrusted him until that same day with the mastership". But on 21 June Jean Brumoy obtained his discharge as warden, and the same document informs us that at that date Pierre de Bonlieu was "commis à l'exercice de la m^e p^{re} de Saint-Lô.

It is therefore probable, if not certain, that Jean Brumoy never coined.

Pierre de Bonlieu remained in office for less than two years, and died in all likelihood towards the end of the year 1522. In any case, about January 1523 (n. st.) the wardens replaced him by a money-changer of Saint-Lô named Jacques Louvet, who was himself committed to the mastership "jusqu'à ce que par le Roy ou la Chambre autrement y ait esté pourveu".

The trial-boxes of Pierre de Bonlieu, brought to the Chambre, the first on 24. May 1522 and the latter on 10. July 1523, only contained écus and grands blancs; in all 10 écus, representing 2000 coins minted, and 262 grands blancs which, at the rate of one piece placed in the box for 60 sols minted, brings a total of about 189,000 douzains.

The distinguishing mark of Pierre de Bonlieu is not known, but one is allowed to suppose that it was he who marked his douzains with a kind of treble pointed crescent placed under the third and fourth letters of the two legends. The douzains with this mark are the only ones of Saint-Lô that one frequently meets with.

Jacques Louvet chose as his mark une teste de lou à la fin des lettres; not any of his productions have ever been noticed. He could not have started work before the end of February 1523 (n. st.), as we find on the 11th of that month Martin La Gault, die-cutter of Paris, authorised to mark coining-irons for écus and grands blancs, which were handed on to Jean Brumoy, who had been appointed to the office of assayer of the Mint.

In 1524, we find, without any particulars, another Master of the name of Jehan Rogier in the place of Jacques Louvet. Nothing is known of him, except that he was appointed for one year.

Then, in 1529, after it had ceased working for several years, a trader of Saint-Lô, named Julien Rouxelin — and not Roupelin, as Saulcy erroneously read — was appointed Master for one year. Coining-irons for écus, douzains and deniers tournois — certainly not in Paris — were handed to him on 18. September 1529¹, and his year of tenure of the mastership commenced on 1. October. The Archives Nationales possess his statement of deliveries which exactly agrees with the figures given by the Registre du contrôle des boîtes Z1^b 293. We learn thus that Rouxelin minted a total of 1,000 écus d'or, 73 marks of testons, i.e. 1861 pieces, about 15,000 douzains, and 34,000 deniers tournois (Hoffmann, 121). One of these deniers, which is preserved in the French Cabinet², shows that even on this small denomination J. Rouxelin had placed his mark: une petite teste d'oiseau à la fin des lettres, tant a croix qu'à pille. The teston is also known; the royal effigy, of rather rough work, represents Francis I, crowned, with long hair and flowing beard. Moreover, and this proves how badly the mint regulations were observed at that time, the two legends begin with testons. Now, in 1530, we ought to find there coronets, or at any rate, the reverse legend should begin with a coronet, according to the regulation prescribed on 10. September 1521. But the die-cutter, who was no doubt the Saint-Lô mint-engraver, Guillaume Lesleu³, probably knew but little of the regulations.

The Mastership of J. Rouxelin ended on 1. October 1530, and his trial-boxes were brought to the Chambre on the following 1. November⁴. It would appear that the Mint was closed for a very long period, until about the beginning of 1540. In any case we are without any information respecting the period of 1531-1539.

In the first weeks of the year 1540 — reckoned in the new style — a trader of Saint-Lô, Guillaume Ybert, already commissioned by the wardens, was appointed by the Masters General Mint-master for one year. In the course of February, his bails were accepted by an act passed before Jacques Bonnet, esquire, warden of the seals of the obligations of the viscounty of Karentan.

An ordinance given at Soissons on 14. January 1540 (n. st.), a famous ordinance in numismatic history, had just established the use of mint letters. On 28. January, the Chambre des monnaies sent the execution to Saint-Lô; the Cotentin mint was to mark its issues with the letter C.

On 24. February 1540 (n. st.) another Ordinance, given at Abbeville, again interdicted the coining of testons and created the douzain aux salamandres, of the same cut — 92 to the mark — as the douzain aux trois couronnelles of which it was to take the place, but of 4 d. 4 gr. A.R., instead of 4 d. 6 gr. A.R. The billon coinage was thus depreciated for a second time during the same reign. As to the écu d'or, it remained unaltered, and it was in error that the two mints of La Rochelle and Toulouse coined écus aux salamandres; the type au soleil continued the same with the addition only of the mint letter. On 8. March the execution of this Ordinance was sent to Saint-Lô.

In the following June, a fresh Ordinance, given at Fontainebleau, prescribed the engraving in future of a small cross on the extremity of the large cross on the reverse of the écus and douzains. The execution of this Ordinance was only sent to Saint-Lô on 21. October.

From all this it results that Guillaume Ybert, during his one year's mastership, can only have struck two denominations: écus d'or au soleil marked with a C and douzains aux salamandres (Hoffmann, 106). And in fact, his trial-boxes, brought on 30. December 1540 and opened on the following day, contained 2 écus au soleil, representing 600 écus minted, and 53 douzains for a total of 38,000 pieces struck. One of these douzains is in the French Cabinet; it bears the C, the new mint-mark of Saint-Lô, and the personal mark of Guillaume Ybert: une petite tête de licorne au commencement des deux légendes.

On 19. March 1541 (n. st.), the Ordinance of Blois created the coin with the 'croisette', but this issue does not interest Saint-Lô, which again had stopped working. The closing of the Mint became definitive by an order dated 27. April 1541, Saint-Lô was closed down on that day at the same time as six other mints situated in the four corners of the realm. The letter sent to the wardens and Mint officials gives no reason for the closing; the Chambre only states that the Mint is not included in the list of those which shall remain open⁵.

HENRY II.

From a numismatic point of view, the first three and even four years of the reign of Henry II constitute a period of groping and testing. The type of the currency inherited from Francis I⁶ was changed, and for the first time the Royal effigy appears on the gold coins. There were also two attempts at monetary centralisation, by the reduction in the number of the mints⁷, which had to be reconsidered, and also an attempt at unification of the currency, by the suppression of the provincial emblems⁸, which did not succeed either. In fact, the coinage did not become really organized until after the Ordinance of Blois (27. March 1551; n. st.), which created the 'Monnaie des Etuves'.

Nevertheless, during the preceding year, the most important question had been settled. By letters patent given at Fontainebleau on 14. January 1550 (n. st.) a certain number of mints had been reopened and the total number fixed at 19. Moreover, the type of the currency had been settled: the testons and demi-testons, to be similar in rate and standard to those of Francis I¹, and also the douzains aux croissants prescribed by the Ordinance of 31. January 1549 (n. st.), but the écus and demi-écus d'or au soleil, with the crowned effigy of the king (Hoffmann, 5, 6 and 7) were replaced by new gold coins called Henris, with bare head (Hoffmann, 24, 27) or laureate (Hoffmann, 29, 31), also of 23 carats, but at the rate of 67 to the Mark only, instead of 71 $\frac{1}{8}$. A Double Henri (Hoffmann, 23, 26, 28, 29, 30) and a Demi-Henri (Hoffmann, 25) completed the series of gold coins.

Moreover, these letters of 14. January 1550 (n. st.) had granted to those cities possessing a mint the privilege of appointing the Master and Mint officials.

The Mint of Saint-Lô was not included among the nineteen appointed on 14. January 1550 (n. st.). But even this increased number soon appeared insufficient, and on the following 2. April, letters patent, given in Paris, ordered the reopening of Nantes and Saint-Lô, and by transfer to Moulins, of Saint-Pourçain. This measure, the letters tell us, was necessitated "pour ce que de présent y a grande quantité de monnoyes rongnées en nosd. pays de bretagne, Normandie, bourbonnoys et auvergne, desquelles avons interdit et défendu le cours et mise fors que au marc pour billon, Et somme advertiz que les monnoyes à présent ouvertes ne peuvent suffire et satisfaire à faire ouvrir, monnoyer et convertir lesd. monnoyes rongnées en bonne et nouvelle monnoye suivant notre ordonnance..."².

On 14. April 1550 (n. st.) the Chambre des monnaies verified these letters and entrusted the Master General Philippe de Lautier to go and reopen Saint-Lô and instal the Master and officials appointed by the city.

These nominations took place officially on 29. April, but as the official report preserved in the Archives Nationales explicitly states, the only question on that day was to ratify the appointments that had already been made³.

The Master appointed was a tradesman of Saint-Lô, named Jacques le Couey, son-in-law by a first marriage of the last Master of the Mint, Guillaume Ybert⁴. He was, in April 1550, a councillor of the city of Saint-Lô, which shows that he was a person of some importance, which certainly assisted in his nomination⁵. And the business was so well settled beforehand that we find, as early as 15. April, Jacques le Couey in Paris, where he declares before the record office of the chambre des monnaies "que le différence ancienne de la ville de Saint-Lô est une teste de lycorne laquelle se met à la fin de la légende du cousté de la pille, et que pour la sienne il a prins et choisi une coquille, ung bourdon au travers, laquelle il entend mettre au cousté de la croiz après la dacte de mil cinq cens cinquante..."⁶. The shell and bumble-bee are an evident allusion to Saint James, the patron of the new Mint-master. As to the so-called former mint-mark of Saint-Lô, this was the personal mark of Guillaume Ybert, as we have seen above. Thus within a space of ten years, a patent fact was distorted, which shows once again that official documents of that time cannot be taken literally.

On 29. April, "en la maison commune de ceste ville de Saint-Lô", before Samson Chatrefou, taking the place of the bailiff of "Costentin", absent at the time, and the lieutenant of the said bailiff of Saint-Lô, ill, the assembly of councillors and notables thus proceeded to purely formal nominations. First of all the two wardens were appointed. The first, Master Jacques Quétel, esquire, seneschal of the barony of Saint-Lô "had filled the said office, thirty years before", in the reign of Francis I. The second, "honorable homme Raoul le Dain, par cy devant auroit impétré du Roy... autre office de garde"; this was therefore, as far as he was concerned, an enforced appointment. Maistre Jehan le Secourable junior was designated as *contregarde*⁷, and, finally, Jacques le Couey was named Master, whilst one of his colleagues on the Council of échevins, Pierre Trouvey, a tradesman of Saint-Lô, was designated as Assayer of the Mint. One might suppose that this Trouvey was a goldsmith, but such is not the case, as he was a cloth merchant "conduisant ordinairement la trafficque de draps"⁸.

A third échevin was before long appointed to an office at the Mint; his name was Jacques Lalouel and he was "contrerolleur des deniers communs de ceste dite ville". In August 1550, he was named substitute of the Procureur général du Roi to the Mint to which he already belonged as moneyer⁹.

The last of the charges to fill up was that of die-cutter, which was not bestowed on that day. A document, dated from 7. July 1550, shows that at first, the die-cutter of Rouen, Guillaume Tavel, was engaged to supply the coining-irons to Saint-Lô; but, at the end of the year, we find a citizen named Girard le Petit¹⁰, actually at work.

No sooner had the Saint-Lô Mint been reorganised than its existence again became in danger. On 5. June, an Ordinance given at Saint-Germain, at the request of the inhabitants of Caen, "cupides d'avoir lad. monnoye"¹¹, prescribed its transfer to that city "pource estant notre ville de Caen en lieu plus a propos que lad. ville de Saint-Lô, Et en laquelle, tant pour la multitude du peuple et marchans qui habondent et fréquentent par chacun jour, que pour y estre establie une des receptes générales de nostre pays de Normandye. A laquelle tous les recepveurs particuliers dicelle apportent tous les deniers de leurs charges. Il ne peut estre qu'il ny habonde grande quantité de billon qui ne se pourrait commodement convertir en bonne monnoye s'il n'y avait establisement d'une monnoye aud. Caen..."¹².

On 21. June, the Chambre des monnaies gave commission to the Master General Symon Radin to go and effect this transfer.

Naturally the échevins and inhabitants of Saint-Lô, as well as the officials, workers and moneyers protested energetically to Radin but as he could do nothing else but fulfil his commission, they presented their request to the king, and did so well that their claim was heard; on 2. August, a new Ordinance, given at Saint-Germain revoked the order of transfer¹³. However, it was also prescribed that the billon in existence at Caen should be coined by other officials. This Ordinance was registered by the Chambre on 13. August.

The stoppage of the Saint-Lô mint lasted barely six weeks, having begun a few days after 21. June to end a few days after 13. August but this short time had been sufficient to instal and place in working order the mint of Caen. Things could be hurried forward when something was to be gained by it. As early as 3. July the king's officers and governors of the city of Caen endeavoured to press the opening of the mint¹⁴, and on 10. August, the mint-master Raymond Hermier, made his first delivery: douzains aux croissants¹⁵.

We have before our eyes one of these douzains bearing, with the date 1550, the secret mark of R. Hermier, a tower at the end of the two legends, and as a special sign, a dot under the 17th letter of the obverse, and another under the 16th of the reverse. Beneath the shield is a C, which is natural, as the Mint of Saint-Lô had been transferred to Caen. But, when the Cotentin Mint restarted work and took back its mint-mark, Caen received as a new distinctive mark, a small crosslet¹⁶. The coins bearing this mark — douzains aux croissants — are common; they have long been ascribed to Amiens, then to Turin.

In the course of 1550¹⁷, the mint of Saint-Lô also minted on douzains, but in very large numbers, which were however near bled in the following year; it is not therefore surprising that douzains of 1550 and 1551 should be the commonest of the n.

The mintage of gold and silver coins commenced in 1551, but the number of testons and demi-testons struck in that year was relatively considerable, it is worth noticing that the amount of ris d'or, of which nearly 6000 were coined in 1551, dwindled from year to year until it became only a thousand in 1554. In appendix, where we give a statement of the trial-boxes of the Mint from 1550 to the definitive closing down of Saint-Lô, will enable the reader to form an idea of the importance of the annual mintage of J. le Couey, and bring before him a curious fact. According to the pieces placed in the trial-boxes, it would appear that no Double Henris d'or had been struck, whilst even to the Double Henris d'or of Saint-Lô are not very rare. We have a Double Henri of Saint-Lô dated 1552; now, in that year, the gold trial-box contained 22 deniers equivalent to 55 livres, and the Henri was worth 50 sols, or $2\frac{1}{2}$ livres, it follows that in 1552 deniers there were only Henris, and not a single Double Henri. Similarly, the 9 deniers of the gold trial-box of 1553 are reckoned for 22 livres 10 sols, here again, there were only Henris. The conclusion we draw from this is that J. le Couey and the échevins had agreed to falsify their boxes, which explains that a few years later, in 1564, the Cour des Monnaies, remonstrating with the king in connection with a scheme for a general lease, states only: "Il est vray semblable que en beaucoup de monnoies de ce aulme les boistes ne sont fidellement faictes pour le regard de la quantité de l'ouvrage laquelle est fort difficile à vérifier".

The coins of Saint-Lô are engraved in the superb style which characterises the work of the Engraver-general, Marc Béchot; one may judge of this from the design of the Henri d'or of 1551 reproduced in Hoffmann (Pl. LXVI, n° 27). On most of the testons and demi-testons (type of Hoffmann, 35 and 37), the Royal gy is equally beautiful. Those which lack in artistic merit — for instance, the teston with the large head of the type generally in use at Toulouse (Hoffmann, 65), and of which a specimen, dated 1552, exists in the French Cabinet — were no doubt struck in dies engraved by another than Marc Béchot.

The existence of the Mint of Saint-Lô was again menaced by the Royal Declaration of 3. March 1555 (n. st.), prescribing that in future there would no longer be open Mints in the cities which did not possess a general Receivership, which was not the case of Saint-Lô, whereas there was one at Caen, as we have noticed above. Had the Mint established at Caen in 1550 still been working in 1555, it might have carried the day over Saint-Lô, but Raymond le premier had given up his office in 1552², and the Mint, without being closed, was inactive.

At any rate, those interested, échevins and inhabitants, officials and moneyers of Saint-Lô hurried to address a request to the King, and, "comme il ne s'est pas commis de faute en lad monnoie", letters patent, given at Fontainebleau on 22. May 1555, the Mint remained open³. The verification of these letters by the *Cour des Monnaies*⁴ was quite a business. The parliament of Rouen had ratified them on 18. April 1556, without any difficulty, as it seems, though tardily, and then they were sent to the Cour; but a tail of form created an incident, and on 30. April the Cour delivered a sentence "par lequel entre autres choses est ordonné que lesd. supplians feront refformer l'adresse desd. Lettres dedans six mois". On this the people concerned sent a fresh request to the king, who on 26. May, gave new letters patent ordering the Cour to ratify his first letters of 24. May 1555 "sans s'arrester à l'adresse desd. lettres". Nevertheless, the Cour did not decide to proceed with the verification until 13. February 1557 (n. st.)⁵.

Fortunately these delays and this quarrel about form did not hinder the Mint from working. The French Cabinet possesses douzains of Saint-Lô dated 1555 and 1556, and we know from the documents, that in these two years, Saint-Lô minted Henris d'or and testons and demi-testons⁶.

On 12. February 1557 (n. st.), Jacques le Couey, whose six years mastership had expired, requested the Cour to grant him a new lease "pour tel temps qu'il vous plaira" under a much lower contract, on account of the unimportant work the Mint had been able to do "et davantage qu'il n'y a aucun moyen d'en faire que bien peu". On 15. February, the Cour granted him a new lease for six years, to run from his first delivery of species, and the reduction of the contract which he had solicited⁷; but he did not enjoy his new lease for long, as he died about a year later, towards the end of March 1558 (n. st.)⁸ after having had the time to get himself admitted to the corporation of moneyers⁹.

Jacques le Couey dead, he had to be replaced. The choice of the échevins and burghers of Saint-Lô fell on a citizen, Raoul Forest, who was one of the bailsmen of J. le Couey; but we have not found in the Archives the official report of the assembly of 29. March 1558 (n. st.), where this nomination was made. On the following 20. April, letters patent granted the Mastership to Raoul Forest for a period of nine years, and the Cour ratified these letters on 2. May; on the same day, R. Forest declared that he was taking as his special mark "ung petit arbre qu'il fera mettre et emprendre du costé du trousseau à la fin de la légende"¹⁰. Besides, he preserved the unicorn's head, the so-called mint-mark of Saint-Lô, which we see amongst others on a Double Henri d'or of 1558.

MEDALLAS EUROPEAS RELATIVAS A AMÉRICA las describe J. T. MEDINA. Con ilustraciones. Buenos Ayres, 1924. Cuarto. 377 pp. Published by the "Facultad de Filosofía y Letras". Publicaciones del Instituto de Investigaciones históricas. Número XXIV.

Mr. J. T. Medina is probably best known in this country in connection with his work "Las Medallas del Almirante Vernon" (Santiago de Chile, 1919).

Many years ago the author spent some months in England, when he formed a very important collection of "Vernon medals", which laid the foundation to his above-named publication.

But before this he had written: Medallas coloniales hispano-americanas (Santiago de Chile, 1901) and Las Medallas Chilenas (Santiago de Chile, 1901).

The fine volume before us is therefore the result of at least thirty years' patient studies and commends itself. Such a book was really needed, and more especially now when so much interest is displayed in South American numismatics. It deals exclusively with European medals relating to America. We hope a further volume may be forthcoming dealing with the autonomous medallic production of the various American states.

The first chapter confines itself to the Spanish medals; the second to the English; the third to the French; the fourth to the Dutch; and the following fifth to eighth to the Italian, German, Portuguese, Swedish, etc. American medals.

The British-American medals which interest us most range from that commemorating the Voyage of Sir Francis Drake to the Prize medal awarded by the Royal Geographical Society to the members of the Robert Scott Antarctic Expedition, 1913. They all have either

On 10. March the Cour authorized him to undergo at the Mint of Saint-Lô a worker's trial (A. N. Z1^a 65, fol. 41^{ro}), and the trial having been favourable to him, he was definitely received, which gave him the right of participating in the numerous privileges of the corporation, and to transmit this right to his children.

direct or some indirect connection with America. Many of them witness to the important rôle played by England in American political-economy and her great naval and military successes in South America chiefly during the reigns of George II and George III.

Señor Medina has however omitted such medals as he has described elsewhere, viz. the Vernon series which form the subject of his special monograph.

What Franks and Grueber's standard work is to the British Medallic History, Medina's publications are destined to become to the South American, and we warmly recommend this important further contribution from his pen to all interested, whether collectors, students or historians.

PENNINGEN EN MUNTEN BETREFFENDE BERGEN OP ZOOM. By Jhr. M. W. Snoeck. 8vo. 12 pp. 1926.

Reprint from "Taxandria", Tijdschrift voor Noordbrabantsche Geschiedenis en Volkskunde. XXXIII.

This monograph on the Coins and Medals of Berg-op-Zoom is compiled by the well-known numismatist, Mr. M. W. Snoeck, whose various studies on the Dutch coinage are duly appreciated.

Most of the pieces described have been published before, but the advantage of the present publication resides in the fact that they are now brought together, which specialists will be grateful for.

ANNUARIO ITALIANO PER I NUMISMATICI E RACCOLGITORI DI MONETE E MEDAGLIE. Diretto da M. Cagiati. Anno I. 1926. Small octavo. 216 pp.

Price: 30 lire.

This is primarily an address book of Italian Collectors, intended to take the place of Gnechi's "Guida Numismatica", which is now obsolete.

The Annuario, like its predecessor will render great service to collectors for the interchange of communications. There are however many collectors who object to their names and their collections being advertised, and this for obvious reasons.

Comm. Cagiati's little book presents other features which greatly increase its value and usefulness: a chapter on Italian Public Numismatic Collections, by Prof. G. Castellani; Numismatics as a subject of study in the schools, by Signor R. Corso; In Memoriam, a biographical repertory of recently deceased prominent Italian Numismatists; Reviews of recent Publications, and List of contemporary numismatic periodicals; Numismatic Societies; Numismatics in Hungary; Recent Coin and Medal issues; Medals of the Anno Santo, 1926, etc.

We wish the Annuario a ready sale, as a compensation and reward to Comm. Cagiati for all the labour he has expended on it.

NUMISMATIC SOCIETIES, MUSEUMS, ETC.

AUSTRALIAN NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

The Annual Meeting of the above Society was held at the B.M.A. Building, 30 Elizabeth Street, Sydney, on Thursday, 22nd April, 1926, at 8 p. m., the President (Dr. G. H. Abbott) in the Chair.

The Minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

The Report of the Twelfth Annual Meeting of the Victorian Numismatic Society was placed upon the table.

It was moved by Mr. Amor and seconded by Mr. Green, that the Balance Sheet be accepted as read.

The Hon. Secretary read the Annual Report. Moved by Mr. Green and seconded by Mr. Amor, that the Report be received.

The President declared the Office-bearers and Council already nominated, elected.

Mr. A. W. Green promised to act as Corresponding Secretary till the office is filled.

The Hon. Secretary reported the resignation of membership of Mr. P. Larsen, the Rev. D. J. Finn, and Miss Holloway.

The resignations were accepted with regret, and it was resolved that the retiring members be asked to attend the meetings as visitors.

Dr. Gordon MacLeod, of 175 Macquarie Street, was elected a member of the Society.

Some Numismatic papers of special interest were received from Mr. Hunt Deacon, F.R.N.S. of the Numismatic Section, Art Gallery, Adelaide, S.A., including a paper entitled, "The Constitutional Sous France 1793-1795," to be read at a forth-coming meeting of the Society.

Mr. Deacon was recently elected a Fellow of the Royal Numismatic Society and a Member of the British Numismatic Society.

After the Presidential Address, the President read his "Notes on some Interesting Australian Medals." In this interesting and instructive address the Doctor brought before the members some important and varied incidents of Australian life and history commemorated upon medals and disclosed many new view points in the fascinating study of numismatics.

The President illustrated his address with an exhibit of Australian medals of great variety and interest.

Dr. G. H. Abbott's exhibit:

Mr. Chitty's Medal commemorating the Centenary of Australia's first coinage. — Cessation of Transportation. — Hanks and Lloyds took Sydney Railway. — N.S.W. Railway Jubilee 1905. — Dunbar Medal. — Dunbar Medal (2). — Galatea Medal. — Commonwealth Fleet. The Reid Medal. — Soudan Medal. — Departure for the Soudan. — General Gordon. — General Gordon (2). — Return from the Soudan. — George Coppin Medal. — Beach Champion Sculler. — Sandy, Queensland. — Billi, Victoria. — Ricketty Dick. — Sir Hercules Robinson. — Sir H. B. Loch. — Governor Duff. — Proclamation Medal of Western Australia. — Lord Hopetoun. — Mayor of Newtown. — Melbourne Exhibition. — International Exhibition Melbourne. — N.S.W. International Exhibition. — Shoalhaven Agricultural and Horticultural Association.

Dr. Abbott also exhibited a series of photographs of coins.

Mr. W. Amor exhibited a very handsome Medal in gold. This was the J. P. Franki Memorial Medal executed by Mr. Amor and produced at the establishment. Mr. Amor gave a most interesting description of the circumstances surrounding the production of this medal and the details of striking; mentioning, among other things, that it was the sole specimen struck. Other beautiful specimens of his own work carrying all the marks of excellence that are associated with his name were exhibited.

Other medals by Mr. Amor on exhibit were. — Metropolitan Board of Water Supply and Sewerage. — Arthur Yates Reliable Seeds. — Royal Shipwreck Medal.

Mr. W. J. McNeill exhibited a fine series of Australian Medals, including Commem. Agric. Soc. N.S.W. — Sydney Internat. Exhib. 1871. — Galatea Medal 1867. — Confed. Commonwealth 1901. — Commem. NUMISMATIC SOCIETY OF VICTORIA.

There was a good average attendance of members at the June meeting presided over by the President A. S. Kenyon Esq., and a fair amount of business disposed of followed by the usual discussions on matters of Numismatic interest and exhibits. The number of the latter was smaller than usual, but the accompanying notes made some compensation, reference to this exhibitors are requested in addition to supplying a description of the coins and whenever possible some information about them.

Under the head of general business the principal item discussed was subject of a new meeting place. The president announced that the Society for Protection to Animals had kindly offered the use of a room in their building at a suitable rental. It was finally resolved to accept the offer and prepare for an early move. Since the meeting the S.P.A. building has been sold and they have acquired a new site. The council at next meeting to be able to give members definite information as to when the removal will take place and the date of the opening meeting. In the meantime the arrangements made for this month will have been cancelled, and the next meeting will be held as usual at Detmold Buildings.

The formation of a Numismatic Society in Adelaide was announced. Members expressed their pleasure at the foundation of the Numismatic Society of South Australia and extend their hearty good wishes to the members and officers for its future success.

The suggestion in a letter from Mr. J. Hunt Deacon towards an amalgamation or federation of the three Australian Societies in some form was discussed. It was thought that in any case a closer connection might be arranged between them by which an exchange of papers and publications might be made or papers published jointly. The matter was postponed for further discussion.

EXHIBITS.

Mr. E.S. Anthony as, demonstrating the close alliance between History and Numismatics and how necessary one is to the other, showed several coins bearing portraits of men who stand out as famous in history. They were: Alexander the Great, Mark Antony, William the Conqueror, Edward the First, Napoleon I, Paul Kruger and Wilhelm II. Mr. Anthony supplied a series of short interesting notes concerning each of these famous coins. Another interesting exhibit was a 50 years old £1 bank note issued by the Provincial and Suburban Bank Ltd. Melbourne.

Mr. F. Gardner showed a medal in commemoration of the restoration of St. Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin. Obv. Portrait of Sir Benjamin Lee Guinness with name as legend; Rev. View of St. Patrick's Cathedral with date 1864. It was accompanied by notes on the foundation of the building itself, the institution of the Most Illustrious Knights of St. Patrick, stating that the restoration cost £150,000, the expense being borne by Sir Benjamin Lee Guinness.

THE GOLDEN TREE.

When removing stones from around a tree, Pat McGinn, Cartronkey, Ballinalee, Co. Longford, found a box filled with gold coins. His opinion is that the coins were there since the Danish invasion. Irish Times, 19 June 1926.

WANTED—NEW MONEY.

A CRITICISM OF OUR SILVER COINS.

Sir Charles Oman, Chichele Professor of Modern History at Oxford, since the unhappy legislation of 1920, when a Chancellor of the Exchequer who is now a Foreign Secretary, introduced the present half-base-metal series of coins, there have been intermittent protests at short intervals against the currency of the realm.

One set of criticisms is levelled against its faulty composition, the other against its faulty art. Both have very good justification for the one or the other.

The experiment of mixing nickel with silver in the proportion of 10 to 90 was justified in 1920 by the plea that silver had gone up to such an unprecedented price — 88 pence to the ounce — that pure silver coinage would be unprofitable. It was urged in reply that the silver coinage would be very short, and that it was only necessary to suspend its issue for a few months, at the end of which silver would have fallen to a more normal quotation, and coinage on a profitable scale would be more feasible.

The Chancellor persisted, the Act was passed, and within nine months the criticisms were justified, for the price of silver had fallen to 40 pence. As now for two years hovered between 29 and 31 pence an ounce, that a currency of the pure metal standard could have been issued at a profit to the State ever since 1921.

But the unnecessary character of the new base-metal coinage was not the most striking point. For metallurgic reasons, of which the Chancellor was not dreamed, the mixed metals proved absolutely intractable when coined.

THE BROWN FLORINS.

The first issues, those of 1920, turned brown all over after some little time, so that they were often mistaken for coppers, the florin looking like a penny, the sixpence like a farthing. This queer chemical phenomenon is said to have been caused by the use of impure second-hand nickel from military stores at Woolwich as the alloy.

Much complaint being made by the public, a second experiment was made in 1921-2 with purer nickel and some other slight changes in composition. But now the metals refused to "bind" — the surface of the coins flaked off, their rims became split, and occasionally they "came to pieces in your hand" — as the housemaid said of the milk jug. But where actual breakage did not occur, this issue tended to become of a sickly yellow in spots and blotches, especially on the King's head.

Further protests did not make Chancellors of the Exchequer give up the game of adulteration. Mr. Ramsay MacDonald's nominee for the post tried a third form of base-metal, and alloy mainly consisting of copper placed in the core of the coin, while the silver was heavily laid on the surface. The issue of 1924 looked much brighter and more attractive than its predecessors, but has the fatal defect of displaying its real composition when it has had some hard wear. The copper core begins to show in a pale red patch on the King's cheek and ear, and after a year or two of further usage will undoubtedly be visible over the whole of his head.

Silver is now costing in bulk 29 pence an ounce and pure-metal coins of the old standard could be coined at a splendid profit to the State. Why is not the wretched experiment of 1920, the result of a wholly unjustifiable panic, abandoned? Even the Irish Free State is coining silver of a much better standard than our own, and the Soviet's roubles are of a still higher quality.

BETTER AND WORSE.

The second criticism on our coinage, as it now exists, does not start with Sir Austen Chamberlain's debasement of 1920, but goes back to the reign of Queen Victoria and the year 1887. Down to that date the silver currency of Great Britain might vie in beauty with that of any other civilized country.

Wyon and Pistrucci, who designed its types, were great artists. But for some unhappy reason the engraving of the dies for the great Jubilee coinage of 1887 was entrusted to one Boehm, whose taste was poor and whose methods of execution were bad. The last Victorian issue, that of 1893, was a trifle better, but the Edwardian and Georgian series of 1902 and 1911 went back to the level of Boehm's atrocities. The half-crown and florin were in both cases particularly bad designs for their reverses.

No one could deny that the productions of the official designers of the Mint had been unsatisfactory during the whole of the last two reigns. And the Chancellor of the Exchequer was at last induced to appoint a committee to investigate the causes of artistic decay and to endeavour to find new types and new artists.

Their work has now progressed to something near fruition, as new trial-pieces have been struck for every denomination from the crown down to the threepenny piece. At least two essays or samples for each coin have been executed from among the designs of many competitors.

Some of them are an immense improvement on anything that has been seen at the Mint since the middle of the reign of Queen Victoria. Others, in my humble opinion, are not.

CHRISTMAS-BOXES.

But by selection a very handsome set of new design can be got together, and I sincerely hope that such of them as Mr. Winston Churchill approves may be with us by next Christmas, when the Mint always issues a vast flood of new silver to the banks — I suppose because Christmas-boxes look more attractive when administered in the shape of white and glittering coins, rather than in old and battered ones. The crown-piece is a particularly pleasant thing to receive — far more convincing than two half-crowns!

But if we are to have a new coinage in regard to types, why should we not also have new coinage in regard to purity of metal, which should revert to the time-honoured standard of the whole period from Queen Elizabeth to 1920? Mr. Winston Churchill has the chance of combining beauty with practical improvement as the old poet said: "Omne tulit punctum qui miscuit utile dulci."

MEDALS COMMEMORATIVE OF BRITISH HISTORY.

Medals relating to John Law.

John Law, the famous financier and speculator, was born in Edinburgh 1671. In 1694, having killed his opponent in a duel, he was compelled to leave Scotland, and after wandering about Italy for some years, he went in 1715 to Paris, where he shortly afterwards started with great success a private bank. His gigantic financial schemes and his monetary visions captivated the Regent, who established in 1718 the Royal Bank of France, with Law as Director-General. He also appointed him Comptroller-General of Finances.

In 1719 Law floated the great bubble Mississippi Scheme, which failed in the next year, and plunged thousands of families into ruin. Law was in consequence compelled to quit France, and retired to Brussels, and afterwards to Venice, where he died in poverty 1729.

The Mississippi Scheme 1716-1720.

A financial scheme proposed by John Law to the French Government whereby he himself was to be the sole creditor of the nation, and was to be allowed to issue paper money to ten times the value of the National Debt — that is, he relieved the nation of 2080 million sterling on the right of issuing paper money to the value of 2.080 million pounds. The Regent was so charmed with the scheme that he gave Law permission to open at once The Royal Bank of France, and to issue his notes. The Bank received deposits, discounted bills, gave promissory notes, all in paper. It was a prodigious success, and the Regent gave 'the Royal Bank' the exclusive right of coining money, transferred to it the old East India Company, and granted it the exclusive trade of Louisiana on the Banks of the Mississippi. A £ 500 share was now worth £ 10.000 and John Law was made Comptroller General of France. In 1720 the scheme exploded and 20 shillings would have purchased £ 160.000 worth of Law's Notes. The nation was well nigh ruined.

* "Four French 40-gun frigates, lying at anchor in Dunkirk roads, were attacked about midnight by the 30-gun corvette Dart, Capt. Patrick Campbell, with two brigs and four fire-ships. The Dart, after being hailed by the outermost frigate, passed on unmolested until she came abreast of the third ship, with which she exchanged broadsides, and then reaching the innermost, — the Désirée — ran her on board, the jibboom passing under the frigate's forestay. Lieutenant James M' Dermeit, at the head of fifty men immediately sprang upon her forecabin, and in a short time gained possession of the upper deck. Lieut. W.J. Pearce speedily arriving with a second division, soon reduced the enemy to submission; and in fifteen minutes from the commencement of the attack, the Désirée was under way."

— Anholt 27th March 1811 (Masters Mate). RR. E.F. 15 » »

.. "The island of Anholt, in the Cattegat, garrisoned by 380 Marines, under Capt Robert Torrens, commanded by Capt Wilkes Maurice, R.N. the governor of the island, was attacked by upwards of 1000 Danish troops disembarked from a flotilla of 12 transports and 12 gun-boats.

As the day opened, the Danes took post on the northern side of the island, under shelter of the sand-hills and shortly afterwards made an assault on the British force. The incessant fire from the batteries and from the Anholt schooner, anchored close to the shore drove the enemy from their shelter of the sand-hills; and finding it impossible to advance or retreat, hung out a flag of truce, offering to submit upon certain terms; but nothing less than unconditional surrender was accepted. Upon this the troops on the south side, finding no means to retreat, also laid down their arms.

The flotilla was pursued by the Tartar frigate and Sheldrake brig, and the principal part captured or destroyed."

— Off Tamatave, 20 May 1811 (served on the Astrea). R. E.F. 12 10 »

.. On 20th May Capt C.M. Schomberg, in the 38-gun frigate Astrea, with 36-gun frigates Phoebe and Galatea, 18-gun brig Racehorse, off Tamatave discovered the French 40-gun frigates Renommée, Commodore Roquebert, Clorinde, and Néréide. At noon they formed in line, the Commodore placing his ship in the centre and next to the Clorinde, and stood along the land. The Astrea when nearly a mile ahead of her consorts, and abreast of the Renommée.

— Pelagosa, 29th Novr 1811. R.	E.F.	12	10	»

.. The 38-gun frigates Alceste and Active with the Unité, 32-gun, were off the isle of Augusta, in the Adriatic, when three sail were discovered, and chased.

These were the French 40-gun frigates Pauline and Pomone, and frigate-built store ship Persanne of 26-guns. The Persanne stood away to the north-east and the Unité was detached in pursuit of her.

At 30 minutes past noon, the Unité and Persanne commenced firing their chase-guns; but it was not until 1 h. 20 m. that the Alceste, then going above nine knots with the wind on the larboard quarter, was enabled to fire with effect at the Pomone. Pressing forward under a crowd of sail to attack the French Commodore, the Alceste, when abreast of the Pomone, exchanged broadsides and a shot from that ship carried away her maintopmast. The Alceste dropped astern; but the Active having gained a position on the starboard and lee quarter of the Pomone, brought her to close action. The Pauline tacked and stood for the weather beam of the Alceste; and those ships became closely engaged until 3 h. 5 m. p.m. when the 18-gun brig Kingfisher approaching fast, the French commodore set all sail, and stood to the westward. Just as the Alceste was about to open her fire upon the Pomone, the French ship's main and mizen masts came down by the board, and she immediately surrendered.

Neither of the British frigates being in a condition to pursue the Pauline, the French commodore escaped."

— Rosario 27th March 1812. RR. E.F. 25 » »

.. Only 7 bars issued.
The ten-gun brig Rosario Captain B. Harvey, cruising about four or five miles from Dieppe, on March 27th observed twelve brigs and a lugger standing alongshore. This was a division of the Boulogne flotilla, bound to Cherbourg. Each brig carried three long twenty-four-pounders and an eight-inch brass howitzer, with a crew of fifty-men. The Rosario made sail to cut off the leewardmost of the brigs, but the whole formed in line, and engaged the Rosario in succession, and afterwards bore down to endeavour to lay her on board.

The sixteen-gun brig Griffon Capt. G. Trollope, appearing in the offing, Captain Harvey summoned her to his assistance, and immediately his signal was answered, about forty minutes past noon again engaged the rear of the enemy, who were endeavouring to get into the port of Dieppe. About half past one p.m.; being to windward, the Rosario ran into the middle of the flotilla, drove two of the brigs on board each other, and backing her main topsail, engaged them within musket shot until they got clear, and then stood on and engaged a third brig, which was soon dismasted, and compelled to anchor.

Passing her, the Rosario drove the next brig on shore and bearing up to leeward, ran another on board and carried her, being then no more than three quarters of a mile from the beach. Taking his prize in tow, Captain Harvey bore away beyond the reach of the batteries, and met the Griffon coming up under a press of sail, to take part in the action. Captain Trollope engaged and drove ashore another brig in St Aubin's Bay, under a heavy fire from the batteries, after which Captain Harvey who was repairing his damages, signalled the Griffon to attack the part of the flotilla which had come to an anchor. Captain Trollope ran his brig between one of the vessels of the enemy and the land, laid her on board, cut her cables, and brought her out under a furious fire from the batteries. Finding the Griffon was too much disabled in her rigging to renew the attack although his prisoners equalled his crew in number, Captain Harvey ran alongside the brig he had previously dismasted, which unknown to him had just been abandoned by her crew, and brought her away. With their three prizes the Rosario and Griffon made sail for the Downs, while the French Commodore, with his seven remaining vessels entered Dieppe. In this really gallant achievement, the only loss sustained by the British was one midshipman and four men wounded on board the Rosario.

Captains Harvey and Trollope were promoted to post rank, and given the ribands of Companions of the Bath.

60188 — Victorious with Rivoli. R. E.F. 10 » »

.. On the 21st Feby., 1812. The 74-gun ship Victorious mounting 82-guns, Capt John Talbot and 18-gun brig Weazel, Capt. John Wm Andrew, cruising off Venice discovered and chased the French 74-gun ship Rivoli, mounting 80-guns, Capt. J.B. Barré; 16-gun brigs Jena and Mercure, and Mamelouck of 8 guns, with two gun-boats.

The whole had sailed that morning from Venice bound to the port of Pola, in Istria.

The Weazel overtook the Mercure and, after engaging within pistol-shot for half an hour, the French brig blew up. The Victorious having arrived within pistol-shot of the larboard quarter of the Rivoli, a furious combat commenced, the two ships standing towards the gulf of Trieste with royals set and courses brailled up. In the early part of the action Captain Talbot received a severe contusion from a splinter, which nearly deprived him of his sight, and the command devolved upon Lieutenant Thos. L. Peake. After the action had continued three hours, and the Rivoli had become unmanageable Lieut. Peake recalled the Weazel which stood across the bows of the Rivoli, and raked her. Meanwhile the Victorious maintained a steady cannonade, and shot away the mizen-mast of the French ship.

In another quarter of an hour the Rivoli fired a lee gun, and hailed the Victorious that she had struck.

Her loss amounted to 400 killed and wounded out of a crew of 810 men. The Victorious had 27 killed, her captain and 98 wounded.

60189 — Northumberland 22nd May 1812 (Clerk). E.F. 12 » »

.. On the 19th May the 74-gun ship Northumberland. Capt. the Hon. Henry Hotham, and the Growler gun brig, Lieut. John Weeks, being about 10 miles to the southward of the Isle of Groix, with the wind very light from W. by N., the 40-gun frigates Ariadne and Andromaque, with the Mamelouck brig, were discovered under all sail, steering for the port L'Orient. The Northumberland made sail round the south-east end of Groix, and was enabled to fetch to windward of the harbour, of L'Orient before the enemy could reach it. At 2 h. 50 m. p.m. the wind having freshened from W.N.W. the Ariadne, Andromaque and Mamelouck, thus cut off from their port, formed in close line ahead, bore up under a press of sail, with the intention under cover of the numerous batteries, to pass between the British 74 and the shore. The Northumberland then stood close in to Pointe de Pierre-Laye and took her station until the enemy arrived abreast of her. The shoalness of the water preventing Capt. Hotham laying the frigates on board, he directed the ship to be steered parallel to them; and when at the distance of about 400 yards opened her broadside, receiving in return the fire of the two frigates and three batteries on the shore. In order to prevent the French frigates hauling outside the Graul rock the Northumberland had not only to steer sufficiently near the rock to leave no room for her opponents to pass, but to prevent running upon it herself and she thus skilfully passed within the distance of her own length of the danger. The enemy being thus compelled to steer inside the rock, they all three took the ground at about 3 h. 54 m. p.m. on the ridge extending from the Graul to the shore. The Northumberland, leaving her opponents to the effects of the falling tide, hauled off to repair damages. At 5 h. p.m., the Growler gun-brig joined and opened an occasional fire upon the grounded vessels.

At 5 h. 30 m., the Northumberland stood in, and anchoring, opened her fire upon the enemy's ship. In return she received a heavy fire from three batteries, and a few shots from the Andromaque until 6 h. p.m., when the frigate caught fire in the foretop, and flames spread so rapidly that the main and mizen masts went by the board at 6 h. 45 m.

At 8 h. p.m. the Andromaque blew up, and a few minutes afterwards the Northumberland anchored beyond the reach of the batteries. At 10 h. p.m. the Ariadne was seen to be on fire, and at about 2 h. 35 m. she exploded.

The loss of the Northumberland amounted to five men killed; one lieutenant and 27 men wounded. A mortified spectator of this gallant achievement, was a French 74-gun ship lying in the port of L'Orient, with sail bent, and top gallant-yards across, but which, from the state of the wind, could do no more than send her boats to assist in removing the crews of the wrecks.

60190 — Shannon Wh Chesapeake. E.F. 25 " "

* The 38-gun frigate, Shannon (1066 tons), Captain P.B.V. Broke, mounting 49 guns with a crew of 330 men and boys at about 30 m. p.m. stood close to Boston lighthouse; and shortly after 1 h. p.m. the United States frigate Chesapeake (1135 tons) Captain James Lawrence, mounting 50 guns with a complement of 376 men and boys was seen sailing out of the harbour with a fair wind. The two frigates continued to stand out until they had reached the distance of about 18 miles from Boston lighthouse, when the Shannon rounded to. The short space of eleven minutes had only elapsed between the firing of the first gun and the boarding; and in four minutes more, the Chesapeake was the Shannon's prize. For further particulars see Tancred, p. 158.

60193 — Cyane 16th Jany. 1814. RR. E.F. 25 " "

* The French 40-gun frigates Iphigénie and Alcène, were cruising off the Canary islands, when discovered at 7 a.m. by the 74-gun ship Venerable Capt. James Andrew Worth, bearing the flag of Rear-Admiral P.C. Durham, in company with the 22-gun ship Cyane, and the Jason, French letter of marque they had captured. After a chase throughout the day, the Venerable arrived within hail of the Alcène the leewardmost frigate, at 6.15 p.m., and had opened her fire as the guns came to bear, when the Alcène put her helm, up and under all sail laid the British 74 on board. A very short struggle decided her fate, and before 6.25 the French colours were hauled down by the British boarders headed by Captain Worth. In this short conflict the Alcène, out of a crew of 319, had 32 men killed and 50 wounded, including among the latter the gallant Captain Alexander Ducrest de Villeneuve. The loss of the Venerable consisted of 2 men killed and 4 wounded. As soon as prisoners were moved, the Cyane and Jason made sail in pursuit of the Iphigénie. In the evening of the 19th the Venerable was fast approaching the fugitive frigate, and at day light on the 20th had arrived within two miles of her. A running fight was maintained until 8 a.m., when after throwing overboard her boats and cutting away her anchors without effect, the Iphigénie struck her colours without sustaining any loss of men. When part of the crew of the Iphigénie was brought on board the Venerable, the prisoners from the Alcène were so enraged at them for not having attempted to board the Venerable on the other side on Jany. 16th, that Admiral Durham was obliged to call up his marines with fixed bayonets, and station them between the parties to keep the peace.

60229 The Order of the Blue and Orange 1727. Gold Badge. Obv. An octagonal altar, the sides decorated with an orange, and inscribed QUA DI NOV (The fourth day of November); on the top. NON DEFICIT ALTER (Another is not wanting), above is a shield, gules, bearing the HANOVERIAN Horse within a radiated Garter inscribed GLO: PRI: AUG: (The glorious 1st of August). R. Upon a circular altar, decorated with a human skull, are five arrows passing through an electoral crown with a fillet across them inscribed, VIS UNITA FORTIOR (Strength more powerful by union) All within a circle inscribed, MINOR EST QVI INVIDET (He who is envious is inferior). Floral border on both sides. R. E.F. 10

* This piece is decorated with an ornamental loop and drop. It is the badge of a club called the "Order of Blue and Orange" which was formed about the year 1727 by officers of the King's Own Regiment of Foot. It was established to commemorate the principles of the Revolution and Succession of the House of Hanover, which are indicated by the Orange of Holland and the star of Brunswick with the respective dates of the landing of William III. and the accession of George I. The reverse points out the advantages of union and by placing the arrows within the circle of the Electoral crown intimates that the Brunswick should be the bond of such union. Med. III. Bronze Badge, Hunza-Nagar 1891 presented by the Maharajah of Kashmir. V.F. 1 5 "

* The forts of Nilt were assaulted and captured after very desperate fighting in which Captain Aylmer and Colonel Durand were severely wounded, and in the moment of victory the command passed out of the latter's hand. In two hours the place was captured, but owing to the failure to advance 4 British officers had been lost and nearly 40 men killed and wounded after the successful assault.

The cliff opposite Nilt, a very difficult position, was next scaled after "a little Dogra sepoy named Nagdu one night succeeded in climbing 1,200 feet up the cliff, and found a practicable path".

Then the place was stormed by the men under the command of Captain Colin Mackenzie of the Seaforth's. Lieutenant Manners Smith led a little body of Kashmir troops up a cliff 1,000 feet high, and within two days Nagar was occupied, and the Hunza chief with Uzr Khan fled across the frontier. It is noteworthy that from the men of the district against whom we had fought, Colonel Durand raised the Hunza-Nagar levies who later fought so well for us.

THE ROMAN IMPERIAL COINAGE.

VOL. II (VESPASIAN TO HADRIAN).

BY: Harold MATTINGLY, M.A. and Edward A. SYDENHAM, M.A.

XVI and 568 pages, 16 plates, crown 8vo, sewed.

The Publishers have pleasure in announcing that the second volume is now ready in which the Editors have had the valuable help of L. A. Lawrence Esq. F.S.A. for the coins of Hadrian. It has proved to be of very much greater bulk than Vol. I; and as it had already appeared that the former volume was under priced an increase cannot be avoided.

Vol. II, is therefore priced at 26s net. and from 1st January, 1927, Vol. I will be priced at 20s net. Until then it is on sale at 16s net. With the completion of the second volume it becomes possible to offer a forecast of the future progress of the work.

Vol. III, will comprise the period from Antoninus to Commodus and will probably make one large volume. Vol. IV will carry on the story from Pertinax to the reign of Aemilian and will probably be issued in two parts. Vol. V will complete the period from Valerian to Diocletian.

Vol. V, in which the editors are fortunate to have the assistance of Mr. Percy H. Webb, will be the next to appear. Owing to its length it will be necessary to publish it in two parts with a continuous pagination: the first describing the issues of the empire, the second those of the rebels in Gaul, Britain, etc.

It is hoped that Vol. V, Part I, will be ready in the Spring of 1927. Part 2 about the end of the same year. Vol. III should follow in 1928-9. Vol. IV in 1930-31.

The Publishers still hope to be able to issue the volumes at an average price of one guinea each, but it is impossible to fix the price beforehand of any particular volume.

Now ready.

AES GRAVE

A Study of the Cast Coinages of Rome and Central Italy

BY

EDWARD A. SYDENHAM M.A.

Quarto, 145 pp., 28 plates, boards, linen back and corners.

The Aes Grave forms the first chapter of the long story of the Roman Coinage but hitherto no complete account of it has been set forth in English. The well known works of Garrucci and Haeberlin are unwieldy in size and almost prohibitive in price. The present study surveys the whole field from a thoroughly scientific point of view, contains a corpus of over 350 pieces, and is illustrated with a series of plates from recent Sale Catalogues which should meet all practical requirements. The price has been put as low as possible, for a work of this class, in the hope that it may reach all who are interested in the fascinating problems of the origins of the famous coinage of ancient Rome.

Just published.

NOTES ON THE MYTHOLOGICAL TYPES
ON ROMAN REPUBLICAN COINS.

THE MYTH OF THE NINE MUSES.

The types on the Reverse of the denarii of Q. Pomponius Musa issued about 67 B.C. are examples of the custom then common of making a pun on the name of the Moneyer. Nothing apparently is known of this mint officer, but if the choice of the Muses was not merely meant as a pun on his name we may charitably suppose that he may have been a lover of the arts symbolized by the Nine Muses.

The coins are illustrated in Mr. Grueber's B. Mus. Cat. on p. 441, and in Babelon's work Vol. II, pp. 361-365. It is very probable that these types may have been copied from the statues placed in the Temple of Hercules in Rome by M. Fulvius Nobilior, who brought them from Ambracia when he was censor in 179 B.C. as Livy tells as in his H.N., Bk XXXV, c. X.

On all the coins of Pomponius Musa bearing a figure of a Muse on the Reverse, a Head of Apollo was placed on the Obverse as the patron of the Arts. This association of Apollo with the Muses probably arose at Delphi, where a shrine for their worship existed. In close connection with this series of nine coins is a denarius bearing on the Reverse a figure of Hercules Musagetes, or Musarum, standing to right, playing a lyre, his lion's skin hangs from his shoulders, and his club rests against his left leg: the legend, HERCVLES MUSARUM. He is mentioned by Suetonius In Vita August., 29 and in Ovid's Fasti, VI, 799, and Pliny, 35, 10, 36.

The order in which Hesiod mentions the Muses is that adopted.

I. Clio, Κλειώ (from κλέω to make famous), the Muse of History, is represented on the coins standing to left, leaning on a cippus, holding a roll or volume: the legend on all of these coins bearing a Muse is the same, Q. POMPONI. MUSA.

II. Euterpe, Εὐτέρπη (the well pleasing) Muse of lyric poetry, stands to right, holding a double flute.

III. Thalia, Θάλια (good cheer) Muse of Comedy, stands to left holding a mask and Pedom; she leans on a cippus.

IV. Melpomene, Μελπομένη (from μέλω, sing) the Muse of Tragedy, stands facing, her head turned to the right, holding a club in her right hand and a mask in her left.

V. Terpsichore, Τερψιχόρη (from τέρψις delight and χορη dance) Muse of dancing, stands to right, holding a plectrum in her right hand and a lyre in her left.

VI. Erato, Ἐρατώ (έρω lovely) the muse of love songs, stands to right, her head facing, playing a lyre with her right hand on the strings.

VII. Polymnia (contraction from πολυμνία she of the many hymns or subjects) the Muse of Rhetoric, stands to right bearing a lyre in her left hand and a plectrum in the right hand which hangs down. The type is very similar to that of Terpsichore, no. 5, but differs chiefly in the size of the lyre, which is larger in the coins of Polymnia.

VIII. Urania, Οὐρανία (Heavenly muse) the Muse of Astronomy stands to left, touching a globe on a cippus, with a wand in her right hand.

IX. Calliope, Καλλιόπη the beautiful voice (ὄψ), the Muse of Epic Poetry. She stands to the right resting her lyre on a cippus and playing thereon with her right hand.

It seems most probable that the figures of the Muses on these denarii were copied from the statues in the temple of Hercules Musagetes who himself is represented on the Reverse of one of this series. Those who wish to see how the Muses were represented in other places may be interested in the drawings of the statues in the "Répertoire de la Statuaire grecque et romaine" by Salomon Reinach (Vol. V, p. 130); and for studies of draped figures on pp. 374-379. Statues of Muses leaning on a cippus may be seen in the Louvre and at Naples.

Many portrait statues of ladies have been described as "a Roman lady as a Muse", a good photograph of such a statue may be seen in the work "Six Greek Sculptors" by E. A. Gardner.

Cephisodotus, the father or elder brother of Praxiteles, made a famous group of the Muses of Mount Helicon, and Philiskos of Rhodes was the author of another celebrated group of the Muses which was much admired in Rome.

The Myth of the Muses appears to be a development of that of the nymphs who are spoken of by the poets as exercising similar powers. The nymphs represent the earlier child-like impersonation of mysterious power associated with springs or fountains of water with which the Muses are frequently connected. In the Odyssey (XXIV, 62) at the burial of Achilles, Agamemnon describes how "the daughters of the ancient one of the sea stood around", and "all the nine Muses one to the other replying with sweet voices began the dirge". In the Iliad (II, 491) the Muses are spoken of as personalities "knowing all things". The Odyssey begins with an invocation "to tell of that man of many wiles so ready at need". Mount Helicon on Boeotia was celebrated for the spring called Aganippe which inspired those who drank thereof, and on the hill Leibetheum, which was part of the range of Helicon, were the springs sacred to Nymphs and Muses (Strabo, IX, p. 410 and X, p. 471). Pausanias also (IX, 28) gives a description of Helicon as the home of the Muses. The spring called Hippocrene was also there near to the grove of the Muses, and the little town of Ascrea, the home of Hesiod, was at the foot of the mountain. To the rough early Thracians the Muses were mere water nymphs. The idea of a Muse did not arise among such rude barbarians but among these who later supplanted them.

In the VIIth idyl of Theocritus l. 91 seq. we find Nymphs and Muses mentioned together in the lines, "Dear Lycidas many another song the Nymphs have taught me also, . . . nay, listen as thou art dear to the Muses".

According to Varro the Nymphs are the Muses, for both are associated with springs of water.

The Muses connected with mount Olympus on the borders of Thessaly and Macedonia were called Pierides as dwellers in Pieria in that neighbourhood (Pindar, Olym., X, 117, and Pyth., I, 29) where are springs of water. The name Pimpleides also was given from a spring in Pieria (Anthol., P. V., 201. Strabo, 330, 410).

At Thebes the Muses were associated with the fountain Dirke which Pindar says they caused to gush forth (Isth., VI, 74). Apollodorus said Melpomene the Muse was the mother of the Sirens (I, 3, 4, p. 10, Leipsic Ed.) who dwelt in the water. The Muses were associated by the Roman poets with the fountain on the Acrocorinthus called Pierene, and as Pegasus, the horse of the Muses drank there, the Roman poets considered it sacred to the Muses (Statius, Silv., I, IV, 27, Pers. Proleg., 4). Pindar called Corinth "the city of Peirene" (Ol., XIII, 86). Among the Romans Livy (B^k, 9, 21) connected the Muses with the spring of Egeria.

Various mythical poets called Orpheus the son of Calliope, and Thamyris of Erato.

Hesiod next to Homer is the most ancient writer who mentions the Muses by the names known to the moneyer Pomponius. In the first few lines of his Theogony, Hesiod both addresses and eulogises the Muses, to whose command and inspiration he attributed his power to sing, given when he was a shepherd on mount Helicon. He begins thus, "From the Muses of Helicon begin we to sing . . . who also with delicate feet dance about the violet-hued fount and altars of the mighty son of Cronos . . . who are wont to perform choral dances beautiful and lovely. . . . But first of all the goddesses, the Olympian Muses, daughters of ægis-bearing Zeus addressed me in a speech such as this, Ye shepherds dwelling afar . . . we know how to sing many false things like to true and also if we wish to utter true words, they breathed into me a voice divine that I might sing of both the future and the past. And they bade me to hymn the race of the immortals, but always to commence and end with a eulogy of themselves".

Hesiod (l. 77-9) names them "Clio, Euterpe, Thalia and Melpomene, Terpsichore, and Erato, Polymnia, Urania and Calliope and she is preferred before the others". . . . Line 104 is the conclusion of the Proem, "Farewell, daughters of Zeus and give a joyous song". Then begins the main subject of his poem. There are many interesting references to the Muses in Pindar.

St. Augustine in his "de doctrina Christiana" B^k II, gives the following account of the origin of the nine Muses according to Varro, born 116 B. C. died 28 B. C.

"We must not listen to the falsities of heathen superstition which represent the nine Muses as daughters of Jupiter and Memory. Varro refutes these, and I doubt whether any one can be found among them more curious or more learned in such matters. He says that a certain state (I don't recollect the name) ordered from each of three artists a set of statues of the Muses to be placed as an offering in the Temple of Apollo, intending that which ever of the artists produced the most beautiful statues, they should select and purchase from him. It so happened that these artists executed their works with equal beauty, that all pleased the state, and that all were bought to be dedicated in the Temple of Apollo; and he says that afterwards Hesiod the poet gave names to them all.

It was not Jupiter, therefore, that begat the nine Muses but three artists created three each, and the state had originally given the order for three, not because it had seen them in visions, nor because they had presented themselves in that number to the eye of any of the citizens but because it was obvious to remark that all sound which is the material of song is by nature of three kind. For it is either produced by the voice... or by blowing as in the case of trumpets or flutes, or by striking as in the case of harps or drums."

Naevius, the early Latin poet born about 270 B.C., wrote "Novem Jovis concordēs filias sorores" of the Muses.

Cicero's account of the Muses is given in his work De Natura Deorum (III, 21). "As to the Muses there were at first four Thelxiope, Aoede, Arche and Meleta, daughters of the second Jupiter, afterwards there were nine, daughters of the third Jupiter and Mnemosyne; there were also nine others having the same names, born of Pierus and Antiopa, by the poets usually called Pierides and Pieriae." Ausonius who died circa 390 A.D. Epis IV says "Some reckon three, some eight, and others nine Muses"; and Servius ad Aen. I, 12, "Many say there are nine many eight, and many seven Muses". Arnobius, circa 303 A.D. adv. Gentes III, says, "We are told by Mnaseus that the Muses are the daughters of Heaven and Earth, others declare that they are Jove's by his wife Memory or Mens; some relate that they were virgins, others that they were matrons". In B^k IV, 15, "there were three Muses".

In B^k III, 21. "Are there songs sung and Music played in heaven, that the nine sisters may gracefully combine, and harmonize pauses and rhythms of tones?"

In B^k III, 37. "Myrtilus brings forward seven Muses, Crates eight, finally Hesiod enriching heaven and the stars with gods, comes forward with nine names."

How familiar these names were to the upper classes on Rome we see from the way in which Horace refers to them; as for instance to Euterpe and Polymnia in B^k I ode I of his Odes thus: "If neither Euterpe withholds her pipe, nor Polymnia disdains to tune the Lesbian Lyre". In Ode I, XII, "What man, what hero, O Clio, do you undertake to celebrate on the harp or the shrill pipe"? In III, iv, "Descend from heaven, Calliope, and come round with your pipe a lengthened strain, or if you had now rather, with your clear voice, or on the harp or lute of Phoebus". In I, xiv, "O Melpomene, on whom your father has bestowed a clear voice and the harp, teach me the mournful strain". In B^k IV the third Ode is to Melpomene.

Clio is referred to in the Virgilian Catalecta, XIII, 10, "Clio candida". In Eclog. VI, "My Thalia is the first who deigned to sport in Syracusan strain nor blushed to inhabit the woods". In the first line of Culex we see Thalia invoked. In Aen. VII, 37. "Come now Erato; I will unfold who were the kings", apparently confusing Erato with Clio. In Ciris 55 Polymnia is spoken of as loving truth. Calliope is invoked in Aen. IX, 525 "Calliope aid me while I sing".

Ovid treated the legend of the contest between the Muses and the Sirens in Metamorphoses B^k V, 200 seq. The Sirens being beaten lost their feathers which were assumed as ornaments by the Muses. In line 339 he makes Calliope the leader.

In Tristia, II, 21, the Muse is said to soften anger, and in line 354 "Musa jocosa mihi"; and many other passages but generally a mere mention adding no description of interest.

Calliope is mentioned in Trist. II, 568 and in Ibis 482. Met. V, 339; and Clio and Polymnia in Fasti V, 53 and VI, 801 and at end 811 "sia cecinit Clio". In Fasti V, 50-55, Polymnia, Clio, Thalia, and Urania all mentioned. Erato occurs in Fasti IV, 195 and 349. Ovid in the Tristia takes it for granted his readers were familiar with the nine Muses.

Naturally in the first few lines of his "Ars amatoria" (16) he called on Erato, "Now Erato; for you have the name of love". Among the early Latin races such powers of song were called Camenæ, a name derived from "Carmen", a song. Egeria was called a Camena. These old Latin Camenæ were called Muses as early as the time of Livius Andronicus, a Greek, probably of Tarentum circa 240 B.C. He is said to have died in 221 B.C.

Among the Mystical Hymns of Orpheus, No LXXXVI is addressed to the Muses and seems very like Plato's ideas. The references to the Muses in the works of Plato are the sources of those made by great writers in after ages.

In Cratylus 406 A, we have Plato's idea of the origin of the word Muse, which he derives from $\mu\omega\sigma\theta\alpha\iota$, inf. of $\mu\omega\mu\alpha\iota$, from the root $\mu\alpha$ representing the idea of eager desire, hence $\mu\omega\sigma\tau\alpha$ from $\mu\omega\sigma\tau\alpha$. Socrates is made to say, "The name of the Muses and of music would seem to be derived from $\mu\omega\sigma\theta\alpha\iota$, from their making philosophical enquiries". In Alcibiades (108 c.) the Muses are called "the goddess patronesses of Art and Music", and in Euthydemus (275 c.), He says "I ought to commence my story with an invocation of the Muses".

Three times in the Laws, Plato says "God gave us the Muses in pity for our toils", and in 672 that we should thank the Muses for our sense of harmony. In Laws III, 682 "we attain truth by the Muses", and in VI, 783 A the Muses are a help to us in combating the lusts of our lower nature; confer also Timæus 47 D. In VII, 96 F, there is need of the Muses to follow the education of gymnastics. Ion 536 A every poet is possessed by a Muse. The oldest ideas of the Muses are in Symposium 197 B, "the melody of the Muses is due to love", confer Phædrus 295 A "the madness of love" the greatest of heavenly blessings 265 B. The divine madness of Poetry is from the Muses. It is to Plato we owe many of the allusions to the Muses in more modern literature. Confer the interesting references in Dante's poems; Paradise II, 9; XII, 7; XXIII, 56. Purgat., I, 8. Shakespeare in Othello, II, 1, makes Iago say "but my Muse labours", and in Midsummer Night's Dream V, 1, he makes Lysander say, "The thrice three Muses mourning for the death of learning, late deceased in beggary." Milton in the 6th line of Paradise lost wrote "sing Heavenly Muse" (i.e. spirit who inspired Moses), and in Lycidas, "Begin then sisters of the sacred well, that from beneath the seat of Jove doth spring, Begin and somewhat loudly sweep the string... So may some gentle Muse. With lucky words favour my destined urn". In his Miscel. Poems, "But fie my wandering Muse, how thou dost stray", and in his Ode to the Nativity, "Say sacred Muse shall not thy sacred vein afford a present to the Infant God". In Milton's Poem at a Solemn Music he confused Sirens with Muses for "the harmonious sisters, voice and verse", were really Muses. Thalia and Erato occur in his Latin Liber Elegiarum.

Archbishop Trench "The prize of song" mentions them as in the lines: Hushed was not that stormy riot Till were heard the sacred Nine, Singing of the blissful quiet, In the happy seats divine".

THE COINS OF THE DUTCH EAST INDIES.

An Introduction to the Study of the Series (excluding those specially struck for India and Ceylon)

By SIR JOHN BUCKNILL M.A. (OXON).

B. Struck in the Netherlands.

Much silver and copper, but no gold, regular coinage was struck in the Netherlands for the special use of the Company in the Dutch East Indies.

Although no such coins are known bearing a date earlier than 1726 it would appear that in 1624 the Company obtained permission from the Provinces of Holland and Westfrisia to have prepared, at their respective Mints, Doits for the Company's use in its Oriental Possessions: the design arranged showed on the Obverse the Lion of Holland and on the Reverse the Arms of Batavia and the legend "BATAVIA COLONIA BELGICA": i.e. "BATAVIA (THE) DUTCH COLONY" (vide Dutch General Register No. 19, p. 16).

No coin of the above type is known and Mr. Schulman considers that it is not unlikely that none were ever made owing to the undoubted fact that the sanction of the States-General (i.e. Parliament) was not obtained for the minting of this proposed issue.

About a century later the Company, again without consulting the States-General, appears to have arranged with some of the Provincial Administrations (notably of Holland and Zeeland) to be allowed to have Doits struck, for its use in the East, at the mints of those Provinces: and such Doits (which are described later) of Holland and Zeeland dated 1726 are known. In the same year the Company, still without the assent of the States-General, having obtained the consent of the Provincial Governments of Holland, Zeeland and Westfrisia, gave an order to the mints of those Provinces for the production of the large silver pieces known as Ducatoons.

However, the Masters-General of the Mints of the United Provinces of the Netherlands objected, and, under date the 31st May 1726, despatched a report or complaint to the States-General against the Board of Governors of the Company. This complaint was to the effect that information had been received that the Company, without the permission of the States-General, had placed orders with the Provincial Mints of Holland, Zeeland and Westfrisia for the minting of Ducatoons of a design different to that which had been approved in 1659 as the official general design for the Ducatoon by the States-General; and that they, the complainants, feared that what had already taken place in the case of Doits would also occur with regard to Ducatoons; they suggested the drastic proposal that, until and unless the States-General should by Resolution otherwise decide, any Provincial Mint coining Ducatoons for the Company should be fined one thousand Ducatoons for every one so struck. This report was followed by a further communication from the Masters-General to the States-General dated July 15th 1726; in this the writers observe that the Provincial Council of Zeeland had on June 3rd 1726 definitely instructed its Mint authorities to strike One hundred thousand Ducatoons for the Company; on one side these pieces were to display the Company's monogram "V" underneath the arms of the Province and the Provincial motto "LUCTOR ET EMERGO" (i.e. "I strive and rise"); whilst on the other side was to be portrayed a Knight on horseback with the legend "MON(ETA): NOV(A): ORD(INUM): ZEL(ANDIÆ): IN USUM SOCIET(ATIS): INDIÆ ORIENTA(LIS)"; (i.e. "New coin of the Parliament of Zeeland for the use of the East India Company"); the writers contended that if such coins were put into circulation the Mint (being a Mint of the United Provinces) would assume the features of a private trading establishment.

On July 15th 1726 the States-General strongly warned the Council of Zeeland not to manufacture Ducatoons of such character.

On July 17th 1726 the Mint-Masters again wrote to the States-General informing that Body that the Mint at Dordrecht in the Province of Holland was also occupying itself in coining Ducatoons for the Company: they actually sent a specimen of the coin being produced there to the States-General. This coin on one side showed the Arms of the Province, underneath which was the monogram "V"; on it was inscribed the legend "VIGILATE DEO CONFIDENTES" (i.e. "Watch, trusting in God"). On the other side side was a legend "MON(ETA): HOLL(ANDIÆ) ET WESTFRIS(IÆ): IN USUM SOCIET(ATIS): INDIÆ ORIENT(ALIS)" i.e. ("Coin of Holland and Westfrisia for the use of the East India Company").

Mr. Schulman doubts if the record of this legend is quite correct; he thinks it most unlikely that a coin minted at Dordrecht in the Province of Holland should bear the names of two Provinces i.e. "HOLLANDIÆ ET WESTFRISIÆ": and particularly in view of the fact that the mint at Hoorn in the Province of Westfrisia was simultaneously (as will be seen later) producing or proposing to produce its own Ducatoons for the Company's use. Mr. Schulman considers (and no doubt rightly) that the words "ET WESTFRIS(IÆ)" did not actually appear on this Dordrecht piece.

In addition to this specimen the Mint-Masters also forwarded to the States-General drawings of the Ducatoons which were being prepared at the Zeeland and Westfrisia Mints.

Of the Zeeland coin a description has already been given. The Westfrisian piece showed on one side the arms of the Province with the monogram "V" below and the legend "DEUS: FORTIT(UDO): ET SPES NOSTRA" (i.e. "God is our strength and hope"); on the other side appeared the knight on horseback and the legend "MON(ETA): NO(VA): ORD(INUM): WESTFRIS(IÆ): IN USUM SOCIET(ATIS): INDIÆ ORIENT(ALIS)".

Upon receipt of this further information the States-General issued a peremptory order to the Mint-Masters at Dordrecht (Holland) and Hoorn (Westfrisia) instructing them not to produce such coins or to put them into circulation and they were also directed to inform the East India Company that its responsible officers must present themselves and appear before the States-General in order, presumably, to give an explanation of their behaviour. On August 31st 1726 Mr. Isaac Westerveen, the Dordrecht Mint-Master, wrote to the Masters-General that he would endeavour to recover such Ducatoons as had already been delivered to the Company and that they should be melted down together with any other such Ducatoons which had been produced but had not been sent out from the Mint. None of these unauthorized Ducatoons of the three Provinces have ever come to light; so their recall and melting-down must have been singularly effective: it is not, however, in the view of Mr. Schulman (to whom I am indebted for most of the above information) altogether impossible that a stray specimen may not yet be found. Whether the responsible officers of the Company did appear before the States-General or not is not certain; but the Company was powerful and important and the difficulties were overcome. In 1727 the Company formally applied to the States-General for permission to have minted, for its use in the East Indies, Ducatoons similar, generally, to the Ducatoons in currency in the Netherlands. The Company forwarded with its application a drawing of the piece proposed to be produced for it at the Dordrecht Mint in the Province of Holland; this displayed the legend "MON(ETA): FÆD(ERATARUM): BELG(II): PRO(VINCIARUM): HOLL(ANDIÆ) (or HOLL(ANDICA)): IN USUM SOCIET(ATIS): IND(IÆ): ORIENT(ALIS)" i.e. ("Coin of the United Provinces of the Netherlands; (production) of Holland; for the use of the East India Company").

The desired sanction was granted (and at the same time, probably, permission to have copper coinage struck as well) on October 7th 1727; there was no further trouble after this and from 1728 until almost the last year of the Company's existence silver and bronze coinage was produced freely for the Company at various Mints in the Netherlands and, at times, in considerable and even large quantities.

All this coinage emanated from mints in six of the Dutch Provinces, namely:

Province.

Mint Towns.

- | | |
|---------------|------------------------------|
| a) Holland | Dordrecht. |
| b) Utrecht | Utrecht. |
| c) Zeeland | Middelburg. |
| d) Gelderland | Harderwijk. |
| e) Westfrisia | Hoorn: Enkhuizen: Medemblik. |
| f) Overysel | Kampen. |

Broadly speaking, the first five named of these Provinces issued, more or less contemporaneously, coins of similar denominations and of, in some respects, not dissimilar appearance: they form a well-marked, handsome and interesting series.

On almost all appears the famous monogram "V".

Each Province, however, impressed, almost invariably, on its own productions its own heraldic insignia; by which the coins of any Province can, as a rule, be easily distinguished and identified. These insignia or Arms were:

a) Holland.

Fig. 46.

From a Proof Silver Doitt of 1752 in the Writer's Cabinet.

b) Utrecht.

A shield; often crowned and, frequently, having lions standing upright as supporters. The shield is divided diagonally by a line running from left to right and downwards; the upper (i.e. right hand) portion of the shield is plain and unmarked but the lower (i.e. left hand) portion is hatched or shaded with fine perpendicular lines.

c) Zeeland.

The upper half of a lion, facing to the left, rising from waves; whole lying within a shield usually surmounted by a crown.

d) Gelderland.

Two lions, rampant, facing each other but separated by a line: whole within a shield which is usually surmounted by a crown.

e) Westfrisia.

Two lions, one above the other, passing to the left: the whole within a shield which is often surmounted by a crown.

f) Overysel.

A lion, rampant, to left and standing in front of a wavy bar which passes behind the middle of the lion's body: the whole within a shield: and usually crowned.

In addition to these Arms, there appear, on most of the coins, distinctive Mint-marks which indicate unmistakably at what Provincial Mint the specimens were struck.

The silver issues may be divided into two groups: the earlier, which made their appearance only from about 1728 to 1751, consisted of large and handsome pieces known as Ducatoons: they are distinctly rare and valuable. Proofs in gold are known of a few; it need hardly, perhaps, be stated that they are of the very greatest rarity.

Ducatoons were minted by all the six Provinces and were all of somewhat the same type: a mounted knight on the Obverse and the Arms of the United Provinces of the Netherlands on the Reverse: but each Province impressed on its own coins its own crest and name; and there are other minor differences.

These "V" Ducatoons are much of the same appearance as those struck for use in the Netherlands and differ from them principally in the presence on the specimens minted for the East Indies of the familiar "V" monogram and in the fact that the legend on the Obverse denotes that they were coined for the Company. The later issues, also very beautiful coins although not so rare as the Ducatoons, consisted of Three Guilder, One Guilder and Half-Guilder (or Ten Stiver) pieces: these, however, only date from 1786; a year in which they commenced, amongst some European nations, great competition in the provision of currency for the purposes of their trade overseas. These coins were only produced by the Provinces of Utrecht, Zeeland, Gelderland and Westfrisia. They are all much of the same appearance: a draped female figure — often known as "La Pucelle Néerlandaise" — on the Obverse and the lion of the Netherlands on the Reverse: but there are distinctive features of name of the Province and, usually, of mint-mark by which the different coins of each Province can easily be separated. But by far the most generally known of the coins which emanated, during the lifetime of the Company, from the Provincial mints, for use in the Netherlands Indies, were the familiar "V" Doits of copper. These little pieces were first struck in 1726 and continued to be produced, although somewhat irregularly, by all the above-named Provinces (with the exception of Overysel) for nearly seventy years; the last batch is dated 1794.

They were put into circulation in very large quantities and were, indeed, current in the Malay Peninsula and Archipelago until about the middle of the nineteenth century.

They were constantly imitated either by direct forgeries or by coinage resembling the Doit in size and casual appearance.

Half-Doits were also produced, in considerable quantities, from the year 1749 and for about four decades afterwards; but not in nearly so many years nor in nearly such great numbers as were the Doits.

Both Doits and Half-Doits all, with very few exceptions, display on the Obverse the Arms or parts of the Arms of the Province in which they were minted; and, on the Reverse, the Company's monogram, "V". They are, as a rule (with the exception of some few special dates), common; but are not usually found except in abraded or worn condition.

It should, however, here be observed that it would seem to have been a more or less regular practice, at the Provincial mints, to strike off, as Proofs or as complimentary gifts for distinguished visitors and personages, examples of Doits and Half-Doits in silver and, even, occasionally, in gold: of some dates, indeed, Doits and Half-Doits of certain of the Provinces are only known as silver or gold examples of this character.

The gold specimens are very seldom met with and are very valuable; but some of those in silver are to be found not uncommonly.

The issues of each Province have to be dealt with separately.

a) Province of Holland.

All the coinage issued for the Company from this Province was minted at the Town of Dordrecht.

All the coins, almost invariably, display the Provincial Arms, the monogram "V" and a rosette which was the mint-mark of the City of Dordrecht.

Silver.

The Province of Holland produced only Ducatoons for the Company. The known dates are 1726, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 38, 39, 40 and 41; all are distinctly and some extremely rare.

Gold proofs are known of the years 1728, 1732 and 1733 but are of extreme rarity and very valuable.

85. 1726. Ducatoon.

The Ducatoon of this date has already been described, with such particularity as is known, in the remarks introductory to this Chapter and need not again be referred to, beyond stating that, although some were undoubtedly issued from the Mint at Dordrecht to the Company's representatives in Europe, they were, apparently, all recalled and melted down; for no specimen is known. The coin is mentioned (with a mark of interrogation) by Netscher and van der Chijs (p. 100).

86. 1728. Ducatoon. D. 42. W. 32. (S). Plain edge.

Obv. A mounted knight in armour, with sword raised in right hand, galloping to right: underneath the horse, a crowned shield containing the Crest of the Province; i.e. a lion rampant to left within a crowned shield. Legend around; "MON(ETA): FÆD(ERATARUM): BELG(II): PRO(VINCIARUM): HOLL(ANDIÆ): [or HOLL(ANDICA)]: IN USUM SOCIET(ATIS): IND(IE): ORIENT(ALIS). This may be translated "Coin (or money) of the United Provinces of the Netherlands; (production) of Holland; for the use of the East Indian Company".

Rev. A crowned shield bearing a lion, rampant, to left, with sword in right paw and a sheaf of arrows in the left; the shield is supported on each side by a crowned lion, rampant, facing outwards; the whole device constituted the Arms of the United Provinces of the Netherlands.

Below the shield, the monogram "V" enclosed in elaborate ornamental scroll-work; above the shield the date, "1728" lying between two dots or full-stops. Legend around, "CONCORDIA RES PARVAE CRESCUNT"; i.e. "Little things (or "The Small State") grow (or "prosper") through Concord".

At least two Gold proofs of this coin are known; one formed Lot 1346 at the sale of the Collection of Dr. White-King of the Indian Civil Service in Amsterdam in 1905 realizing £ 8. 6. 8; it was figured on Plate 2 of the Catalogue; a second (D. 43. W. 40. 3) formed Lot 1060 at a sale held by Mons. Schulman in July 1922 at the same place and brought £ 41. 13. 4; it was figured on plate 5 of the Catalogue.

87. 1729. Ducatoon.

Similar to No. 86 save for date. There is a specimen in the Royal Mint Cabinet at Utrecht (N. & C. p. 100).

88. 1730. Ducatoon.

Similar to No. 86 save for date. There is a specimen in the Royal Mint Cabinet at Utrecht and another in the Batavian Museum. Examples were sold at the dispersal of the Rynbende (Amsterdam, 1890), Stephanik (Amsterdam, 1894), and Bergsoe (Amsterdam, 1903) Collections; and one was advertised by Schulman in his Catalogue No. 22 of July 1891. (Not in N. & C. Steph. L. 6075; Bat. M.C. p. 77).

89. 1731. Ducatoon.

Similar to No. 86 save for date. There is a specimen in the Royal Mint Cabinet at Utrecht and another in the Batavian Museum. There was also an example in the Collection of Mons. L. A. P. Lapeyrie.

90. 1732. Ducatoon. D. 42. Plain edge.

Similar to No. 86 save for date.

(N. & C. p. 100; Steph. L. 6076; Bat. M.C. p. 77; R. de P.L. 102. £ 2. 10. 0). A gold proof (D. 41. 5. W. 34. 8) formed Lot 386 of the Fonrobert Collection; another was advertised by Mons. Schulman in his Catalogue No. 8 of January 1886; there is also an example in the Batavian Museum (Bat. M.C. p. 77).

91. 1733. Ducatoon.

Similar to No. 86 save for date.

(N. & C. p. 100; Steph. L. 6077; Bat. M.C. p. 77).

A gold proof formed Lot 6889 of the Stephanik Collection sale and a specimen (probably the same piece) was advertised by Schulman in his Catalogue No. 22 of July 1891.

92. 1738. Ducatoon.

Similar to No. 86 save for date. There is a specimen in the Royal Mint Cabinet at Utrecht.

92. 1739. Ducatoon. D. 42 to 44. W. 32. 32 to 32. 41. (S); (G).

Similar to No. 86 save for date. The Ducatoon with this date occurs in two forms:

(a) the edge is plain and the diameter about 43 millimetres.

(b) the edge is obliquely milled, the workmanship finer and the diameter about 44 millimetres; this form is very seldom met with.

(N. & C. p. 100; Fonr. L. 400; Bat. M.C. p. 67. Specimens for sale of form (a) may be noticed in the Sale Catalogues of Schulman No. 26 September 1893; Stephanik. L. 6078 (1894); von Ende (1896); van Oosterzee (1900); Grogan, p. 42 and L. 722. £ 1. 5. 0 (1914); Schulman No. 68. L. 19. £ 2. 1. 8; and of form (b) in those of Rynbende (1890); Steph. L. 6079; van Oosterzee (1900); Bergsoe (1903); Schulman No. 68. L. 20. £ 3. 15. 0).

94. 1740. Ducatoon. D. 42 to 43. W. 32. 42. (G). Plain edge.

Similar to No. 86 save for date.

(N. & C. p. 100; Steph. L. 6080; Bat. M.C. p. 77; G. p. 42. L. 723. 17s. 6d).

95. 1741. Ducatoon.

Similar to No. 86 save for date.

(Not in N. & C.: a specimen was disposed of at the sale of Mons. W. E. Rynbende's Collection at Amsterdam in August 1890; an example is in the Batavian Museum; (Bat. M.C. p. 77.)

Copper.

The Province issued a long series of Doits extending over many years; they were produced in considerable quantity. The dates known are:

1726, 27 (?), 28 (?), 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 70, 71, 72, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82 (?), 84, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92 and 93.

Examples of the years 1726, 37, 43, 53, 68 and 84 are rare.

Gold proofs of at least seven years (1726, 38, 47, 49, 53, 59 and 63) are known and the Doit of 1738 is, indeed, only known as such. Silver proofs of at least twenty years (1735, 36, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, and 63) occur; and genuine Doits of the last eight years are not known in copper.

The Province also coined Half-Doits the known dates of which are:

1749, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 69 and 70; those of the years 1750 and 1751 are rare.

Gold proofs of at least six years (1755, 56, 58, 60, 61 and 63) are known; silver proofs also of at least ten dates (1753, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62 and 63) are met with; and genuine Half-Doits of copper with any of these dates (with the exception of 1753) do not occur.

All proofs in gold are rare and of considerable value; but examples of some of the dates as silver proofs are not at all uncommon.

All the copper doits and half-doits bear a plain edge; but the specimens in gold and silver have, after the year 1738 in the case of the former, and after the year 1750 in the case of the latter, an edge obliquely milled.

The diameter of these V.O.C. Doits of Holland varies from about 20.7 to 22.5 millimetres; and that of the Half-Doits from about 17 to 18.3 millimetres.

Fig. 32.

From a coin in the Writer's Cabinet.

There is a fair amount of variation in the Dies of both Doits and Half-Doits; Moquette figures on his Pl. 8 a considerable number and also numerous forgeries manufactured in the East Indies.

Netscher and Van der Chijs give (pp. 127-129) a list of these Doits and Half-Doits; and Moquette deals with them exhaustively in his Article "De Duiten en Halve duiten, voor de Vereenigde Oost-Indische Compagnie geslagen in Holland" (pp. 40-57 and Pl. 8; ff. 196-221); (1907).

96. 1726. Doit. Rare date.

Obv. A crowned shield bearing the Provincial Crest i.e. a lion, rampant, to left.

Rev. The monogram "VΦ"; the date, "1726", below; a five-leaf rosette, between two dots, above.

(V. Pl. 201; f. 5. N. & C. Pl. 8; f. 21^a; Bat. M. C. p. 78; M. f. 196).

There is a gold proof in the Batavian Museum (Bat. M. C. p. 78; M. p. 42).

It may here be observed that Netscher and Van der Chijs include in their list of Doits the dates 1727 and 1728, and there were in the Stephanik Collection and in the Batavian Museum examples of those years. Moquette, however, regards all such specimens, as well as those dated 1729, as forgeries of which he figures several; of 1727, ff. 197-199; of 1728, f. 200; and as to 1729 see his p. 42.

97. 1730. Doit. Same type as No. 96. (M. f. 202^a).

98. 1731. Doit. Same type. Specimens occur in which the date 1730 has been altered to 1731.

99. 1732. Doit. Same type. Examples occur in which the date 1726 has been altered to 1732.

100. 1733. Doit. Same type.

101. 1734. Doit. Same type. Specimens of 1733 with the date changed to 1734 occur.

102. 1735. Doit. Same type; silver proofs (Steph. L. 6176) occur but are rather rare; copper pieces of the previous year with the date altered to 1735 occur.

103. 1736. Doit. Same type; the figure "3" is large. Silver proofs (Steph. L. 6177) occur in which the figure "6" is struck over the figure "5"; they are rare.

104. 1737. Doit. Same type. A rare date. The figure "3" is large. (M. f. 203).

105. 1738. Doit. Same type, but only known as a gold proof which is in the Batavian Museum (Bat. M. C. p. 78; M. pp. 43, 44).

106. 1742. Doit. Same type.

107. 1743. Doit. Same type. Rare date.

108. 1744. Doit. Same type.

109. 1745. Doit. Same type.

110. 1746. Doit. Same type. Silver proofs (Fonr. L. 414; Steph. L. 6178) occur but are rather rare.

111. 1747. Doit. Same type. There was a gold proof in the Lapeyrie Collection. Silver proofs (Fonr. L. 416; Steph. L. 6179) occur but are rather rare.

112. 1748. Doit. Same type. Silver proofs (Fonr. L. 419. Steph. L. 6180) occur.

113. 1749. Doit. Same type. Gold (Bucknill Cabinet) and silver proofs (Fonr. L. 422. Steph. L. 6181) occur.

Fig. 53.

From a gold proof in the Writer's Cabinet.

114. 1749. Half-Doit. Same type but a much smaller coin.

(V. Pl. 210. f. 6; N. & C. Pl. 4, f. 22^a; M. ff. 218, 221).

115. 1750. Doit. Same type (M. ff. 206 a, b; and (forgery) 204). Silver proofs occur (Steph. L. 6182; M. p. 45).

116. 1750. Half-Doit. Same type. Rare date.

117. 1751. Doit. Same type (M. (forgery) f. 205). Silver proofs (Steph. L. 6183) occur.

118. 1751. Half-Doit. Same type. Rare date.

Some Half-Doits of this date were officially pierced with a square hole in the centre for use in the Eastern parts of Java where coinage similarly punched (such as Chinese cash) was familiar to the indigenous people through the immigrants and settlers from China (M. p. 39 and pl. 7, f. 195).

119. 1752. Doit. Same type. Silver proofs (Fonr. L. 434; Steph. L. 6184) occur.

120. 1752. Half-Doit. Same type. Half-Doits of this date were treated as were those of 1751.

121. 1753. Doit. Same type. Rare date. Gold (Fonr. L. 438) and silver (Fonr. L. 439; Steph. L. 6185) proofs occur.

122. 1753. Half-Doit. Same type. Silver proofs (Fonr. L. 441) occur.

123. 1754. Doit. Same type. Silver proofs (Fonr. L. 443) occur.

124. 1754. Half-Doit. Same type.

125. 1755. Doit. Same type. Silver proofs (Fonr. L. 447; Steph. L. 6186) occur.

126. 1755. Half-Doit. Same type. There was a gold proof in the van Oosterzee Collection; but otherwise it is only known as a silver proof (Fonr. L. 448; Steph. L. 6202).

Fig. 54.

From a silver proof in the Writer's Cabinet.

127. 1756. Doit. Same type. Silver (Fonr. L. 450, 451; Steph. L. 6187) proofs only.

128. 1756. Half-Doit. Same type. Gold (van Oosterzee) and silver (Fonr. L. 452; Steph. L. 6203) proofs only.

129. 1757. Doit. Same type. Silver (Steph. L. 6188) proofs only. Moquette figures a copper forgery: f. 208.

130. 1757. Half-Doit. Same type. Silver proofs only (Fonr. L. 458; Steph. L. 6204).

131. 1758. Doit. Same type. Silver (Steph. L. 6189) proofs only. Moquette figures a copper forgery: f. 209.

132. 1758. Half-Doit. Same type. Gold (Steph. L. 6200; W.-K. L. 1359) and silver (Fonr. L. 459; Steph. L. 6205; M. f. 219) proofs only.

133. 1759. Doit. Same type. Gold (van Oosterzee) and silver (Steph. L. 6190) proofs only.

134. 1759. Half-Doit. Same type. Silver proofs only (Steph. L. 6206).

135. 1760. Doit. Same type. Silver proofs only (Fonr. L. 461).

136. 1760. Half-Doit. Same type. Gold (Steph. L. 6201) and silver (Fonr. L. 462; Steph. L. 6207) proofs only.

137. 1761. Doit. Same type. Silver proofs only (Fonr. L. 464).

138. 1761. Half-Doit. Same type. Gold (R. de P. L. 101) and silver proofs only (Steph. L. 6208; M. f. 220).

139. 1762. Doit. Same type. Silver proofs only (Steph. L. 6191).

140. 1762. Half-Doit. Same type. Silver proofs only (Steph. L. 6209).

141. 1763. Doit. Same type. Gold (Smidt van Gelder Collection Amsterdam 1847) and silver (M. p. 46) proofs only.

142. 1763. Half-Doit. Same type. Gold (Fonr. L. 467) and silver (Steph. L. 6210) proofs only.

143. 1764. Doit. Same type (M. f. 207).

144. 1765. Doit. Same type (M. f. 210); Schulman records an example of the previous year in which the date has been altered to 1765.

145. 1766. Doit. Same type.

146. 1767. Doit. Same type.

147. 1768. Doit. Same type. Rare date.

148. 1769. Half-Doit. Same type. Half Doits dated 1767 (Bat. M. C. p. 79) and 1768 occur but are probably all forgeries (M. p. 55).

149. 1770. Doit. Same type (M.f. 210).
 150. 1770. Half-Doit. Same type.
 151. 1771. Doit. Same type.
 152. 1772. Doit. Same type.
 153. 1776. Doit. Same type.
 154. 1777. Doit. Same type.
 155. 1778. Doit. Same type.
 156. 1779. Doit. Same type.
 157. 1780. Doit. Same type. The "O" of the date is smaller than the other figures. Half-Doits of this date occur but are all forgeries (M.p. 55).
 158. 1781. Doit. Same type. Often met with Reverse incuse. Half-Doits of this date occur but are all forgeries: Moquette figures one; f. 217.
 Netscher and Van der Chijs include the date 1782 in their list of Doits; but no specimen was known to Moquette (M.p. 50).
 159. 1784. Doit. Same type. Very rare date.
 Netscher and Van der Chijs include the dates 1785 and 1787 in their list of dates; but Moquette states (p. 51) that all such Doits so dated, as well as others which are dated 1786, are counterfeit.
 160. 1788. Doit. Same type (M.f. 212, 213, 216).
 161. 1789. Doit. Same type (M.f. 211).
 162. 1790. Doit. Same type (M.f. 214, 215). Examples of 1789 occur with date altered to 1790.
 163. 1791. Doit. Same type (M.f. 211). On some specimens the last figure "1" is very far from the "9".
 164. 1792. Doit. Same type (M.f. 216).
 165. 1793. Doit. Same type (M.f. 216).

b) Province of Utrecht.

All the coinage issued for the Company from this Province was struck at the City of Utrecht. The coins, with scarcely any exceptions, all bear the Arms or part of the Arms of the Province, the monogram "V" and the Mint-mark of the Town of Utrecht which consisted of a minute representation of the peculiar shield which forms the central feature of the Provincial insignia.

The coins of this Province were of finished workmanship.

Silver.

In silver, the Province produced for the Company, Ducatoons (dated 1738, 39 and 40), Three Guilder pieces (dated 1786), One Guilder pieces (dated 1786 and 90) and Half-Guilder (otherwise known as Ten Stiver) pieces (dated 1786 and 1790).

On all these will be found to appear as part of the inscriptions the word "TRAJ" which stands as an abbreviation for "TRAJECTUM" the ancient Roman appellation of Utrecht.

These Ducatoons are rarely met with but the later silver pieces are not uncommon with the exception of the Half-Guilder dated 1790 of which only one example appears to be known.

166. 1738. Ducatoon.

Mentioned by Verkade and by Netscher and Van der Chijs and, if it exists, presumably similar to No. 168 save for date. Mr. Schulman knows of no specimen in existence.

167. 1739. Ducatoon.

Similar, save for date, to No. 168. The Ducatoon of Utrecht dated 1739 is not mentioned by Verkade or by Netscher and Van der Chijs but a specimen formed Lot 401 of the Fonrobert Collection. Mr. Schulman has never seen an example.

168. 1740. Ducatoon. D. 42.5. W. 32.44 (G) Obliquely milled edge.

This piece is of the same type as No. 86; but, on the Obverse, underneath the horse appears the distinctive shield of the Province in the centre of a larger and crowned shield bearing the arms of the City of Utrecht, and in the legend the word "TRAJ(ECTI)" replaces the word "HOLL(ANDIÆ)" (V. p. 203: N & C. p. 100: Steph.

L. 6114: G.p. 43. L. 738 £ 2.1.8). There is a proof in gold in the Batavian Museum (Bat. M.C. p. 77).

Fig. 55.

From a coin in the Royal Coin Cabinet at The Hague.

169. 1786. Three Guilders. D. 41 to 44. W. 31.7 (G.). Obliquely milled edge.

Obv. The figure of the Greek Goddess Pallas Athene helmeted and draped, standing; in right hand a staff with the cap of Liberty on the point; the left arm rests on the Bible placed upright on an altar. Date, "1786", below. To the left of and above the head of the female figure appear the mint-mark of the City of Utrecht; namely a minute representation of the distinctive Provincial shield.

Legend around "HANC TVEMVR HAC NITIMVR" this may be translated "We protect (or defend) the on (i.e. the emblems — the staff and cap — of liberty and are supported by (or rely upon) the other (i.e. the Bible on which the arm of the figure rests).

Rev. A crowned shield bearing the lion, rampant, of the Netherlands with sword in the right paw and sheaf of arrows in the left.

Legend around, "MO(NETA): ARG(ENTEA): OR D(INUM): FCED(ERATARUM): BELG(II): TRAJ(ECTI)". This may be translated. "Silver Coin (or money) of the Parliament of the United (Provinces of the) Netherlands: (production) of Utrecht". The female figure on the Obverse is officially designated "Pallas" in the records of the Netherlands Government in 1786 and it has therefore been here so described; it must, however, be admitted that the association of the Greek Goddess with the Bible (if indeed it is that book) seems somewhat incongruous and the figure it now generally referred to by such appellations as "The Maid of the Netherlands", "Hollandia", "La Pucelle Néerlandaise", "La Pucelle de Holland", "The Virgin of Holland" and "Liberty".

Fig. 56.

From a coin in the Writer's Cabinet.

There appear to be two forms of this coin: (a) the normal form as described above, and (b) a form in which the second "V" in the word "TVEMVR" is very large i.e. "TVEMVR" and the distance between that word and the "cap" considerably greater (Steph. L. 6116).

(V.p. 203: N & C. p. 100: Steph. (a) L. 6115, (b) L. 6116: G. p. 43. L. 739. 8s. 4 d.: S. p. 6. L. 68. 10 s. od.).

- O. 1786. One Guilder. D. 31 to 32. W. 10.20 (G.). Obliquely milled edge.

Similar, generally to No. 169 but a smaller coin; and on the reverse the figure "3" and letters "GL" are respectively replaced by the figure "1" and letter "G".

There are at least two types of this piece: (a) in which the characters are rather larger than in (b) in which they are smaller: both forms are of about the same value. There is said to be some third variety but neither Mr. Schulman nor the Writer have been able to distinguish it.

(V.p. 203: N & C. p. 101: Steph. L. 6117: G. p. 43. L. 740. 2 s. 6 d.: S. p. 6. (a) L. 70. 4 s. 2 d.; (b) L. 71. 4 s. 2 d.).

- 1. 1786. Half-Guilder; (or Ten Stivers). D. 27 to 27.7. W. 5.25 (G.).

Similar, generally, to No. 170 but a smaller coin; and in this piece the date "1786" is on the Reverse at the top, instead of at the bottom on the Obverse; whilst on the Reverse the figure "1" and letter "G" are respectively replaced by the figure "X" and letters "St" (i.e. Stivers).

(V.p. 203 and Pl. 201, f. 4: N & C. p. 101: Steph. L. 6118: G. p. 43. L. 741. 1 s. 3 d.: S. p. 6. L. 72. 2 s. 6 d.).

Fig. 57.

From a coin in the Writer's Cabinet.

- 72. 1790. One Guilder. D. 31. to 32. W. 10.35 (G.).

Similar, generally, to No. 170 save for date; the characters are smaller than in form (a) of the One Guilder piece of 1786. It is said there are two forms slightly differing in detail.

Fig. 58.

From a coin in the Writer's Cabinet.

- 73. 1790. Half-Guilder.

Similar, generally, to No. 171 save for date. A specimen, apparently unique, was sold at the dispersal of the Collection of Mons. W.E. Rynbende at Amsterdam in August 1890.

Copper.

The Province issued a long series of Doits spread over many years and produced in large numbers at some periods: —

The dates known are: —

1737 (?), 41, 42, 44, 45, 46, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93 and 94.

Examples of the years 1741, 44, 46, 52, 57, 70, 71, 81, 93 and 94 are rare.

Gold proofs of at least five years (1742, 53, 54, 57 and 62) are known. Silver proofs of at least twenty-two dates (1742, 53, 54, 55, 56) (in which the figure "8" is over stamped on the figure "6"), 57, 58, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 90 and 94 occur and genuine Doits for circulation of the years 1756, 58, 61, 62, 63, 68, 69, 72 and 73 are not known in copper. The Province also produced Half-Doits the known dates of which are: — 1752, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59 (?), 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 73, 76, 93 and 94. Examples dated 1756 and 76 are very rare.

Gold proofs of at least eleven dates (1752, 53, 54, 56, 58, 60, 61, 62, 67, 90 and 93) are known. Silver proofs also occur of at least twenty one years (1753, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 73, 93 and 94) and genuine Half-Doits of the years 1758, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 71, 73, 93 and 94 are not known in copper.

The gold proofs of both Doits and Half-Doits are very seldom met with but some of those in silver are not uncommon.

The copper Doits and Half-Doits have a plain edge: but in the gold and silver proofs it is obliquely milled.

The diameter of the $\frac{1}{2}$ Doits of Utrecht varies from about 21.2 to 22.5 millimetres and that of the Half-Doits from about 17.5 to 18.5 millimetres. These Doits and Half-Doits are well made and there is not much variation in the Dies: they were frequently forged.

Netscher and Van der Chijs give (pp. 127-129) a list of these Doits and Half-Doits and Moquette deals very fully with them in his article "De Duiten en Halve Duiten voor de Vereenigde Oost-Indische Compagnie geslagen in Utrecht" (pp. 30-40 and Pl. 8, ff. 188-195); (1907).

It is important to observe here that, in 1817 and in 1827 at Utrecht and in 1841-43 in Java, coins were minted which bear an extremely close resemblance to the Doits issued by the Province of Utrecht which are now under consideration: on the Obverse are the Arms of Utrecht and on the Reverse the monogram " $\frac{1}{2}$ " and the date, below "1790": they are very liable to be confused with the ordinary pieces dated 1790 issued by the Province of Utrecht for the Company at that period: they will be found dealt with in their proper sequence but it may, here, be conveniently mentioned that they can easily be distinguished by the mint mark appearing above the monogram. The mint-marks are: —

(a) In the regular issue of 1790; the small distinctive shield of the Province.

(b) In the issue of 1817: a helmet.

(c) In the issue of 1827; a five pointed star between two dots.

(d) In the issue of 1840-43; a five pointed star alone.

- 174. 1737. Doit.

Netscher and Van der Chijs include this date in their list of Doits (p. 127); but Moquette, although inclined to think that genuine specimens of this date may have been struck, states (pp. 30, 31) that all examples, thus dated, which he had seen, were forgeries and had been copied from dies of later years.

- 175. 1741. Doit. A very rare date.

Obv. The, crowned, distinctive shield of the Province with lions, rampant, supporters: scroll-work below (see fig. 47).

Rev. The monogram " $\frac{1}{2}$ "; the date, "1741", below; a minute representation of the distinctive Provincial shield, between two dots, above.

This is an extremely rare coin, Moquette knowing of but one specimen (M.f. 188).

- 176. 1742. Doit. Same type. (N.&C. Pl. 4, f. 21^e). Gold (Steph. L. 6371); and silver (Steph. L. 6373) proofs occur.

- 177. 1744. Doit. Same type. A very date.

- 178. 1745. Doit. Same type.

- 179. 1746. Doit. Same type. A rare date.

- 180. 1752. Doit. Same type. A rare date.

- 181. 1752. Half-Doit. Same type but a much smaller coin; and the lions rampant which support the shield together with the scroll-work below the shield, are absent : no doubt from want of space for them on the small coin (M.f. 192). Gold proofs occur (Bucknill Cabinet).

Fig. 59.

From a gold proof, in the Writer's Cabinet.

182. 1753. Doit. Same type. Gold (Bat. M.C., p. 79) and Silver (Steph. L. 6374) proofs occur.

Fig. 60.

From a silver proof in the Writer's Cabinet.

183. 1753. Half-Doit. Same type. (N. & C. Pl. 4, f. 22^e). Gold (van Oosterzee) and silver (Fonr. L. 440; Steph. L. 6392) proofs occur.
184. 1754. Doit. Same type. Gold (van Oosterzee) and silver (Schulman. Cat. No. 6, 1885) proofs occur.
185. 1754. Half-Doit. Same type. Some Half-Doits of this date were punched, officially, with a square hole in the centre for use in Sourabaya and Grisee in the East of Java just as were the Half-Doits of 1751 and 1752 of Holland (M., p. 39 and Pl. 7, t. 194). Gold (van Oosterzee) and silver (Steph. L. 6393) proofs occur.
186. 1755. Doit. Same type. Gold (Steph. L. 6372 : also in British Museum) and silver (Fonr. L. 449) proofs occur.
187. 1755. Half-Doit. Same type. Silver (Simonshaven L. 744 ; Bat. M.C., p. 79) proofs occur.
- (See No. 191). 1756. Doit. Same type; but only known, apparently, as a silver proof with the figure "6" overstrapped with the figure "8" (M.f. 190; S. p. 6. L. 74. rs. 8d).
188. 1756. Half-Doit. Same type. A very rare date. Gold (van Oosterzee) and silver (Steph. L. 6394 : Bat. M.C., p. 79) proofs occur.
189. 1757. Doit. Same type. A rare date. Gold (Fonr. L. 455) and silver (Steph. L. 6375) proofs occur.
190. 1757. Half-Doit. Same type. Silver (Steph. L. 6395) proofs occur.
191. 1758. Doit. Same type. Silver proofs only; these are really proofs dated "1756" in which the figure "8" is stamped overstrapped on the figure "6" (Fonr. L. 460; Steph. L. 6376; Bat. M.C., p. 78; M.f. 190; S. p. 6. L. 74. rs. 8d). There are numerous copper forgeries with this date. Netscher and Van der Chijs include in the list of Utrecht Doits the date 1759 but Moquette considers that all such are forged (M., p. 32).
192. 1758. Half-Doit. Same type. Gold (Steph. L. 6390) and silver (Fonr. L. 460; Steph. L. 6366) proofs only.
- A curious, but well known, variety of the Half-Doit of this date occurs (which may be numbered 192A) in which the coin (which occurs both in silver and copper) is struck with the ordinary Reverse impression (i.e. the monogram, date and mintmark) on both sides. It is not very rare (G. p. 37; S. p. 6. L. 78. rs. 8d).
193. 1759. Half-Doit. Same type. Netscher and Van der Chijs include this date in their list; but it was not known to Moquette (p. 37).
194. 1760. Doit. Same type. Silver (van Oosterzee) proofs only.
195. 1760. Half-Doit. Same type. Silver proofs only (Fonr. L. 463; Steph. L. 6397).
196. 1761. Doit. Same type. Silver proofs only (Steph. L. 6377).

197. 1761. Half-Doit. Same type. Gold (Steph. C. 6391) and silver (Fonr. L. 465; Steph. L. 6398) proofs only.
198. 1762. Doit. Same type. Gold (Bat. M.C., p. 78) and silver (M. p. 32) proofs only.
199. 1762. Half-Doit. Same type. Gold (Fonr. L. 466) and silver (Steph. L. 6400) proofs only. In the Stephanik catalogue "two varieties" of the silver proof are mentioned; but in the half-dozen silver proofs in the Writer's Cabinet there seems no difference.
200. 1763. Doit. Same type. Silver proofs only (Fonr. L. 468).
201. 1763. Half-Doit. Same type. Silver proofs only (Fonr. L. 469; Steph. L. 6401).
202. 1764. Doit. Same type (M.f. 189). Silver (Fonr. L. 471; Steph. L. 6378) proofs occur.
203. 1764. Half-Doit. Same type. Silver proofs only (M. p. 60; Bucknill Cabinet).
204. 1765. Doit. Same type.
205. 1765. Half-Doit. Same type. Silver proofs only (Fonr. L. 476; Steph. L. 6402).
206. 1766. Doit. Same type.
207. 1766. Half-Doit. Same type. Silver proofs only (Steph. L. 6403).
208. 1767. Doit. Same type. Silver proofs occur (Schulman).
209. 1767. Half-Doit. Same type. Gold (?) and silver (Steph. L. 6404) proofs only.
210. 1768. Doit. Same type. Silver proofs only (Steph. L. 6379).
211. 1768. Half-Doit. Same type. Silver proofs only (Steph. L. 6405).
212. 1769. Doit. Same type. Silver proofs only (M. p. 59).
213. 1769. Half-Doit. Same type (M.f. 193).
- This coin shows several minor variations. There are to be met with, not very rarely, Half-Doits, of this date, struck on both sides with the Arms; this variety may be numbered 213 (A). (M. pp. 37, 38); a specimen of this kind formed Lot. 6389 of the Stephanik Sale Catalogue. Silver proofs (Fonr. L. 480; Steph. L. 6406) occur.
214. 1770. Doit. Same type. Rare date. Silver proofs occur (Fonr. L. 482).
215. 1770. Half-Doit. Same type. Silver proofs occur (Bucknill Cabinet).
216. 1771. Doit. Same type; very rare date. Silver proofs occur (Bat. M.C. p. 78).
217. 1771. Half-Doit. Same type. Silver proofs only (Steph. L. 6407).
218. 1772. Doit. Same type. Silver proofs only (Steph. L. 6380).
219. 1773. Doit. Same type. Silver proofs, which are very rare only (Bat. M.C. p. 78; M. p. 33).
220. 1773. Half-Doit. Same type. Silver proofs only (Lapeyrie).
221. 1776. Doit. Same type (M.f. 191).
222. 1776. Half-Doit. Same type. A specimen is in the Royal Mint Cabinet at Utrecht, but Moquette had never seen one (M. p. 38).
223. 1777. Doit. Same type.
224. 1778. Doit. Same type.
225. 1779. Doit. Same type.
226. 1780. Doit. Same type.
227. 1781. Doit. Same type : rare date.
228. 1784. Doit. Same type.
229. 1785. Doit. Same type.
230. 1786. Doit. Same type.
231. 1787. Doit. Same type.
232. 1788. Doit. Same type. Moquette (p. 35) records a specimen of this year overstrapped on a Doit issued for use in the City of Utrecht.
233. 1789. Doit. Same type.
234. 1790. Doit. Same type. Silver proofs occur (Bat. M. C. p. 78).
235. 1791. Doit. Same type.
236. 1792. Doit. Same type.
237. 1793. Doit. Same type : rare date.
238. 1793. Half-Doit. Same type. Gold (Bat. M.C. p. 79) and silver (Fonr. L. 526; Steph. L. 6408) : proofs only.
239. 1794. Doit. Same type : rare date. Silver proofs occur (Fonr. L. 529).
240. 1794. Half-Doit. Same type. Silver proofs only (M. p. 38).

c) Province of Zeeland.

All the coinage issued for the Company from this Province was minted at the Town of Middelburg.

Most of the coins bear the Provincial Arms, the monogram "V" and the representation of a small conventional castle or tower which was the mint mark of the City of Middelburg. On some of the coins appears also the motto of the Province "LUCTOR ET EMERGO" which may be translated "I strive and rise".

Silver.

The Province of Zeeland produced Ducatoons (dated 1726, 28, 37, 39, 40 and 41); these handsome pieces are rarely met with; Three Guilder pieces (dated 1789), One Guilder pieces (dated 1791) and Half-Guilder (or Ten Stiver) pieces (dated 1791). Netscher and Van der Chijs (p. 102) mention other dates: Three Guilder pieces of 1790 and 1791, One Guilder pieces of 1789 and 1790 and the Half-Guilder of 1790: but neither the firm of Schulman nor the Writer have been able to find any other reference to these coins so dated and Mr Schulman is confident that the statements of the authors referred to are a mistake.

On all the silver coinage appears as part of the legend the word "ZEL" or "ZEEL" indicating the Province.

241. 1726. Ducatoon. The Zeeland Ducatoon of 1726 has been referred to, as fully as information permits, in the remarks introductory to this Chapter. Although, without doubt, it would seem that specimens were coined, none are known. They were probably all re-called and melted down. The piece is mentioned by Netscher and van der Chijs (p. 100) with a mark of interrogation.

242. 1728. Ducatoon. D. 41. W. 32. 54. Plain edge.

Obv. Same type as No. 86; but underneath the horse lies a crowned shield containing the Crest of the Province i.e. a demi-lion, to left, rising from waves. Legend as in No. 86 but "ZEEL" (ANDIÆ) replaces "HOLL(ANDIÆ)".

Rev. Same type as No. 86. (Not in V. or N. & C.: G. p. 45. L. 770. £ 1. 16. 8).

243. 1737. Ducatoon.

Similar to the preceding save for date. (N. & C. p. 100: Bat. M.C. p. 77: Rynbende Coll. (1890): Von Ende (1896).

244. 1739. Ducatoon. D. 42 to 43. W. 32. 42 (G). Plain edge. Same type as No. 242 save for date; on the Obv. appears a six pointed star after the word "ORIENT". The punctuation of the legends on both sides of the coin is different to that of No. 242 and the workmanship better (V. p. 203: N. & C. p. 100: Steph. L. 6081: Bat. M.C. p. 77: G. p. 45. L. 771. £ 1. 6. 8; S. p. 4. L. 46. £ 1. 13. 4).

245. 1740. Ducatoon. D. 42 to 43. W. 32. 55. (G). Rare date. Same type; punctuation slightly different; some have a milled edge. (Not in V. or N. & C.: Fonr. L. 402: Steph. L. 6082: G. p. 45. L. 772. £ 1. 5. 0.)

246. 1741. Ducatoon. D. 42. W. 32. 37. (G). Plain edge.

Same type; the punctuation slightly differs. It would seem that there are at least three slightly varying forms.

Fig. 61.

From a coin in the Writer's Cabinet.

(a) in which "CONCORDIA" is as written (b) in which that word appears as "CON-CORDIA" and (c) in which the word "CRESCUNT" appears as "CRESCU-NT". In certain examples of this date the knight's sword is straight; in others, curved. Not in V: N. & C. p. 100: Bat. M.C. p. 77: Fonr. L. 404. var. (c): Steph. L. 6083: G. p. 45. L. 773. 16s. 8d: S. p. 4. L. 46. var. (b) £ 1. 13. 4: L. 47. var. (a) £ 1. 10. 0.

247. 1789. Three Guilders. D. 42. W. 30. 9. (G). Obliquely milled edge.

Same type as No. 169; but on the Obverse the legend reads "HANC; TVEMUR; HAC; NITIMUR"; whilst the mint-mark (which is, here, on the right side of the head) is a conventional tower. On the Reverse the legend reads "MON(ETA)" instead of "MO(NETA)" and "ZEL(ANDIÆ)" instead of "TRAI(ECTI)"; the monogram "V" lies within an ornamental scroll.

There are at least three variations in the punctuation; (a) "HAC NITIMUR."; (b) "HAC: NITIMUR."; and (c) "HAC: NITIMUR".

(V. p. 203: N. & C. p. 100: Steph. L. 6084. var. (a): L. 6085. var. (b): L. 6086. var. (c): G. p. 45. L. 774. 7s. 6d: R. de P. L. 173. 15s.)

REVIEW.

CORPUS NUMMORUM ITALICORUM. Primo Tentativo di un Catalogo generale delle Monete Mediaevali e Moderne coniate in Italia o da Italiani in altri paesi. Volume IX. Emilia (Parte 1^a) Parma e Piacenza-Modena e Reggio.

Large Quarto. 792 pp. + XLIV Plates.

Sixteen years have elapsed since the publication of the first volume of this monumental work, undertaken by the King of Italy, whose interest in the science of numismatics is still as keen as ever. The famous collection which His Majesty began as Prince of Naples quite forty years ago is still being added to and forms by far the most complete and richest collection of Italian coins extant.

The present volume deals with the coins of that part of the province of Emilia comprised within the limits of the Pò, the Trebbia, the Appennines and the Rhine, including Parma and Piacenza, Modena and Reggio.

A short historical account is given of each Mint, as well as of the Rulers responsible for the coinage. Every coin known to His Majesty is fully described, with references to the literature, collections in which the particular piece is found, and indication of size, weight, and condition.

The text fills 792 pages, and there are 44 plates of illustrations of all the types and varieties.

The Mints considered are: Bardi, Borgotaro, Brescello, Compiano, Correggio, Forte Urbano, Guastalla, Mirandola, Modena, Parma and Piacenza, Reggio, Soragna and Vittoria.

An appendix of 36 pages gives the coins which have come to light during the preparation of the volume and various corrections.

Some of the coins described and illustrated are among the most historically interesting of the Italian series; others claim first rank among the beautiful Renaissance productions of the Italian coin-engravers' art. Interesting are also the numerous imitations of foreign coins coined in such mints as Correggio, Guastalla, and other places, which Italian collectors keenly seek after.

It is impossible to go into details. Students will find in the present, as well as in the former volumes, all the information they can possibly wish for.

We can but humbly wish that His Majesty may be preserved to see the further progress and completion of this monumental work, which represents so much labour and such vast erudition.

We may add that the proceeds of the sale of the work go to the Italian National Institute for the Orphans of Civil State officials and the Italian Numismatic Society.

THE BRITISH MUSEUM QUARTERLY. No 1. Published by the Trustees. London, 1926. Crown Quarto, 32 pp.; XV Plates.

The Trustees of the British Museum propose to issue in future The British Museum Quarterly, as a means of making known the principal accessions to the National Collections. The annual subscription for four parts is 8/.

Such a publication was really needed and will be welcome to all interested in Art and Archaeology. It will bring before the general public the chief acquisitions of the British Museum adequately described and illustrated. We venture to think that as the series grows the volumes will become very valuable.

The first part gives us a good idea of the scope of the work. It describes among many items, a remarkable statuette of Socrates of Parian marble, with a life-like portrait; a Roman cinerary urn of the Republican period, formerly in the Forman Collection at Callaby Castle in Northumberland; a mediaeval bronze Bowl found in the river Severn in 1824; a gold Bowl from Hungary; a gold Armlet from the British bronze age, found at Selsey in 1925; a fragment of the first draft of Jane Austen's "Persuasion"; The Tang silver hoard (A.D. 618-906); prints, water colours, drawings; a Sarum Book of Hours of 1494; and what to us, numismatists, is of more special interest, an excellent contribution from the pen of Dr Geo. F. Hill, Keeper of Coins at the British Museum, on the Seager Bequest of coins, principally Cretan; a rare tetradrachm of Scione, with the name of Protesilaos, the founder of Scione, on the helmet of the hero's bust represented on the obverse of the coin; and a unique gold stater of Tachos, king of Egypt (circ. B.C. 360) of Athenian type, but of the weight of a Persian daric, a piece of extraordinary interest.

The Reviews of recent Publications, and Notes on Exhibitions of Modern Printing, Chinese Paintings, and a list of Lantern slides recently added to the twenty previously existing sets, available for loan to lecturers on science and art, complete the first number of the British Museum Quarterly.

NUMISMATIC SOCIETIES, MUSEUMS, &c.

AUSTRALIAN NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

The ordinary meeting of the Australian Numismatic Society was held at the B.M.A. Building, 30 Elizabeth Street, Sydney, on Thursday, May 20, 1926, at 8 p.m.

A paper entitled "The Sous Constitution of France 1793-1795" by Mr. James Hunt Deacon, F.R.N.S., of the Numismatic Section, Art Gallery, Adelaide, was read by the Hon. Secretary.

The historic interest in the period covered by the paper is universal and Mr. Deacon has presented the Numismatic aspect with interest and instruction.

Resume of Mr. Deacon's paper.

The Constitutional Sous illustrates, among other things, the clash of the Monarchical systems with that of Republicanism, evidence of which appears on the obverses and reverses respectively.

On September 11th, 1790, the old system was abolished and a new coin issue decreed on April 9th. This was the Constitutional type consisting of the Louis au Genie and Demi-Louis in gold. The Ecu constitutional, the Demi-Ecu, the Quart d'Ecu, the Huitieme (sols) in silver and the Double Sou (two sous), Sou (12 deniers), Demi-sou (6 deniers) and the Quart de Sou (3 deniers) in copper.

The differences of type and the details of mint-marks and values are accurately described and attention is drawn to the variety of alloys in the copper issues that produced a range of shades from red-brownish colour to light yellow, the well-known bell-metal alloy being specially mentioned.

An interesting description of the Double Sou and Sou deals, among other things, with the difference existing between the bust of Louis XVI by the artists Duvivier and Dupré. The interesting reverses are dealt with in a thorough manner and attention is also drawn to the seven artist engravers who submitted their designs to the Academy of Painters and Sculptors. These were Bertrand Andrieu — Jean Pierre Droz — Augustin Dupré (Pierre Simon) — Benjamin Duvivier — Nicholas Marie Gatteaux — Pierre Joseph Lorthier and François Vasselon. The designs of Dupré and Duvivier were chosen. The beautiful device of the winged Genius of France holding a tablet upon which is inscribed the word "CONSTITUTION" with the symbols of the cock (vigilance), the fasces (unity), the Phrygian cap (liberty), and the staff with the all-seeing eye is the subject of an illuminating description.

The mint letters were described with commendable detail and the list of mints given.

A Mint. Paris.

AA Mint. Metz.

BB Mint. Besançon using the mint letter of Strasbourg.

D Mint. Dijon using the mint letter of Lyons.

I Mint. Clermont using the mint letter of Limoges.

M Mint. Marseilles.

N Mint. Montpellier.

T Mint. Saumur using the mint letter of Nantes.

W Mint. Arras using the mint letter of Lille.

Finally, attention is directed to the fact that two eras of reckoning are used in the dating of the coins of the Constitutional series — the Christian era (Anno Domini), and the Bastille (July 14, 1789).

Mr. Deacon's paper was illustrated by a very fine series of coins from the Cabinet of the President (Dr. G. H. Abbott), the exhibit covering the whole period described in the paper. The pieces were arranged in historical sequence and were in exceptionally fine condition.

The President gave a very interesting and instructive address describing the coins comprising the exhibit and it will be seen that their arrangement fits most thoroughly the plan of the paper.

An exceptionally interesting special exhibit by the President comprised three coins of Tomis in the district of Moesia inferior celebrated as the place of exile of Ovid.

A special exhibit by Mr. F. Mills, consisted of a number of medals of historic interest.

The ordinary meeting of the Society was held at the B.M.A. Building 30 Elizabeth Street, Sydney, on Thursday, June 17th, 1926, at 8 p.m.

Dr. G. H. Abbott gave an address of great interest on coins of Agrigentum, Himera and Selinus, with reference to the divine philosopher Empedocles.

The Doctor reproduced the material of a paper read before the Society in 1917 with additions and demonstrations of many coins not exhibited on the previous occasion.

The President illustrated his address with specimens of the beautiful series of coins.

Mr. C. J. V. Weaver read a paper on a French 5 Sol piece of the Terror and an assignat of the period. Illustrated by specimens.

Mr. E. Wills exhibited a wonderful collection of Irish coins in beautiful condition and read an interesting article from a Numismatic publication in connection with his exhibit.

He was congratulated upon the beauty and perfection that is typical of his exhibits.

Dr. G. H. Abbott exhibited a collection of Irish Coins of great variety and interest.

The Doctor also exhibited a very fine specimen of the 5 Sol piece of the Terror in illustration of Mr. Weaver's paper.

Mr. J. P. Marks exhibited an assignat of five livres.

A Meeting to take the place of the Ordinary Meeting was held by the invitation of the President, Dr. G. H. Abbott, at his residence, on Tuesday, 20th July, at 8 p.m.

The object of the meeting was to enable the members to inspect Dr. Abbott's collection of Numismatic books and some other exhibits. The Meeting was well attended and apologies were received from Professor Todd, Mr. R. H. Payntor, the Hon. John Lane Mullins, Mr. A. J. Green, Mr. F. Hills, and Mr. P. J. Marks.

There was a preliminary inspection by the members of some of the doctor's beautiful pictures in which examples of leading Australian artists figured prominently.

A large and varied collection of Numismatic and other books were placed before the members who became enthusiastic in examining the beautifully bound and chastely printed volumes, some of extreme rarity.

Dr. Abbott in handing the books round to members described them generally, and seized upon points of special interest in each volume as was exhibited, and his description enabled the members to appreciate more fully the many instructive and beautiful exhibits placed before them.

Wonder, delight and appreciation were freely expressed by the members in handling the beautiful rarities and contemplating the exquisite art before them.

In their inspection time passed all too rapidly, and at the close of a most enjoyable evening and after light refreshments had been partaken of, Mr. E. Wills moved that a hearty vote of thanks be accorded Dr. Abbott.

This was seconded by Mr. C. J. V. Weaver, and supported by Mr. O. Friend.

Mr. E. R. Moser put the motion which was carried by acclamation. Dr. Abbott suitably responded.

PUBLIC LIBRARY, MELBOURNE.

An Australian correspondent calls our attention to a statement in the report of the Numismatic Society of Victoria in the Numismatic Circular of May stating that no Guide had been appointed for the Numismatic section of the Museum Collections.

He sends us a circular issued by the Trustees of the Public Library showing that Guide Lectures started on the 8th December 1925 and that from that date to the 3rd June 1926, Guide Lectures have been given by Mr. Alfred Chitty in the Coin Room at the Public Library, Melbourne, on fifty days to 2800 visitors, an average of 56 each day. From the 1st May the Coin Room was to be opened from 2 to 4, the first Saturday in each month, no lecture to be given, but Mr. Chitty to be in attendance to show coins and answer any questions.

THE NUMISMATIC SOCIETY OF SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

A Preliminary Meeting was convened by Mr. J. Hunt Deacon, F.R.N.S., and held in the "Dunster Galleries", Adelaide, on Apr. 30th, 1926, to discuss the proposition of the formation of a Numismatic Society in South Australia. There was a fair attendance over which Dr. A. A. Lendon, M.R.C.S., presided.

It was unanimously carried that such a Society be formed and the inaugural Meeting was fixed for June 2nd, 1926.

The Inaugural Meeting of the above Society was held in the Classical Association Room, University, Adelaide on June 2nd, 1926. The following were declared Foundation Members:

Dr. A. A. Lendon, M.R.C.S., Rev. Canon T. H. Frewin, M.A., Mr. C. A. Priaulx, Mr. L. C. Hayter, Mr. E. A. Leeder, Mr. E. F. Crouch, (a past Vice-Pres. of the Num. Soc. of Victoria), Mr. Reg. H. Smith, Mr. J. Hunt Deacon, F.R.N.S., Miss. S. Towler, M.B.N.S., Master M. Bonnin, Master C. Kerr, Master L. Lutz, Master H. A. Stevens.

Dr. A. A. Lendon and Mr. J. Hunt Deacon, F.R.N.S., were elected President and Hon. Secretary and Treasurer, respectively, for the ensuing year.

Letters wishing the new Society every success, and expressing congratulations on the Society's foundation were received from The Numismatic Society of Victoria and from Mr. A. Chitty, M.B.N.S. (Numismatist to the Victorian Museum).

The Inaugural Address took the form of a "Talk on Numismatics" in which the President showed the enormous amount of interest which can be obtained from the study of coins, medals and other objects of numismatic interest.

The Hon. Treasurer announced that the Society started with a credit balance, due to three donations.

The July Meeting of the Society was held at the residence of the President (Dr. A. A. Lendon) North Terrace, Adelaide on the 7th.

Mr. E. A. Kesting and Miss. E. Howell were elected.

An Interesting paper was read by Mr. J. Hunt Deacon, F.R.N.S. on "Coins and their Metals" in which the use of metals and alloys for coining was traced from the first use of metal to the present day. Various kinds of metals were mentioned as being used and the speaker illustrated his paper with some 70 coins from his cabinet.

The remainder of the evening was spent in the examination of various exhibits by the Members.

QUERIES.

A Collector desires information on the curious medal reproduced below:

The same legend: PRAEMIUM EXERCITATIONIS SCIENTIA EST and type, face of the Devil, with the presumed engraver's signature .A.R. below, occur on both obv. and rev. The edge is milled.

Is this one of Auguste Brichaut's productions? Can any one throw light on the meaning of the legend and purport of the medal?

VARIA.

WORTHLESS 50-DOLLAR NOTES.

The attention of the police at Amiens (wires Reuter's Paris correspondent) having been called to the fact that two foreigners had changed at the railway station a 50-dollar bill for the ridiculously small sum of 1,000 fr., and in a neighbouring cafe, a ten-dollar bill for 300 fr., it was found that the notes, issued at Richmond (Virginia) in 1864, had long ago been withdrawn from circulation and were worthless.

The two men, who had a thick bundle of these dollar bills, have disappeared.

NUMISMATICS IN "PUNCH".

Nearly four hundred Roman coins were found in a sand-pit on a Lancashire golf-course. It is thought that they were dropped from the togas of early golfers standing on their heads to express their joy at getting out of the bunker.

 Whilst the Prince of Lorraine was struggling against the powerful armies of France in Alsace, Frederick of Prussia marched into Bohemia and made himself master of Prague. On receipt of this intelligence Prince Charles hastily returned, and compelled Frederick to evacuate Bohemia as speedily as he had over-run it. In the recapture of Prague the Austrian hussars rushed into the city, and made a vigorous and successful onslaught upon the retreating Prussians as shown on these medals: The assistance of Britain consisted of large subsidies granted to the Queen of Hungary.  On account of a slight success of the Highlanders at Falkirk Muir on the 17th January, 1746, which caused considerable apprehension in London, it was decided that the Duke of Cumberland should resume the command of the royal troops in Scotland, and for that purpose he left London hurriedly, and arrived at Holyrood on the 30th January. Retiring north Prince Charles had met with some successes, but these he was unable to turn to any good account owing to the dissensions among his own officers and to the lawlessness of his soldiery. The Duke of Cumberland, who had made Aberdeen his head-quarters for some weeks, at last on the 12th April forded the river Spey, and two days later entered Nairn, his army consisting of 8,000 foot and 900 cavalry. On the 16th April he marched out to attack Prince Charles, who had drawn up his army, numbering about 5,000, on Culloden Moor, his right flank being covered by some straggling park walls and his left resting on Culloden House. The Duke's army was formed in three lines, which the Highlanders attacked with great bravery. The front of the English was forced; but the second, receiving the enemy with a murderous fire, threw them into some confusion. At this moment General Hawley broke down the walls of the park and charged their rear; General Bland at the same time attacking with the cavalry. Assailed on all sides, the Highlanders were thrown into complete disorder and fled. All these circumstances are represented on this medal. The legend, HORÆ MOMENTO (In a moment, Horace, Sat., l. i, 7, 8), alludes to the short duration of the fight. "In one short hour", says Smollett, "all the Prince's hopes vanished and the rebellion was entirely extinguished". Charles himself, with a few followers, fled along the south-east bank of Loch Ness and thence through Glengarry to Long Island. He then escaped to South Uist, and after a series of strange adventures reached France on the 29th September, 1746.

- * The 22nd proceeded to India in 1841, and on arrival was stationed at Kurrachee. In 1813 it formed part of the force under Sir Charles Napier which destroyed the desert stroughold of Emaum-ghur. In quick succession followed the brilliant defence of the Hyderabad Residency by 100 men of the 22nd Light Company, under Captain (afterwards General T.S. Couway, against a force of 8,000 Beluchees; the glorious battle of Meeanee, on 17th February, 1843 when, with 2,000 troops Sir Chas. Napier defeated 22,000 Scindians, and the 22nd, under the gallant Pennefather, the only Queen's regiment present, led the attack; and that of Hyderabad, on the 24th March following when the Ameer's forces, under Meer Shere Mohammed, were utterly routed, the day, to quote the words of Sir Chas. Napier, being decided by the troop of Bombay European Horse Arty. and H.M. 22nd.

AES GRAVE

A Study of the Cast Coinages of Rome and Central Italy

BY

EDWARD A. SYDENHAM M.A.

Quarto, 145 pp., 28 plates, boards, linen back and corners.

The Aes Grave forms the first chapter of the long story of the Roman Coinage but hitherto no complete account of it has been set forth in English. The well known works of Garrucci and Haeberlin are unwieldy in size and almost prohibitive in price. The present study surveys the whole field from a thoroughly scientific point of view, contains a corpus of over 350 pieces, and is illustrated with a series of plates from recent Sale Catalogues which should meet all practical requirements. The price has been put as low as possible, for a work of this class, in the hope that it may reach all who are interested in the fascinating problems of the origins of the famous coinage of ancient Rome.

Just published.

NOTES ON THE MYTHOLOGICAL TYPES ON ROMAN REPUBLICAN COINS.

MYTH OF TYPHON OR TYPHŒUS.

There are denarii of three families bearing the figure of a giant snake instead of legs, viz., Cornelia, Plaetoria, and Valeria.

On denarii of Cnaeus Cornelius Lucii f. Sisenna issued about 100 B.C. (B.M.C., 99 B.C. De Salis; 135, no. 17 of pl. 394) the obverse bears a head of Roma and SISENA with X in front of neck.

On the Reverse, Jupiter in a quadriga to right, casting a thunderbolt to a fallen giant with snakes for legs. CN. CORNEL. L. F. In the field, sun and moon and two stars.

On the Obverse of a denarius of Marcus Plaetorius Cestianus 8 and 9, Babelon, p. 315) is a female head sometimes to right and sometimes to left, perhaps representing Fortuna of Praeneste. On the Reverse, the Pediment of that temple on which is a figure of a snake-legged giant, facing, with arms extended, and underneath AETORI (or PLAETORIVS) CEST. S. C.

III. On a denarius of L. Valerius Acisculus issued about 45 B.C., the Obverse type is a laureated head of Jupiter to right; in a crown or chaplet of laurels, ACISCVLVS; and on the Reverse a figure of the snake-legged giant facing with head turned to right, with the left hand raised over his head and a thunderbolt in the right hand near his waist. B.M.C., Vol. I, p. 536. Babelon calls the giant Valens.

The name Typhoeus is derived from the root TYΦ, or a lengthened form of ΘΥ (θύω). The word τύφος means smoke, and was used metaphorically for the blindness caused by pride or folly. Those who fought against the gods were named the proud mind-beclouded ones.

The smoke of Etna was naturally associated with their defeat. Homer used θύω of the burnt offerings; never for σφάζω to slaughter for sacrifice.

Many are familiar with the word Typhoon given to the hurricanes now as even in the days of Aristophanes who in his play, the Frogs (846), says "bring out a black ram, for a storm (τὸ σῶμα) is about to arise". So Pliny in H. N., II, 48 calls a storm Typhon.

The snakes instead of legs may be emblems of the earth from which he was formed, γῆγενής; used by Plato, Polit. 269 B., of primeval men, then of the Titans and giants, as by Aeschylus.

The earliest form of the legend of a battle with the gods is that found on the Assyrian clay brick tablets in the British Museum, which relate how Apsu and Tiamat plotted against the gods, but were overheard by the god Ea, and the rebellion was crushed. Tiamat however escaped and rebelled again, and she created a brood of terrible monsters. Marduk, the Merodach of the Bible, fought Tiamat in a four-horsed chariot, and slew her, then with one half of her he made the heavens and with the other half the earth. The story is part of the Epic of Creation, written by Babylonian priests in honour of their god Marduk. For details see B. Mus. Guide to Babylonian antiquities.

On the Roman Coins we see the Greek god Zeus in a four-horse chariot hurling his thunderbolt into a monster with snake-like legs. For an early Greek representation of Zeus in a four-horse chariot see Heinrich Haydemann's "Zeus im Giganten Kampf" 1876, and Furtwangler, Tafel 32. The head over the figure with cheeks puffed out, blowing gusts of wind, reminds us of the winds spoken of in the Creation Epic. Hesiod's account of the war with the giants is, in some way, very like that of the Creation tablets, in its reference to storm, wind and upheaval of natural order; the earthquake and storms which brought about the flood are suggested in several forms of the legend.

In some ancient representations of the war between Zeus and the giants, that god is presented as driving a four-horse chariot and destroying the giant having snake-like lower limbs, with a thunderbolt, or waving a whip, the symbol of the lightning flashes. The design of the coin type may have been copied from some sculpture in Rome.

On a vase in Munich, dated about 550 B. C., Zeus appears on foot hurling a thunderbolt at a winged monster with one head and having snakes for legs. The winged giant is evidently copied from some eastern source. The giant is named Typhon, or Typhoeus, by the writers on Numismatics, probably because that name was used as a synonym for giant, as in Lycophron 177, where Achilles is called a Pelasgian giant, and Ovid calls the giant "Typhoeus" in describing the war with the giants. Three myths were confused by the Romans, viz., that of the war with the giants, that of the war with the Titans, and that of Typhoeus buried under Etna.

It is most probable that the myth of a war between God and evil gigantic men was brought from the East, perhaps from Babylon, through Cilicia. Pindar associated Typhoeus with Cilicia. Some connection with the myth in its Babylonian form may be seen in Genesis, VI, 4, "There were giants in the earth in those days"; the Hebrew word translated "giants" is "Nephilim", a word of obscure origin and meaning. The Greek translators used giants, Aquilas ἐπιπρωτονοτες (attackers), Symmachus βίαιαι (mighty ones). The destruction of these by the flood was then described as God's victory over evil mankind.

The same legend is referred to in Wisdom, XIV, 6 "For in the old time also, when the proud giants perished". Also in Ecclesiasticus (XVI, 7) "He was not pacified towards the giants of old time who revolted in their strength". Baruch, III, 26 "These were the giants born of old, great of stature and superb in war... they perished through their foolishness".

In III Maccabees, II, 4 the same legend is told, and in Enoch, VI and XVI the giants are mentioned, and absurd names and numbers given. The myth of the Titans also reminds us of II Peter, II, 4, "For if God spared not the angels when they sinned, but cast them down to Tartarus and committed them to pits of darkness". Confer Homer Il., VIII, 13 seq., the threat of Zeus to cast disobedient gods into Tartarus.

The Nephilim and giants of the O. T. were the ancient races of Palestine in prehistoric days. There is a Jewish legend that Og, the King of Bashan, was the last of that race and that he escaped the flood by clinging to Noah's Ark! Some writers describe Goliath as a survival of these tribes.

The giants are referred to in the Book of Enoch, written during the last two centuries B. C., in which Babylonian influences are clearly marked. The war of the giants is recorded in c. VII, 2, 9, XV, 5, 11, XVI.

Some have thought the legend of the Fallen angels originate the speculations of men concerning falling stars.

The Nephilim were regarded by some later Jewish writers fallen angels because the name is derived from "Naphal" to fall and thought it suggested they fell from heaven. Aquila, who translated the O. T. into Greek, used a word signifying they were giants who "fell upon" men.

Homer seldom refers to these legends; however, in Iliad, X, 277 he describes Hera swearing as Zeus bade her, and calling the gods by name, even those below Tartarus that are called Titans.

In Iliad, VIII, 13, Zeus warned any god not to help either Trojans or Danaans "or I will take and cast him into misty Tartaros, right far away, where is the deepest gulf beneath the earth as far beneath Hades as heaven is high above the earth".

In Iliad, VIII, 481 Zeus threatens to send even Hera to "the Tartarus".

Hesiod appears to be the earliest authority for the legend of Typhoeus, in his Theogony 821. "But when Zeus had driven Titans out from heaven, huge earth bore her youngest born Typhoeus, by the embrace of Tartarus through golden Aphrodite. Then follows a weird description of his hundred heads, fiery eyes and the various noises he made like a bull, a lion, a serpent; evidently the noises of an earthquake or an eruption of a volcano were in Hesiod's mind. Hesiod wrote probably before the Greeks knew Etna.

According to Hesiod Typhon was the son of Typhoeus and father of the winds (307, 869), but later poets confound them.

The early Greek legends are given in the "Library" of Apollodorus Book I, c. VI. He relates that when the gods had overcome the giants, earth, enraged, by intercourse with Tartarus brought forth in Cilicia, Typhoeus, a hybrid between man and beast, as in the thighs of human form, but so large that his head brushed the stars, but from the thighs downward he had huge coils of viper and his body was all winged or feathered.

He attacked the gods, who fled to Egypt but were delivered by Zeus, who after a great fight cast Typhoeus down and placed him upon him. As Apollodorus quoted Castor he must have flourished about the same time, in the first or second century B. C.

Aeschylus in his Prometheus (353 seq.) gives a description of Typhoeus which brings in the Cilician origin of the myths and in some respects reminds us of Hesiod's words, and refers to the giant overthrow under Etna. Prometheus expressed his pity for "the earth born inmates of the Cilician caverns, a tremendous prodigy the hundred headed impetuous Typhon, overpowered by force who withstood all the gods, hissing slaughter from his fearsome jaws, and from his eyes flashed a fierce glare, as though he were perforce overthrow the sovereignty of Zeus; but the sleepless anger of Zeus came upon him... and hurled him from his vaunting boasts, and now is he lying pressed down beneath the roots of Etna".

Ovid in Met., I, 152, "Then the giants aspired to the rule of heaven, and piled the mountains even to the lofty stars: then omnipotent father, hurling his lightnings, broke through Olympus and struck Ossa away from Pelion that lay beneath it". Ovid goes on to ascribe the violence of wicked men to the legend that earth gave life to the blood of the giants and thus formed men.

Ovid in his Tristia, IV, Eleg. 7, said "I will sooner believe the legends of Medusa, the Gorgons, Scylla, Chimaera and the giants with serpents for their feet, than I will believe you changed into serpents ceasing to care for me".

Here Ovid confuses giants with Typhoeus, or uses the word as if Typhoeus was used for a giant; as Lycophron uses the word "Typhoeus" calling Achilles "a Pelasgian Typhoeus", i.e. giant.

Pindar, in Pyth., VIII, 21, seems to distinguish the battle of the giants from the legend of Typhoeus.

Ovid, in Fasti, IV, 490, says "the lofty Etna lies on the side of the gigantic Typhoeus, with whose fiery panting the ground is kindled". There Ovid is following Pindar. The legend about Etna is finely told by Aeschylus. Prom. 351-365.

The Etna story is also told by Pindar in Olymp., IV, 11.

In the second Book of the Dionysias of Nonnus is an elaborate scription of the battle of Zeus with the Titans and in Hesiod's theogony, line 600 seq., is another account of that war. These descriptions of spiritual warfare between good and evil apparently influenced Milton when writing his book on Paradise Lost, in which he mentions Typhoeus. Van Lennep said these rebels were called Titans because one of them, Cronos, stretched forth his hand against his father. The name Titan is derived from the root TAN or TEN, from which are derived, τείνω, τενύω, τεταίνω.

There is in these legends of strife with Zeus evidence that the early races imagined that superhuman forces were engaged in the warfare.

They are witness to the antiquity of the conscience of mankind in the strife between good and evil. However, it is probable that the designers who designed the type on the denarii knew nothing of the origin of the myth; and Cavedoni's idea that the figure of Jupiter on the coin was meant to represent Cornelius Scipio Asiagenus, and that of Typhoeus, Antiochus the Great, seems strange to modern Englishmen.

The subject of the war with heaven was very frequently adopted by sculptors and is also seen on medallions of Antoninus Pius and coins of Diocletian and Maximian. Overbeck has treated the subject in his Griechische Kunst Mythologie, Vol. I, p. 339. Preller also in his Griechische Mythologie, Vol. I, p. 57, may be referred to for further details.

THE COINS OF THE DUTCH EAST INDIES.

An Introduction to the Study of the Series (excluding those specially struck for India and Ceylon)

By SIR JOHN BUCKNILL M.A. (OXON).

48. 1791. One Guilder. D. 32. W. 9.82 to 10.82 (G.).

Similar, generally, to No. 247 but a smaller coin and on the Reverse the figure "I" replaces the figure "3".

There are two main varieties of this coin, i.e. (A) in which the legend on the Reverse is in smaller characters than in (B) in which, also, on the Obverse the jewels on the Crown and the design of the ribbon which binds the sheaf of arrows are different.

There are varieties in the punctuation of which may be mentioned the following combinations. (a) "ORD." with "MUR."; (b) "ORD" with "MUR." and (c) "ORD" with "MUR" on the Obverse and Reverse respectively.

There is little difference in the value of all the above forms.

(V. p. 203 : N. & C. p. 102 : Steph. L. 6087. var. (A); L. 6088. var. (B); L. 6089. var. (C) : Bat. M. C. p. 77 : G. p. 45. L. 776. var. (b). 3s. 4d; L. 775. var. (c). 3s. 4d : S. p. 4. L. 48. var. (A) 2s. 11d; L. 49. var. (B) 2s. 6d; L. 50. var. (c) 2s. 6d.)

49. 1791. Half-Guilder (or Ten Stivers). D. 28. W. 5.07 (G.).

Similar, generally, to No. 248, but a smaller coin, and the figure "I" and letters "GL" are replaced respectively by the figure "X" and letters "St" (i.e. Stivers).

There are at least three well-marked varieties of this coin; i.e. (a) the normal form as above; (b) in which the mint-mark is below the statue on the Obverse and the date is above the Arms on the Reverse and (c) in which the word "TVEMUR" is misspelled "TEVMUR". None of the forms are particularly uncommon.

(V. p. 203. vars. (a), (b), (c) : N. & C. p. 102. vars. (a), (b), (c) : Steph. L. 6090. var. (a); L. 6091. var. (b) : Bat. M. C. p. 77 : G. p. 45. L. 777. var. (c). 2s. 6d : S. p. 4. L. 51. var. (a) 1s. 8d).

The Province struck Doits in many years and in large quantities; the dates known are : 1726, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 44, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57 (?), 58 (?), 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 70, 71, 72, 73, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81 (?), 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93 and 94.

Examples of the years 1726, 32, 37, 38, 64 and 73 are rare.

Proofs in precious metals are singularly uncommon; but examples in silver of the years 1732, 53, 57, 88 and 92 are known. Half-Doits were also struck in the years 1770, 71, 72, 79 (?) and 89 but those of 1789 are only known as proofs and do not appear to have been put in circulation.

The V.O.C. Doits of Zeeland are rather large and are well struck; their diameter runs from about 20.6 to 22.6 millimetres and that of the Half-Doits is about 18 millimetres.

The Doits of the years 1726 to 1729 (inclusive) display the Provincial motto "LUCTOR ET EMERGO"; on some specimens of the year 1792 and on those of 1793 and 1794 there is to be found an ornamental wreath above the mint-mark on the Reverse.

There is an immense amount of minor variation in the Doits of this Province. Netscher and van der Chijs give a list of the Zeeland Doits and Half-Doits and Moquette describes them in minute detail (with no less than 114 figures) in his article "De duiten en halve duiten voor de Vereenigde Oost-Indische Compagnie geslagen in Zeeland" (pp. 1-36 and Pl. 1-4; ff. 1-114); (1907).

250. 1726. Doit. Very rare date.

Rev. The monogram "VJ"; the date, "1726", below; a tower, between two five-pointed stars, above.

(Not in V; or N. & C. Moquette knew of but one example which was in the Stephanik collection; he figures it. Pl. 1; f. 1.)

251. 1727. Doit.

Similar type; but the stars on the Reverse have six points; in some specimens there is a full stop after the word "EMERGO" on the Obverse, but in others it is absent.

252. 1727. Doit.

Same type ; stars with six points and specimens both with and without the full stop after the word " EMERGO ".

253. 1729. Doit. Same type ; stars with five points (M.f. 3).254. 1730. Doit. A new type ; crest and shield much larger and the latter with straight top and sides ; no legend ; stars with six or, rarely, five points. Several minor variations occur (M.f. 4, 5).255. 1731. Doit. Same type as No. 254. Much variation in the figures of the date ; in some specimens the mint-mark lies between two little rosettes (M.f. 12) instead of, as in other specimens, five-pointed stars. There are other minor variations (M.f. 7, 8, 9).256. 1732. Doit. Rare date. Same type ; six-pointed stars. There are minor variations notably in the date figures. Silver proofs (Fonr. L. 390) occur (M.f. 6, 10, 12).257. 1733. Doit. Same type ; in some examples rosettes replace the stars which are six-pointed and, rarely, the stars are found struck over the rosettes. There are several minor variations (M.f. 6, 7, 8, 10, 11, 12).

Fig. 67.

258. 1734. Doit. Same type ; six or, rarely, five-pointed stars ; the date figures show considerable variations (M.f. 5, 13, 14).259. 1735. Doit. Same type ; six-pointed stars ; the date figures vary greatly (M.f. 16, 17, 18, 19).260. 1736. Doit. Same type ; the details of the Crown and the date figures vary greatly (M.f. 15, 16, 20, 21, 22, 25).261. 1737. Doit. Rare date. Same type. Some variation in the date figures. A Half-Doit in the Batavian Museum of this date Moquette regarded (p. 33) as a forgery (M.f. 23).262. 1738. Doit. Rare date. Same type. Some variation in mint-mark and date figures (M.f. 24).263. 1739. Doit. Same type. Some variation in mint-mark and date figures ; some, though rarely, display the figure " 9 " overstruck on the last figure " 7 " of specimens of 1737 (M.f. 25, 26).264. 1744. Doit. Same type ; the lion and date figures show minor variations (M.f. 27, 29, 30).265. 1745. Doit. Same type ; many variations in minor details (M.f. 27, 28, 30, 33, 34).266. 1746. Doit. Same type ; much minor variation (M.f. 28, 31, 32, 35, 36).267. 1747. Doit. Same type ; much minor variation (M.f. 37, 38).268. 1748. Doit. Same type ; much minor variation (M.f. 37, 38, & Pl. 2 ; f. 39).269. 1749. Doit. Same type ; much minor variation (M.f. 15 & Pl. 2 ; f. 39).270. 1750. Doit. Same type ; much minor variation (M.f. 15 & Pl. 2 ; f. 39).271. 1751. Doit. Same type ; some minor variation (M.f. 40).272. 1752. Doit. Same type ; a good deal of minor variation (M.f. 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46).273. 1753. Doit. Same type ; much minor variation. Silver proofs occur (Bat. M.C. p. 78) (M.f. 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51).274. 1754. Doit. Same type ; common date ; much minor variation (M.f. 46, 50, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61).275. 1755. Doit. Same type ; some minor variation (M.f. 52, 56, 61).276. 1756. Doit. Same type ; much minor variation particularly the details of the Crown, the Lion and date-figures ; some though very rarely, show the figure " 6 " overstruck on the last figure " 5 " of coins dated 1755 (M.f. 56, 61 & Pl. 3 ; f. 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69).

Doits dated 1757 and 1758 are included in N. & C's list there was an example of the former date advertised in Schulman's Catalogue No. 13 (1887) and one in the Spink Collection ; but Moquette thinks coins so dated are either forgeries or badly struck ; he figures two such (Pl. 4 ; f. 112, 113). He is also sceptical as to the existence of genuine Doits with the date 1760 (pp. 21, 22).

277. 1764. Doit. Same type ; some minor variations (M. Pl. 3 ; f. 70, 71, 72).278. 1765. Doit. Same type ; much minor variation (M.f. 70, 74, 75, 76, 77).279. 1766. Doit. Same type ; a common date ; much minor variation (M.f. 75, 76, 78, 79).280. 1767. Doit. Same type ; a good deal of minor variation (M.f. 78, 79, 80, 83).281. 1768. Doit. Same type ; some minor variation (M.f. 81, 83).282. 1770. Doit. Same type ; some minor variations (M.f. 83, 84).283. 1770. Half-Doit. Same type as the Doit of similar date. Considerable minor variation.

(N. & C. Pl. 4 ; f. 22^k : M. Pl. 4 ; f. 108, 108^a, 108^b, 109). Half-Doits bearing the dates 1737 and 1782 have been recorded but Moquette (pp. 33, 35) considers that all such are counterfeit ; he figures a forgery of 1737 (Pl. 4 ; f. 111).

Fig. 68.

284. 1771. Doit. Same type ; some minor variation (M.f. 78, 84).285. 1771. Half-Doit. Same type as No. 283. Some minor variation (M.f. 108^a).286. 1772. Doit. Same type. Some minor variation (M.f. 78, 84, 85).287. 1772. Half-Doit. Same type as No. 283. Some minor variation (M.f. 108^a, 109).288. 1773. Doit. Rare date. Same type. Considerable minor variation (M.f. 83-86).289. 1777. Doit. Same type ; some minor variation (M.f. 84, 88). Silver proofs occur (Bat. M.C. p. 78).290. 1778. Doit. Same type ; some minor variation (M. Pl. 4 ; f. 89).291. 1779. Doit. Same type ; some minor variation (M.f. 90).292. 1779. Half-Doit. Same type. Advertised in Schulman's Catalogues Nos 6 (1885) and 8 (1886) ; perhaps forgery.293. 1780. Doit. Same type ; some minor variation (M.f. 91). Netscher and Van der Chijs include the date 1781 in the list but the Doit so dated was not known to Moquette.294. 1784. Doit. Same type ; considerable minor variation (M.f. 92, 93).295. 1785. Doit. Same type ; considerable minor variation (M.f. 94, 95).296. 1786. Doit. Same type ; some minor variation (M.f. 96, 97).297. 1787. Doit. Same type ; some minor variation (M.f. 91, 101, 103).298. 1788. Doit. Same type ; considerable minor variation. Silver proofs (Steph. L. 6272 : Bat. M. C. p. 78 : G. p. 45. L. 778. 8s. 4d) occur but are rare (M. ff. 87, 93, 98, 101, 102a, b, c, d, e, f, g, h).

1789. Doit. Same type; considerable minor variation (M. ff. 59, 100, 101, 103).

1789. Half-Doit. Similar type to No. 283. Only known, apparently, as copper proofs and they were not, it would seem, put into circulation (M. p. 35 and f. 110).

1790. Doit. Same type; considerable minor variation; frequently forged (M. ff. 91, 99, 101, 104^a, 114 (forgery)).

1791. Doit. Same type; considerable minor variation (M. ff. 99, 101, 103, 104^a, 105).

1792. Doit. New types which show considerable differences. In one well-marked form the crown, shield and lion on the Obverse are much smaller than in those of 1791; in others the shield and lion are much as in those of 1791 but the crown is smaller. On the Reverse, in some, the date figures are large and in others very small; in a rare few there appears above the date mark a kind of wreath or string of connected jewels. Silver proofs occur (Bat. M. C. p. 78) (M. ff. 104, 104^a, 104^b, 105, 106).

1793. Doit. Similar type to that of 1792. Several well-marked variations; in some, the shield of the old type; in others of the new small form. On the Reverse the wreath over the mint-mark is, as a rule, large and extends around about half of the coin (M. ff. 105, 106, 107).

1794. Doit. Similar type to preceding; very uniform (M. ff. 105, 106).

d) Province of Gelderland.

All the coinage issued for the Company in this Province was struck at the Town of Hardewijk. Most of the coins display the Provincial Arms and the monogram "V.F.". The mint-marks are personal ones appropriated to the gentlemen who were from time to time Mint-masters and are usually pictorial representations of something suggested by the Mint-masters' names: these marks are:—

(a) A running Fox; the mark of Mons. Jacobus de Vos (the word "Vos" is Dutch for "Fox"): this mark is found on Doits 1730-32.

(b) A somewhat indeterminate object which is usually supposed to represent a Hill or Mountain (though Moquette (p. 23), castically perhaps, suggests it is a prancing horse); the mark of Mons. Johan Hensbergen (the word "Berg" is Dutch for "Mountain"): this mark is found on Doits of 1731 and Ducatoons 1738.

(c) A Crane or Stork: the mark of Mons. Johan Cramer (the word "Kraan" is Dutch for "Crane"): this mark is found on Doits and Half-Doits of 1757.

(d) A tree-trunk with one leafy branch: the mark of Mons. C. Novisadi: this mark is found on the Doits from 1771 to 176.

(e) A Blade or Ear of Corn; the mark of Mons. Marten Hendrik Huse: this mark is found on all the coinage from 1785 onwards. On some of the coins appears the Provincial Motto "IN DEO T SPES NOSTRA" (sometimes in an abbreviated form) i.e. "In God is our hope". On the silver coins there is always to be found as part of the legend the word "GEL" which at once gives clue to their provenance. On the whole, the coins of this Province are less often met with than those of the other Provinces except Friesland. A list of the coins struck at Hardewijk is given by Mons. W. J. de Voogt in his work "Geschiedenis van het Muntwezen der provincie Gelderland [Amsterdam, 1874].

Silver.

The Province of Gelderland produced Ducatoons (dated 1738, 39, 40 and 53 (?)); they are extremely rare: Three Guilder pieces (dated 1786 and 88 (?)): One Guilder pieces (dated 1786 and 90) and Ten Stiver pieces (dated 1786 and 91 (?)); of these coins the least uncommon are those dated 1786.

On all this silver coinage appears as part of the legend the words "GEL. & C. Z.". The word "GEL" is an abbreviation of "GELRIA" (i.e. the Latin for Gelderland): the letter "C" stands for "COMITATUS" (i.e. The County) and the letter "Z" stands for "ZUTPHANIA" (i.e. the Latin for Zutphen).

306. 1738. Ducatoon. D. 42-43. W. 32. 51 (G.).

Obv. Same general type as No. 86 but underneath the horse lies a crowned shield containing the distinctive Provincial Crest i.e. two lions, rampant, facing other but separated by a line. The legend reads "MON(ETA): FCE(DERATARUM): BELG(II): PRO(VINCIARUM): D(UCATUS): GEL(RIÆ). & C(OMITATUS) Z(UTPHANIÆ) IN USUM: SOCIET(ATIS): IND(IÆ): ORIENT(A-LIS)". This may be translated "Coin of the United Provinces of the Netherlands (production) of the Duchy of Gelderland and County of Zutphen, for the use of the East Indian Company". The mint-mark the "prancing horse" of Mons. J. Hensbergen.

Rev. Same type as No. 86.

(V. p. 202: N. & C. p. 100: de Vo. No. 600: Bat. M. C. p. 97: Teyler Museum, Harlem: Fonr. L. 397: Steph. L. 6120: Rynbende. Coll. (1890): Royal Mint Collection, Utrecht: G. p. 43. L. 728. £ 2. 1. 8.)

307. 1739. Ducatoon.

Similar, generally, to No. 306 save for date; but on the Obverse the word "FCE" appears as "FCED".

(V. p. 202: N. & C. p. 100: de Vo. No. 601: Bat. M. C. p. 77: Teyler Museum, Harlem; Schulman. Cat. No. 6 (1885): Rynbende. Coll. (1890).)

308. 1740. Ducatoon.

Similar, generally, to No. 306 save for date. There are two quite distinct forms of the piece of this date:—

(A) As in No. 306 except for date.

(B) Similar but on the Obverse the word "FCE:" appears as "FCED:"; and on the Reverse there is a colon after the word "PARVÆ".

(N. & C. p. 100: Bat. M. C. p. 77: de Vo. No. 602 (A); Teyler Museum (A): de Vo. No. 602^B (B): Teyler Museum (B).)

Netscher and Van der Chijs (p. 100) mention the Gelderland Ducatoon dated 1753: but no such specimen can be traced as existing and Mr. Schulman thinks that no such coin was ever struck.

Fig. 70.

From a specimen in the Royal Coin Cabinet at The Hague.

309. 1786. Three Guilders. D. 41. W. 31, 56 (G.). Obliquely milled edge.

Same type as No. 247 but on the Obverse the mint-mark is the "Ear of Corn" of Mons. M.H. Lohse : and the legend on the Reverse reads "MON(ETA): ARG(EN-TEA): ORD(INUM): FCE(DERATARUM): BELG(II): D(UCATUS): GEL(RIÆ): &: C(OMITATUS): Z(UT-PHANIÆ):" i.e. "Silver coin of the Parliament of the United (Provinces of the) Netherlands : (production of) the Duchy of Gelderland and County of Zutphen".

Netscher and Van der Chijs (p. 100) and, only copying them, de Voogt mentions the Three Guilder piece with date 1788; but no specimen is known and the record is probably an error.

310. 1786. One Guilder. D. 31 to 32. W. 10. 52 (G.).

Similar generally to No. 309 but a smaller coin and on the Reverse the figure "I" replaces the figure "3".

(V. p. 202 : N. & C. p. 101 : de Vo. No. 612 : Steph. L. 6123 : G. p. 43. L. 730. 5 s : S. p. 5. L. 57. 5 s.)

Fig. 72.

311. 1786. Half-Guilder. D. 28 to 29. W. 5. 12 (G.).

Similar, generally, to No. 309 but a smaller coin; and there are certain marked differences : — (a) On the Obverse the mint mark lies on the left side of the female figure's head and not on the right side as in No. 310; (b) the date figures "1786" are removed from the Obverse and placed above the Crown on the Reverse and (c) on the Reverse the figure "X" replaces the figure "I" and the letters "St" (i.e. Stivers) replace the letter "G".

(V. p. 202 : N. & C. p. 101 : de Vo. No. 613 : Steph. L. 6124 : G. p. 43. L. 731. 2 s. 1d : S. p. 5. L. 58. 1s. 8d.)

Fig. 73.

Netscher and van der Chijs mention the Half-Guilder with date 1791 : but no specimen is known and Mr. Schulman thinks that the record is an error.

312. 1790. One Guilder. D. 31. 5. W. 10. 51 (G.).

Similar, generally, to No. 310 save for date; but the mint mark (the ear of corn) is slightly different.

(N. & C. p. 101 : de Vo. No. 620 : Steph. L. 6125 : G. p. 43. L. 732. 5s. od.)

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTICES OF MEDALLISTS

Coin, Gem, and Seal Engravers, Ancient and Modern, with References to their Works.

Most of the previous articles have been revised and republished in the "Biographical Dictionary of Medallists". The references to that work in these supplementary articles will be indicated by the letters "B.D.M." together with the number of the volume and its page.

CATENACCI, VINCENZO (B.D.M., Vol. I, p. 360; Vol. VII, p. 164). A SCIPIONE CATENACCI, of Naples, signed in full, medals of Pius IX and Ferdinand II, Gaëta, 1848; — Prince Francesco Pinto di Iscitella, 1852, and Pilgrims' badge, 1853, with a Madonna.

CHAMP, P. (Brit.). A London Publisher of a medal to commemorate the Centenary of Wesleyan Methodism, October 25th, 1839. W. J. Taylor, London, engraved the dies.

CHAUDUN, M^{lle} GERMAINE CÉCILE MARIE DE (French). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, residing in Paris, 1920. Exhibited at the Paris Salon of that year a Portrait-medal : Pendant la guerre.

CHODZINSKI, KAZIMIERZ (B.D.M., Vol. VII, p. 180). His work include : Portrait-medal of General v. Böhm Ermolli, commemorating the Recapture of Lemberg, 22 June, 1915; iron, 70 mill. — Tadeus Kosciuszko, Polish general (1746-† 1817), 1917; iron 60 mill.

CHRISTY & CO, F. C. (Amer.). Originators of an American Linnaeus medal (in the Collection of C. W. Burmester, of Stockholm).

CI (B.D.M., Vol. I, 1904, p. 430). Of the four medals, which Erman mentions under the monogram CI, that of Paul Breining 1593, is by Matthäus Carl; the rev. is taken from his medal of Karl Sichart.

By the artist CI are :

1590. Veit Pfaut; signed; and Anna Pfaut. Berlin. Munich.

1591. Charles of the Palatinate-Birkenfeld-Zweibrücken; R. AN NO DOMI. MDXCI. Munich.

1600. Andreas Schmidmair; signed. Berlin.

1601. Balthasar Paumgartner. Berlin. Munich.

The same characteristics of style and inscription we find on :

1603. Sigmund Gammersfelder, and 1604. Maria Gammersfelder, Stuttgart.

These two medals Erman brings under CI, which monogram we find on a medal in Berlin of Salomon Schweigger, 1608.

D^r Habich suggests that the monogrammist CI is identical with 4 Erman thinks of Christoph Jamnitzer, the son of Wenzel, but Habich suggests rather a son of Matthäus Carl, Carl junior.

To these belongs probably also :

1601. Nikolaus Ecke, burgomaster of Riga.

CICCARELLI, DOMENICO (B.D.M., Vol. I, p. 182). This signature occurs in conjunction with the two Arnauts and A. Cariello on several medals.

CINGANELLI, P. (B.D.M., Vol. I, p. 434). The medal "Congress of Italian scientists" at Pisa, 1839 has the obv. of the Galilei medal, 1823 (the date erased on some of the medals); the rev.

Nideröst. The same obv. was issued for one of the 300th. Anniversary medals of 1864.

OCHE, CLAUDE DE LA (B.D.M., Vol. I, p. 324). According to er, Monogrammenlexikon, the monogram CDLC represents the ch line-engraver, Claude de la Cloche (cf. Becker-Thieme, VII, p. 110). The oval medal of John Casimir of the Palatin, 1591 occurs also, circular, of 1588. They both imitate John mir's medal by Conrad Bloc, 1578.

The medals signed CDLC are:

94. Frederick IV, von der Pfalz-Simmern; oval.

96. The same; bearded.

99. The same; but with long hair.

501. Similar; smaller; signed C.

502. The same; unsigned.

All these medals are in the Munich Münzkabinett.

DAUTEL, PIERRE VICTOR (B.D.M., Vol. VII, p. 210). Salon, 1920 : A frame of Portrait-plaquettes.

DAUTERT, KARL (B.M.C., Vol. VII, p. 210). Was born in Frankfort o. M., November 27, 1878, where his father was a bank official. Gifted with a keen artistic sense, his inclination led him early to the vocation of a painter. He revealed himself at once as a portraitist and intelligent psychologist. Outside his official tuition, he formed his talent by the direct study of life and no one better than he excelled in catching and expressing the character of a physiognomy, the soul in a look, and the interpretation of a smile. On his father's death, the youth, who had not the advantage of personal means, was fortunate enough to obtain the subvention of a bank to enable him to continue his art studies. He spent from 1900 to 1902 in Berlin and settled again in Frankfort, where he still resides. He has exhibited in Brussels, Darmstadt, Berlin, Munich, Vienna, Ghent and Leipzig, and has obtained many awards.

Dautert's medallic productions include : Dr Ludwig Rottenberg, Kapellmeister of the Frankfort Opera since 1892; plaquettes, 195 × 250 mill., and 75 × 95 mill.; — Prof. Bernhard Scholz, leader of the Hoch Conservatoire in Frankfort; plaquettes, 175 × 210 mill.; — 50 × 70 mill.; — Prof. Bernhard Cossmann, Celloist, † 1910; plaquettes, 185 × 185 mill., and 70 × 70 mill.; — Fedor Mamroth, journalist, † 1907; plaquettes, 100 × 130 mill., and 40 × 50 mill.; — Friedrich V. Schiller; plaquettes, 175 mill., and medal, 60 mill.; — Prof. Dr Moritz Schmidt-Metzler, a famous throat specialist; plaquettes, 190 × 210 mill., and 60 × 70 mill.; — Frau Sada Luise Cowan, writer; plaquette, 160 × 205 mill., Head of a girl, a study from life; plaquette, 150 mill.; — Fräulein Poldi Sangora, Viennese actress; plaquettes, 220 mill., and 60 mill.; — Dr Theodor Neubürger; plaquettes, 180 × 230 mill., and 45 × 60 mill.; — 1907. Dr phil. Carl J. Stephani; 270 × 205 mill.; — 1908. Frau Leni Flinsch-Hauck; — 1909. Prof. Hugo Becker, 295 × 225 mill.; — 1911. Hermann Wronker, 220 × 160 mill.; — Capt. Victor v. Platen; 250 × 187 mill., and 90 × 65 mill.; — The latter's wife; 195 mill.; — The Daughters of Fritz v. Goldammer, 200 × 180 mill., and 66 × 60 mill.; — Ludwig Hermann Reiss, medal, 247 and 60 mill.; — Prof. Dr Lucas v. Heyden, 213 × 163 mill.; — Karl König; — Frau Luise Dautert, the artist's mother; medal, 207 mill.; — 1912. Prof. Dr August Hahn, 170 × 145 mill.; — The children of Dr Robert Kramer, 235 × 212 mill., and 72 × 70 mill.; — Prof. Dr Karl Graebe, medals, 167 mill., and 72 mill.; — Rud. Binswanger, 138 × 130 mill., and 80 × 75 mill.; — Dr Heinrich Rehn, 245 × 190 mill., and 80 × 63 mill.; — 1913. Wm. Booth, General of the Salvation Army, 123 × 87 mill.; — The children of Fr. Schleussner, medals, 238 and 65 mill.; — Friedrich Rössler, plaquettes, 167 × 157 mill.; and 82 × 77 mill.; — Burgomaster Dr Hermann Luppe, 207 × 205 mill.; — Charlotte Uhr, Opera singer; — Alice Rohde, actress, 180 × 140 mill.; — Prince Otto v. Bismarck centenary, 138 × 130 mill., and 80 × 75 mill.; — Hindenburg 172 × 137 mill.; — Frau Mathilde Wallenstein, 190 × 165 mill.; — Dr Heinrich Rehn; — H.E. von Chappuis; — General v. RICHARD III IRISH GROAT OF WATERFORD.

The Richard III Irish Groat of the 3rd coinage, struck at Waterford, which was discovered by Dr. Aquilla Smith in 1858, has long remained the only known specimen. It is now in the Royal Irish Academy Collection in the National Museum of Science and Art, Dublin.

It has been my good fortune recently to discover another, which, owing to faulty labelling, had been concealed under the guise of a Henry VII Groat.

The following is its description: —

Obv. R.../V2DI/GRATI... Within a quatrefoil, a plain shield bearing the arms of England and France on a long cross bottonnée. A beaded circle encloses the quatrefoil.

Rev. CIVIT/ATW/TER...RD. Three broad flat crowns of equal size in pale, on a long cross botonnée, within a double tressure of eight arches. A beaded circle encloses the tressure [Fig. 1].

Weight: 22.5 grains.

According to the standard of 1467 to which it was struck, this is full weight.

The courtesy of Dr. Bremer, Keeper of the Irish Antiquities Division of the National Museum of Ireland, who very kindly had made and forwarded to me impressions of the specimen in his care, has enabled me to compare the two.

The Dublin coin is struck from the same obverse but not from the same reverse die; which fact is interesting and tempts one to suggest that this reverse die may have been scrapped for inscriptional errors, though, of course, accidental muling may account for it.

The legends are:—

Obv. RI.../DV2D./RÆI/ÆRÆX [Fig. 2].

Rev. .QIVITÆ/VVÆ./OOR/FOORD [Fig. 3].

Weight: 22.2 grains.

Dr. Smith assumed that the complete mint name read Wattoorfoord, and commented on the remarkable and unique spelling.

In conclusion, the opinion may be hazarded that other examples of the coin are hidden away in private collections under wrong descriptions. If so, it is hoped that this note may be the means of bringing them to light.

"HANOVER" MEDALS.

On the death of King William the Fourth on June 20th. 1837, the Duke of Cumberland succeeded to the throne of Hanover, Queen Victoria being debarred under the Salic Law which limited the succession to males. The Duke of Cumberland referred to is said to have been very unpopular in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland; and his departure to Hanover was commemorated by the issue of satirical medals struck in brass and similar in size to the British Imperial Sovereign and Half Sovereign, and bearing, on the obverse, the head and truncated neck of Queen Victoria; and on the reverse, an equestrian figure of the new King galloping TO HANOVER, accompanied by a dragon like monster. These medals were manufactured in very large numbers, and were frequently called "Hanover Jacks" being often used by sharpers as "flash" sovereigns and half sovereigns. Some were issued bearing the date 1830 (the year of the accession of King William the Fourth) on the reverse, but were subsequently struck with other dates sometimes on both the obverse and reverse. They were often used as card counters but their manufacture was prohibited by the Counterfeit Medal Act passed in 1883. The writer has seen more than twenty varieties of these pieces.

HENRY GARSIDE.

SOUTH AFRICAN THREEPENCES.

In the year 1925 there were two types of reverse of the Threepence coined in the Royal Mint, Pretoria, for general circulation in South Africa. One bears a wreath formed of two branches of mimosa encircling the numeral 3, the other a new design intended to represent the two great industries of South Africa, Farming and Mining. The flower in the centre of the new reverse design is the Protea, the South African National Flower, and it represents farming, as it is familiar to every farmer in the country. It is an evergreen shrub very similar to the British Rhododendron. The three bundles of wood around the flower represent mine props. I am indebted to Mr. George Kruger Gray, of London, for kindly sending me information concerning the design of the first type of reverse.

GIFT TO THE BRITISH MUSEUM.

THE WEIGHTMAN COLLECTION OF ENGLISH COINS.

The English series of coins in the British Museum has received an important addition in the form of a selection of some 900 coins given by Miss Ruth Weightman from the celebrated collection of English copper coins and patterns formed by her late uncle, Surgeon Captain A.E. Weightman, R.N., in fulfilment of his expressed desire. The collection considerably strengthens a series in which the Museum has never been able to compete with the private collector, and gives it the finest coins that have appeared in the saleroom in the last half century, from such famous collections as the Montagu, Hoblyn, Brice and Caldecott. The Weightman gift illustrates the history of copper currency and small change in England from the time of Elizabeth, when the suggestion of issuing copper 'pledges' or tokens was first made. The collection contains no less than ten of patterns for the proposed small change of Elizabeth including the excessively rare TURRES LONDINENSIS piece. It was not till the reign of James I that a copper coinage was issued, not however officially. The patent to issue farthings was granted to Lord Harrington in 1613, the profits being shared with the King. The late Captain Weightman specialised in this series, and several hundred varieties are now added to the National Collection, including a strip of nine in the original block of copper showing the method of striking. The collection is equally rich in the similar pieces issued in the reign of Charles I, in whose reign the patent was held by the Dowager Duchess of Richmond and Sir Francis Cranfield. The rare patterns of the Commonwealth and of Oliver Cromwell are also well represented, in copper and lead, "FOR NECESSARY CHANGE" or "FOR THE RELIEF OF THE POOR".

Copper coinage proper dates from the reign of Charles II, who introduced the familiar Britannia type of half pence and farthing in 1672. The varieties of these are well represented in the Weightman collection; but more important are the patterns struck before the type was finally adopted. James II's halfpence and farthing were of tin with a plug of copper in the centre, as were the early issues of William and Mary, copper issues were resumed in 1690 and continued till 1860, when bronze took its place. The penny in copper was not issued till the end of the XVIIIth century. Proposals to change the reverse type in Queen Anne's reign produced a number of patterns, several new varieties of which the Museum now acquires. Towards the end of the XVIIIth century a large number of new designs for the copper coinage were produced by various engravers.

Of these pieces, important for the history of the English coinage, some 150 new varieties have been added to the National collection by Miss Weightman's gift. In conclusion we may mention a fine series of pattern coins of Queen Victoria's reign and a few silver coins, including a series of South Sea Company issues of George III and a very fine Gothic crown of Victoria.

OBITUARY.

SIR JOHN BUCKNILL.

is Honour Sir John Bucknill, K.C., Puisne Judge of the Patna Court since 1920, died on Tuesday night at his home at 1a.

Mr John was an enthusiastic ornithologist. He was a Fellow of Zoological Society and a member of the British Ornithologists' Club. His publications include "The Birds of Surrey" (1901) "The Ornithology of Cyprus" (1910). In 1914 he published the Imperial Ottoman Penal Code.

Morning Post, 8 Oct. 1926.

We deeply regret to report the death of our esteemed contributor, of which we have no further information at present than the notice.

QUERIES.

Correspondent writes :
I should be glad of information relative to the comparative depreciation of the coinage of various countries from the earliest times. It has been stated that the depreciation in the English Coinage has been slight compared with what has taken place in some countries. To indicate clearly my line of thought, may I ask if the Italian lire of to-day represents a pound in some earlier Italian or Roman currency? Perhaps you would through your "Circular" tell me where the information I may be obtained.

NUMISMATIC SOCIETIES, MUSEUMS, ETC.

ROYAL NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

At the Annual Meeting in June the following officebearers were elected.
President : Professor Sir Charles Oman ; — Vice-Presidents : Sir John J. Evans, and George F. Hill, Esq. ; Treasurer : Mr. Percy Webb ; — Secretaries : Messrs John Allan, and Frederick A. Wall, Esq. ; — Foreign Secretary : Mr. George, C. Brooke ; — Librarian : Mr. L. A. Lawrence ; — Members of the Council ; Mr. V. B. Crowther ; Lady Evans ; Miss Helen Farquhar ; Messrs Henry Garside ; William Gilbert ; G. C. Haines ; Harold Mattingly ; Lieut.-Col. H. W. Hierson ; Rev. Edgar Rogers ; and Mr. F. S. Salisbury.
Oct. 21. Percy H. Webb, Esq., Treasurer, in the Chair.

Miss Mildred Seaby and Monsieur Claudius Côté were elected Fellows of the Society.

Mr. A. H. Baldwin exhibited a 20 peso gold piece of Guatemala of 1888 with an unpublished type of obverse (by Frener).

Mr. Fredk. A. Walters, F.S.A. showed two medallions of Probus (one in electrotype) and three second brass and four quinarii all in very good condition.

Mr. L. A. Lawrence, F.S.A., showed a Sulla's dream denarius showing the reverse type in fine detail; and a Henry VI noble of the annulet type of ordinary type with a trefoil in the second quarter of reverse, and a lion's head; and an unidentified silver medal with a head of Mephistopheles and the legend "Praemium exercitationis scientiae : A. R." on both sides, which he desires to have attributed.

Mr. William Gilbert showed a second brass of Faustina Junr. (Cohen 112), with reverse, a brockage before the reverse type was struck on it, and a second brass of Manlia Scantilla from the Feuardent Sale (Sotheby Nov. 1925) lot 166. Mr. P. Thorburn exhibited a farthing, obverse of George II, George III, 1771, hollowed out to hold a $\frac{1}{4}$ guinea of 1722.

Mr. B. A. Seaby exhibited a series of large gold and silver coins of the Empire of Austria and a badge of Gustavus Adolphus.

Mr. V. J. E. Ryan exhibited some rare and unpublished Roman coins, including an aureus of Vespasian and Titus, from the Helbing Sale of Oct. 12, 1926, lot 1445, and two medallions of Hadrian.

Mr. L. A. Lawrence showed a series of Roman coins to illustrate the types of 'Hilaritas' and 'Laetitia' in connection with Mr. Mattingly's paper.

Mr. Webb showed a series of coins of Probus to illustrate the classification of his issues to their mints.

He then read a short paper on the difficulties of the attribution of the coins of Probus to their correct mints. He referred to the enormous number of varieties of antoniniani of the reign which have been recorded, and pointed out that the variation did not, to any great extent, arise from the use of numerous reverses, as, taking all the personifications of one deity, virtue, etc., as comprised in one main type, there are only about 40 different types.

The variations arise rather from the considerable number of obverse legends and busts employed during the reign and from the numerous issues which were made by several of the mints during the period of six years for which it lasted.

The difficulties of attribution are much increased in consequence of the abandonment of the central mints of their former practice in mint marking.

In Rome, the mark of value XXI disappeared. Ticinum which had used T or TI in the previous reign, without a mark of value, abandoned that mark, reverted to its older system, and used XXT during the early part of the reign, but afterwards employed the mark XXI.

At Siscia, Greek numerals combined with XXI were introduced, and an even more startling innovation took place, owing probably to some temporary closing of the mint of Serdica and the transfer of some of its officers to Siscia. The mark of value, KA, which had hitherto been confined in Europe to Sercica, now appears at Siscia, coupled with Latin numerals in field or exergue indicating the officinae. We had his reasons for agreeing with Professor Alföldy and others on this point. He also discussed the attribution sought to be made to Ticinum of a series bearing Greek numerals preceding XXI but was unable to accept the correctness of this attribution.

Mr. H. Mattingly read a paper on "Hilaritas". He began by examining the type of Hilaritas, with its companion type, Laetitia, and rejecting the view of Froehner that Hilaritas and Laetitia were not Roman goddesses of minor rank. The sporadic occurrence of Hilaritas on coins suggested something more than a vague general significance, and a more particular reference was found to the 'Hilaria', the great spring festival of rejoicing in the cult of Cybele. The special appropriateness of this reference was then pointed out for particular issues of Hadrian, Commodus and Didia Clara. The excesses of Elagabalus involved the worship of Cybele in disgrace and led to the banishment of Hilaritas from Roman coins. She only reappears on coins of the Gallic and British Emperors whose subjects, as inscriptions prove, were devoted to the worship of Cybele. A more summary review of the 'Laetitia' type suggested that sometimes, at any rate, references to festivals of rejoicing in honour of Ceres or Isis (the sea festival of March 5th) are in view.

The emotional Eastern religions may, then, have left a deeper mark on Roman coins than at first appears.

KENT NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

The opening meeting of the Winter Session took place on Friday evening last at the Maidstone Museum, with the Mayor of Maidstone presiding; when the President of the Society, J. Shirley-Fox Esq., R.B.A., F.R.N.S., gave a most interesting lecture on "Some Plantagenet Problems", which he illustrated with blackboard sketches. Commencing with an explanation of how the dies for the early coinage were made by means of small punches of various shapes, the lecturer proceeded to explain how he was at present engaged in the study of the dates of Plantagenet coins by means of variations in the privy marks, which were altered every three months at the trials of the Pyx. At the conclusion of the lecture the president offered a collection of coins as a prize for the best essay written on various coins which he would provide for the purpose. On the proposition of Mr. Risch a hearty vote of thanks was accorded to the lecturer. The following coins, etc., were exhibited: — By the President, the silver medal of the Royal Numismatic Society awarded to him and his late brother, H. B. Earle Fox Esq., in 1920; a series of all the types of Florin pennies including London, Canterbury, Durham, Reading and York; a complete set of the halfpennies struck during the same period (1344-51); four groats of Edward III of the 1351-60 period, each one having on the reverse a small cross among the pellets in the CIVI. TAS. LON. and DON. quarters respectively; and five groats of Henry VI all from the same obverse die with mint mark cross voided and a small leaf below the bust, the reverses all different. NUMISMATIC SOCIETY OF VICTORIA.

The Society has been for some time seeking new rooms for their monthly meetings which would give more accommodation for members. These have now been secured in the building of the S.P.C.A. at 200 Swanston Street, Melbourne.

Here the August meeting was held on Monday 2nd inst., and was made the occasion of a formal opening. There was a large attendance of members many visitors being also present by invitation and apologies were received from others, unable to be present. The usual formal business was postponed and the evening devoted to an exhibition of coins and a series of lectures on the exhibits displayed. Several questions were asked by visitors concerning the coins, who took a keen interest in the proceedings, and the necessary information given by members.

The President A. S. Kenyon Esq., M.I.E., presided and in welcoming the visitors referred to the archaeological and historical aspect of Numismatics, referring to the origin of coinage and the various methods of coining. He then read a short paper giving a story of "Scottish Coinage". Reference was made to the slavish imitation at first of the English types with the gradual deteriorations in values, until in the time of James VI the rate was finally fixed at twelve to one. The periods traversed extended from Malcolm III to William II and Mary II and specimens were discussed in detail including copper, billon, silver and gold. Some tokens of towns were also shown.

He then called upon the members in the following order: E. S. Anthony, A. I. C. A., who gave an interesting address on "Roman Imperial Coins"; F. Gardner a short paper on "English Silver Coins" from the Conquest to George III; P. C. Clement, "Medals Decorative and Commemorative" from early to modern times; F. H. Schafer "Unusual Currencies" including Chinese, Siamese and many examples of articles used as currency among natives of the Pacific Islands and other uncivilised peoples; R. H. Clarke described a large collection of gold and silver pieces both British and foreign. Mr. Gardner described several dies kindly lent by Messrs Stokes & Son Pty. Ltd., which included those prepared by W. J. Taylor for the 10z. and $\frac{1}{2}$ oz. Port Philip Gold pieces, the medal commemorative of the visit of the Duke of Edinburgh in 1871 and several token dies.

A vote of thanks was passed to Messrs Stokes & Sons Pty. Ltd., for their kindness in exhibiting these valuable relics of early Victorian days.

Mr. A. J. Mullett (late Government Printer), note printer to the Commonwealth Government, moved a vote of thanks to the president and members and expressed his great interest in the various papers read which he was sure were enjoyed by all. He suggested that Mr. Harrison (assistant Government note printer) should read a paper at a later meeting. The motion was supported by Sir Edward Mackenzie-Mackenzie and carried with acclamation.

Exhibits.

A. S. Kenyon: Collection of Scottish coins from Malcolm III to James VI.

Messrs Stokes & Son Pty. Ltd., several dies including those for 1 oz & $\frac{1}{2}$ oz Port Phillip Gold pieces, Duke of Edinburgh medal, and token dies among which was one of the well-known "In Vino Veritas" reverses.

E. S. Anthony: a selection of Roman Imperial coins in silver and bronze.

P. C. Clement: a collection of commemorative medals both ancient and modern.

F. H. Schafer: Curious currencies of several kinds.

R. H. Clarke: Gold and silver coins British and foreign.

Sir Edward Mackenzie-Mackenzie: Swedish daler by Von Gorst: obv. The God Saturn passing to the left lightly draped, with scythe over left shoulder, and bearing infant on right arm; "Saturnus" above, date in exergue 1718: Rev. circular garnished shield bearing letters I DALER S. M., F. D. C. state.

In connection with some notes by Mr. J. H. Deacon, vice-president, he requests that members exhibit Australian penny (1911-1915); English penny (1911-1915) 10 centimes of France 1872, 1912, and 1917 (nickel) 5 cents Belgium 1835, 10 centesimi, Italy 1922; South African Republic penny 1898. Guernsey, 4 doubles 1831 or later; Jersey 1/24 shilling 1923, and Tetradrachm of Syracuse or some fine artistic Greek coin.

VARIA.

THE THREEPENNY PIECE. TO THE EDITOR OF THE MORNING POST.

Sir,—In your issues of round about August 5, I notice a campaign being waged against the threepenny piece—alias The "Ticky" of our World.

Let me inform those of whom Kipling wrote "What should the know of England who only England know," that throughout the whole of the Union of South Africa, Northern and Southern Rhodesia, and the Gold Coast Colony the "Ticky" is the penny of the country.

Coppers are not known out here.—Yours, &c.

W. A. BARKLEY,
Commander, R.N.

Urie Farm, Monze, Northern Rhodesia, Sept. 10.

ROMAN COINS FOUND.

Mr. Richardson, Coroner for North Westmorland, held an inquest at Mallestang yesterday afternoon on Roman coins found last month at Mallerstang Fell.

John Kerr said that when looking for coal he dislodged a stone beneath which he found 128 Roman coins.

The jury found that the coins were treasure trove, and the Coroner said the thanks of the country were due to the finders for their honesty. The Treasury would hand the coins to the British Museum or local societies.

CANUTE.

A.D. 1020-1035.

Cnut was the son of Svend, King of Denmark, who had obtained part of England, and forced Aethelred to take refuge in Normandy. He succeeded his father in 1013, but to maintain his authority in England he was involved in an arduous struggle with Aethelred and subsequently with the latter's son, Edmund Ironside. Ultimately on the death of Edmund in 1016 Cnut obtained possession of the whole kingdom, which he held until his death in 1035.

MEDALS COMMEMORATIVE OF BRITISH HISTORY.

Medals relating to the exploits of Admiral Edward Vernon in 1739-1741.

The King of Spain having refused to pay the indemnity of £95,000 as stipulated by the Convention of El Pardo, and the Guarda Costas having continued to seize British vessels and by that means to paralyse the commerce of Great Britain, war was declared against Spain on the 19th October, 1739; and in the same year two squadrons were ordered to be equipped, their destination being the South American Colonies, which it was thought would offer an easy conquest and a rich booty. The squadron under Commodore Anson was to sail round Cape Horn and rifle the shores of Peru; the other under Admiral Vernon was to attack Porto-Bello (Puerto-Bello), a maritime town on the north side of the Isthmus of Panama, which was the most convenient asylum of the Guarda Costas, the chief cause of the war. Admiral Vernon, in the course of a debate in the House of Commons, during which he strongly urged that active measures should be taken to stop the injuries done to English shipping by the Spaniards, declared that "If once Porto Bello and Carthage were taken, then all will be lost to them". In consequence it was decided by the King and Privy Council to carry out the plan of campaign that Vernon advised. He was appointed Vice-Admiral of the Blue, and Commander-in-Chief of a squadron ordered to the West Indies. This furnished Vernon with a total command of 3,680 men and 550 guns, all told. The squadron weighed anchor on the 23rd July at Spithead, but in consequence of contrary winds, it did not reach Jamaica till the 23rd October. Admiral Vernon, who had been a most violent opponent of the Ministry, had somewhat rashly declared in the House of Commons that he could take Porto-Bello with six ships, and when the opportunity was given him he practically succeeded. Commodore Charles Brown was his second in command, and led the attack at Porto-Bello. The principal events of this expedition were: (1) the capture of Porto-Bello, 22 November, 1739; (2) the bombardment and capture of 'Fort Chagre', 24 March, 1740; and (3) the taking of Carthage, 1 April, 1741. To these may be added the proposed attack on Havana, July, 1741.

Although nearly two years intervened between the first and last of these undertakings, the medals which commemorate them have been placed together; because they form one continuous series and were considered less commemorative of the successes of the enterprise than expressive of the universal feeling of anger against the Ministry of the day, who were charged with having long allowed the Spaniards to insult and plunder our merchants and interrupt our trade without any effectual attempt at resistance. Sir Robert Walpole was the object of general unpopularity, but the Duke of Argyle was popular because, having joined the Opposition, he was deprived of all his employments. Vernon was exalted as a hero; the freedom of London and of other cities was presented to him; his birthday was celebrated; his portrait adorned tavern-signs, drinking-cups, and buttons; he was elected representative for Rochester and Ipswich; and a very extensive series of medals was struck to testify the enthusiasm of the people.

The issue of these medals is generally, and on good grounds, attributed to Edward Pinchbeck, the eldest son of Christopher Pinchbeck (1670-1732) toy-man, clockmaker, and inventor of the copper and zinc alloy called after his name.

AES GRAVE

A Study of the Cast Coinages of Rome and Central Italy

BY

EDWARD A. SYDENHAM M.A.

Quarto, 145 pp., 28 plates, boards, linen back and corners.

The Aes Grave forms the first chapter of the long story of the Roman Coinage but hitherto no complete account of it has been set forth in English. The well known works of Garrucci and Haeberlin are unwieldy in size and almost prohibitive in price. The present study surveys the whole field from a thoroughly scientific point of view, contains a corpus of over 350 pieces, and is illustrated with a series of plates from recent Sale Catalogues which should meet all practical requirements. The price has been put as low as possible, for a work of this class, in the hope that it may reach all who are interested in the fascinating problems of the origins of the famous coinage of ancient Rome.

Just published.
